LITVINOV, RUSS ENVOY, GREETED BY ROOSEVELT

Recognition Parley Begins Today.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

(Picture on Back Page.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—With the stage apparently all set for the recognition of the communist government of Russia, Soviet Commissar Maxim Litvinov was received by President Roosevelt at the White House tonight.

The meeting of the Russian commissar of foreign affairs with the American President was brief and formal, a mere social prelude to the negotiations on the establishment of diplomatic relations between the U. S. A. and the U. S. S. R. for the first time since the communists set up their government and repudiated Russian obligations to America in 1918.

Rotund, jolly Mr. Litvinov, informally attired but observing all the diplomatic forms, made a courtesy call at the White House and was welcomed by Mr. Roosevelt with the same informality.

Negotiations Begin Tomorrow.

The negotiations will begin at the state department tomorrow morning and continue through the day with time out only for a luncheon which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will give for the Russian envoy. After both sides have explored each other's mind for a day or two the bargaining will be brought to a close by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Litvinov in person.

It is expected that the negotiations will be concluded on Thursday or Friday, and public announcement made of their outcome. The well-nigh universal opinion of Washington officialdom is that recognition of the soviets by President Roosevelt is virtually a foregone conclusion.

State department officials have been concerning themselves with the procedure of recognition, in anticipation of this outcome, and have been looking over the timber for first American ambassador to the U. S. S. R. Many think that John V. A. MacMurray, minister to the Baltic states, will be given the post and that this former minister to China was sent to the Baltic with that possibility in view.

Bullitt Wants the Job.

But the man who will nurse the deepest sorrow if he fails to land the job is William C. Bullitt, special assistant to the secretary of state, who has been the chief promoter of Russian recognition in the administration and has handled the negotiations for the President beginning with conversations with Commissar Litvinov at the economic conference at London last summer.

Friends of Prof. John Clark of the University of Denver, who was once president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, are positive that he has been offered the place.

The American Federation of Labor, the American Legion, and the Civic federation are actively fighting recognition of a régime which is dedicated to the overthrow by force of the form of government established in the United States and other countries. They have delegations on the scene prepared to labor with the President against the contemplated step. The Roman Catholic church also is opposing recognition because of the anti-religious stand of the soviets.

Result Not Doubted.

Despite such organized opposition, the belief widely held here is recognition virtually was agreed to by the Roosevelt administration in the preliminary interchanges between Washington and Moscow and that otherwise Mr. Litvinov would not have been sent here to meet the President.

Recognition has been withheld for fifteen years because the soviet government persisted in repudiation of the war debt arising from the loans the United States made to the Kerensky government, which preceded the soviet régime, refused to indemnify American citizens whose properties in Russia were confiscated by the communists, and declined to refrain from plotting the overthrow of the American form of government.

It is ostensibly to thresh out these differences between the two countries to discover whether there is ground for a settlement warranting recognition that the negotiations have been arranged. The President, in announcing the step, wanted it distinctly understood that he is not committed to

TAMMANY HIT BY LA GUARDIA'S EASY VICTORY

BULLETIN.

New York, Nov. 7.—(Special.)—With the total city vote of 2,112,146 fully counted, the standing of the three leading mayoralty candidates was as follows:

F. H. La Guardia (Rep.)..858,551
Joseph V. McKee (Rec.)...604,045
John P. O'Brien (Dem.)....586,100

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Tammany suffered its worst defeat in twenty years at the polls today. It was a Republican victory.

Maj. Fiorello H. La Guardia, former Republican congressman, swept into the mayoralty and captured control of the board of estimate, which holds the purse strings on the city's $554,000,000 budget. He will take office as mayor on Jan. 1.

La Guardia's victory by a plurality of 254,506 votes over both Mayor John P. O'Brien, Tammanyite, and Joseph V. McKee, Farley-Roosevelt-Recovery candidate, was hailed as a smashing triumph for the Republican party in this city.

Complete Vote by Boroughs.

Manhattan	191,884	197,779	122,621
Bronx	93,456	150,747	129,556
Brooklyn	193,093	329,203	193,137
Queens	91,693	153,954	140,508
Richmond	15,674	26,868	18,223
Totals	586,100	858,551	604,045

Solomon, Socialist, received 63,450 votes.

Backed by Republicans.

La Guardia ran as a "fusion" candidate, but his organization support came almost wholly from the Republican party. His chief fusion backer was Samuel Seabury, who conducted the state legislative investigation. That inquiry led to the forced resignation of the play boy mayor, James J. Walker, and to disclosures which aroused the people of this city to a white heat against Tammany evils and extravagance. Outside of Seabury, La Guardia's backing came from Republican leaders, such as W. Kingsland Macy, state chairman; Ogden L. Mills, former secretary of the U. S. treasury; Charles H. Tuttle, former U. S. district attorney, and former candidate for governor, and from Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university.

Breaks Tammany's Power.

In a statement given out as soon as the result became decisive, Charles H. Tuttle, chairman of the Republican city-wide committee sounded the keynote of this feeling when he said:

"The Republican Fusion triumph accomplishes the destruction of the whole Tammany system; it rebukes the arrogant attempt of Washington personages to dictate to the people of this city; it opens to the Republican party in this municipality further opportunities for constructive public service. The Republican party unselfishly aided in the formation of the fusion ticket, composed mainly of representatives of other groups and loyally supported the whole fusion cause. The result proves that unselfish service to the people is always the best politics."

Calls It New Epoch.

Kingsland Macy, Republican state chairman, said:

"The triumph of Maj. La Guardia after such a bitter campaign, marks an epoch in city government. Only a few months ago many intelligent citizens believed it impossible to uproot an organization so thoroughly embedded in power and intrenched by years of wasteful, extravagant, and corrupt expenditures of the people's money. The injection of Mr. McKee by Postmaster General Farley was an unlooked for blow to the forces of decency and honesty; but the people, thoroughly aroused, were not to be deterred or befogged."

The national political tinge was

Relief Bonds Pass House by 103-45 Vote

BY PARKE BROWN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Gov. Horner's 30 million dollar winter charity plan was passed by the house of representatives today with the two-thirds vote necessary for emergency enactment.

All there is to do now to bring the six bills embodying the plan before the governor is to effect the concurrence of the senate in amendments to two measures adopted by the house since they passed the senate three weeks ago.

Those changes, it is believed, are not subject to controversy. So the only task left is that of bringing to Springfield 34 of the 36 senators who voted for the bills in the original form. Telegrams and long distance pleas for senate attendance are being hastened tonight.

Lantz Bills Slaughtered.

Before the house took its decisive action it demonstrated that it was unalterably opposed to two of the three counter-proposals that originated with the Republican downstate minority, and the third one, the Lantz plan for direct relief taxation by cities and villages, was slaughtered by its own sponsors. They struck the Lantz bills from the calendar.

Seen from another angle, the result of today's work in effect marks the termination of the real work of the first special session of the assembly. It is believed the house attendance tomorrow will not reach a quorum and that when the senate meets it will not act on any measures except the two relief bills sent back to it.

Second Special Session Next.

Thereafter the way will be open for the second special session which Gov. Horner says he will call primarily to enact post-prohibition liquor legislation and to consider some other subjects he selects out of the two-score he has been urged to include in his call. He was not ready tonight to say on which of the many requests he will act favorably or to name the date for the second extraordinary meeting. But it is believed that he will specify Nov. 21 in his call.

More than ever the thirty million dollar plan, providing for the issuance of state referendum bonds to be financed by diversion of gas tax funds becoming due to cities and counties that receive aid from this source, was acknowledged today as the Horner plan because of the part the governor played in the final day's argument.

It was played by proxy, and with-

NO COMMENT BY ROOSEVELT ON DAY'S ELECTIONS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt noted in silence tonight mayoral elections which brought defeat to Democratic candidates in New York and some other major cities and the prohibition vote which saw a breaking of the line of successive states favoring repeal.

Mr. Roosevelt had carefully refrained from associating himself with the New York and other contests. But his national party chairman, James A. Farley, who is also New York state chairman, aligned himself with Joseph V. McKee, who was defeated in the three-cornered New York City contest by Fiorello H. La Guardia.

The President was kept informed of election returns throughout the early part of the evening. He had no comment.

Revolt Flares Anew in Cuba; Bomb Havana

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, Nov. 8 [Wednesday.]—Revolt flared up anew in Havana this morning when the ABC uprising, which was reported to have been scheduled for midnight, began just two hours and thirty minutes behind schedule.

At that time three airplanes circled the city and loosed a number of bombs upon Camp Columbia, the headquarters of Col. Fulgencio Batista, the army's chief of staff. It was reported that the presidential palace was to be bombed next, although President Grau San Martin was not there, but at his home in 17th street.

8,000 Rebels Mobilize.

The revolutionists are said to have at their disposal a force of from 6,000 to 8,000 men in and around Havana. In addition to this force, armed with rifles landed recently in Santiago and sent overland to Havana, they are reported to have several units of the air corps.

Behind the revolt move are said to be a number of former army sergeants who are bent upon returning former President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes to office.

Anti-Aircraft Guns in Action.

As the correspondent is writing this dispatch bombs dropped from the airplanes overhead are exploding in the city and two batteries of government anti-aircraft guns have just opened fire upon the planes.

Shooting is reported all over the city, but it is impossible to tell as yet the progress that has been made by the new revolution.

Today's outbreak marks the third revolt in the last two months. On Aug. 12 President Gerardo Machado was ousted by a revolt of the army, climaxing long continued revolutionary activities.

POLICEMEN DON'T FRET OVER THIS KIND OF MURDER

A telephone report to the East Chicago avenue station that there was a murder in the tavern at 500 North Franklin street sent three squads of policemen to the scene late last night.

On a table lay a prostrate figure. Gingerly one of the policemen turned it over. Then he grinned. The other policemen looked and grinned, too, and so did Gus Corsiglia, owner of the place, and several patrons.

The figure on the table was an effigy of "Old Man Prohibition." It was Corsiglia's way of celebrating repeal, and the police told him that this kind of a "murder" was all right with them.

Final Ratification by Conventions Next Month.

The thirty-sixth state voted for the adoption of the twenty-first amendment yesterday and by that action sounded the knell of the eighteenth amendment and prohibition in the nation. There now remains only the formality of repeal conventions to be held early next month by several states.

Six states voted yesterday. It required only three of them to vote for repeal to make certain the end of prohibition. But because North and South Carolina voted dry, and because Kentucky will not count its vote until 10 o'clock today, Utah took the spotlight as the returns came in last night.

Result Hung on Utah.

There was no doubt about the result in Pennsylvania and Ohio, birthplace of the Anti-Saloon league, after the first precincts began to report. Both went overwhelmingly wet. It was three hours later before the polls closed in Utah.

The first scattering precincts from Utah were wet. Likewise were the next bulletins. Then the news settled down to a steady report of a substantial margin for repeal. Utah thus became the "thirty-sixth state."

Dry Era Ends Dec. 5 or 6.

The legal date of the end of prohibition will be either Dec. 5 or 6 depending on how the count today shows Kentucky voted. Kentucky's convention is Nov. 27. Maine's is on Dec. 6, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Utah have conventions scheduled for Dec. 5. If Kentucky is for repeal, Maine's ratification is unnecessary and ratification will be completed on the day before its convention is held. Otherwise Maine's ratification on Dec. 6 will be needed. Maine voted to ratify the 21st or repealer amendment on Sept. 11.

Thirty-three states without a break had voted in favor of repeal previous to yesterday. The two Carolinas became the only states on record against it.

The Latest Returns.

UTAH.

OHIO.

PENNSYLVANIA.

NORTH CAROLINA.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

KENTUCKY.

UTAH

Salt Lake City, Utah., Nov. 8 [Wednesday]—(AP)—Returns from more than half the state's precincts early today gave nearly a 1½ to 1 margin for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and apparently made Utah the 36th and deciding state in determining the nation's stand on prohibition.

The vote from 499 of 798 precincts showed:

Dry Leader Concedes Defeat.

John F. Bowman, head of the prohibition forces in the state, said:

"It looks like the wets have won. We consider that the liquor question is still with us and is in no way solved by the repeal of national prohibition."

The returns also showed a vote of 55,566 for repeal of the state prohibition amendment and 35,741 against it.

Repeal of the state amendment would make effective next Jan. 1 an act of the last legislature legalizing the manufacture and sale of 3.2 beer, but otherwise would leave in effect the state's prohibition law passed before the adoption of the state prohibition amendment.

Urges Special Session.

Hailing the early result as indicating a sure repeal victory, Clarence Bamberger, state commander of the Crusaders, repeal organization, said:

"In view of this large decisive vote I trust Gov. Blood will see fit to call a special session of the legislature to enact the necessary law to give us a controlled liquor traffic."

One of the surprises was in the vote from Beaver county in the southwestern part of the state, the home of Congressman Abe Murdock. Three districts from the county, which has a heavy Mormon population, gave 462 for repeal and 329 against.

NORTH CAROLINA

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The seesaw of destiny, which a year ago went down for Cameron Morrison and up for Robert R. Reynolds, reversed its swing today.

The question voted on was "convention or no convention." As a result no convention will be held and the delegates elected will not assemble to cast their votes.

Reynolds, who was elected to the senate on a repeal platform over Morrison, war horse of the Democratic party for many years, today saw his home state turn its back upon the repeal procession staged by 33 other states and hearken to the pleadings of Morrison, among other drys, by voting in favor of maintaining the 18th amendment.

After his defeat by Reynolds Morrison retired to the quiet of his farm here, and only returned to public life a few weeks ago when he began an active campaign against repeal.

Drys Ahead Two to One.

Incomplete returns tonight showed the dry forces leading in North Carolina by more than a two to one majority.

Even earlier, Cale K. Burgess, chairman of the united dry forces, claimed a victory of "landslide proportions." Burgess asserted his information indicated at least 90 of the 120 delegates

LIQUOR QUESTION AT A GLANCE FROM '46 TO YESTERDAY'S VOTE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Here are some of the most significant dates in America's effort to control the use of intoxicating liquor since adoption of the first state dry law by Maine in 1846:

1880—Nov. 2—Prohibition written into a state constitution for the first time by Kansas.

April 7—Beer of 3.2 alcoholic content subject to state control became legal.

Nov. 7—Repeal of 18th amendment assured.

PENNSYLVANIA

Partial returns showed the foes of prohibition leading nearly four to one. Of the 7,925 districts of the state, 1,512 reported 350,466 for repeal and 92,722 against.

While Philadelphia contributed half of the wet's early strength, Pittsburgh had yet to make its influence felt in maintaining the ratio as returns trickled in from farming regions.

Even country districts, however, failed to rally to the defense of the eighteenth amendment. Eight counties of the sixty-seven in the state were listed in the dry column as the tabulations progressed, none of them by impressive totals. Two other counties saw the wets and drys only a dozen votes apart.

Of the districts recorded, 326 were in Philadelphia. They registered the one-sided totals of 11,488 for and 12,508 against repeal. The one district in Allegheny [Pittsburgh] county for which returns were available added to the majority, 316 to 23.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Repeal forces trailed by a narrow margin in late returns from today's referendum on the 18th amendment in South Carolina.

Although the dry majority apparently was in the neighborhood of only 2,000 votes, Romulus Reese, state manager for the Association Against the 18th Amendment, conceded that prohibition forces had won.

With 852 precincts reported of 1,220 in the state, the vote for repeal was 31,470, against 33,303, a majority of 1,833.

First returns were favorable to the dry forces, and when the first few thousand votes had been listed the dry majority apparently exceeded 5,000.

But an overwhelming repeal majority in Charleston county and a substantial margin in Richland (Columbia) reduced the drys' advantage to 2,000, around which figure it fluctuated in later returns. Charleston reported 8,285 repeal votes to 380 dry.

In the heavy voting Piedmont area the drys ran up large votes. Greenwood was the only county in this industrial belt to show a majority in favor of repeal.

OHIO

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Ohio turned its back upon prohibition today in the first balloting in which women have participated on prohibition as a statewide question.

The state that gave birth to the Women's Christian Temperance Union and to the Anti-Saloon league in the latter part of the 20th century, gave repeal a majority of at least 600,000 votes.

With 6,778 precincts of the 8,585 total reported, the count was 1,054,799 for repeal of the 18th amendment and 456,901 against.

Looked upon as a pivotal state to the last, Ohio waged a quiet battle over repeal in the weeks preceding the final vote, with dry leaders taking refuge toward the last in a perfunctory plea that at least state prohibition be retained.

State Repeal Also Leads.

The voters gave less attention to the proposal to repeal the state amendment they adopted in 1918. When 891 precincts had recorded the vote on the state repeal amendment, the margin for repeal was only about 4 to 3, the vote being 96,571 for and 66,761 against.

Ohio women voted today for the first time in the history of prohibition on the question itself. Once before they had voted on a phase of prohibition—on Nov. 1920, when they were credited with helping carry the state enforcing act. Prior to that, women did not have the franchise.

KENTUCKY

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7.—(AP)—With the possibility Kentucky's locked and guarded ballot boxes might hold the answer to whether the "repeal by December" campaign was successful, repealists tonight claimed the Blue Grass state vote was overwhelmingly wet, while prohibitionists said the outlook for a dry result was promising.

The Rev. Dr. John Lowe Fort, executive secretary of the prohibition emergency committee, said the statewide prohibition campaign had revealed "a strong trend toward the dry side in various sections of the state."

Mrs. John L. Helm Jr., secretary of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, said she believed there was "an overwhelming vote for repeal, not only in Louisville but throughout the state."

William Stokes, representing the United Repeal council, said Kentucky "undoubtedly has voted for repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

The vote throughout the state was spotty, with heavy votes, in some cases exceeding the record presidential vote of 1932, in counties where hot local fights were decided.

Counting the ballots will start tomorrow at 10 a. m.

†In Washington the popular vote as compiled by the secretary of state of Washington was announced as 337,043, with the total vote for repeal being 490,088 and against repeal, 208,206. Under the law adopted by the state each voter was entitled to vote for two or three delegates to the state repeal convention.

‡Four states which voted yesterday [Tuesday] have scheduled conventions to be held before that in Maine. North Carolina will hold no convention.

Under the unusual procedure adopted for Washington the higher totals were rolled up by the 337,043 voters who actually cast ballots because they could vote for more than one delegate.

7 MEN ARE KILLED, 4 WOUNDED, DURING KENTUCKY VOTING

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Seven men were killed and four wounded today in fights that developed near voting booths in Kentucky during the repeal balloting.

At Layman, in Harlan county, the Blanton and Hensley families seized the opportunity to carry on an ancient feud, with the village streets as a battlefield. Two Blantons, Z. B., 46 years old, and his son, John, 24 years old, and two Hensleys, A. H., 57 years old, and his son, Zach, 21 years old, were slain. John and Jesse Blanton, brothers of John, were wounded.

Witnesses said that young Hensley opened hostilities by shooting at the Blantons as they stood in a group. Both factions then started firing and neutral voters and election officials fell to the ground and crawled to cover as bullets zipped over them.

Otto Ramey, 2[illegible] years old, was fatally wounded at the Carter City schoolhouse precinct in Grayson county. Officers were told Jack Parker, 50, shot him.

In Fleming county Watt Dearing was shot and severely wounded near a polling place. Fights in which two Negroes were killed took place in Louisville and Middlesboro.

IT WILL BE A LONG TIME BETWEEN LEGAL DRINKS IN CAROLINAS

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—"And the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina—."

For the benefit of the younger generation the story might well be repeated.

Once upon a time before prohibition was taken seriously in the Carolinas or anywhere else the states of North Carolina and South Carolina fell out about a boundary dispute.

The governors of the two states—good men and true—disliked the wrangling, so they met to settle the matter. After long discussions the issue was ended to the pleasure of all, but much argument had gone back and forth across the table and throats were dry.

So the governor of North Carolina—he was a guest and couldn't come right out and ask for one—kind of hinted to the South Carolina executive:

"It's a long time between drinks."

Well, it has been and apparently it's going to be.

AMERICAN EXILES IN PARIS CHEER END OF DRY LAW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 7.—While French wine interests in Bordeaux, Burgundy, and Champagne are preoccupied with questions of markets, tariffs, misleading labels, and other business worries the remaining American expatriates in France tonight assembled in their favorite drinking haunts and joyously toasted the end of prohibition, which started many of them on their path to exile.

"Now we can go back," was the sentiment heard from the lips of many transplanted Americans.

Every bar frequented by Americans had its own special celebration. Harry's New York bar, in order to mark fittingly the solemnity of the occasion, created a "repeal cocktail," appropriately made with a base of American rye.

COST OF DRY LAW BILLION A YEAR, FARLEY ASSERTS

New York, Nov. 7.—[Special.]—The cost of the prohibition experiment to the United States was estimated recently by Postmaster General James A. Farley at about one billion dollars a year. Of this, he said, 861 millions represented a loss in federal revenues from taxes and import duties, and $50,000,000 loss in tax revenues to states, counties and municipalities.

Expenditures of the federal government upon its attempts to enforce prohibition have been as follows:

Year.	Appropriation.	Year.	Appropriation.
1920	$ 3,100,000	1927	$13,272,445

HOW WORLD HAS EXPERIMENTED WITH PROHIBITION

Many Nations Try It and Then Abandon It.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Since 1912, seven nations have tried national prohibition and abandoned it. The record follows:

ICELAND—Prohibition decreed in 1912. Repeal voted, October, 1933.

RUSSIA—Czar decrees absolute prohibition as war measure, 1914. Country goes on 14 per cent wine basis in 1921. Vodka permitted again in 1925.

CANADA—Liquor sales ban becomes effective under three year war measure, 1918. No provinces dry in 1931.

FINLAND—Prohibition becomes effective in 1922. Government commission reports law unenforceable in 1928. Repeal voted in January, 1932.

NORWAY—Prohibition becomes effective where previously alcoholic content of more than 12 per cent in beverages forbidden, 1922. Repealed October, 1926.

TURKEY—Prohibition in force after several postponements, August, 1923. Liquor traffic restored as state monopoly, January, 1924.

First Tried in 2150 B. C.

The dry movement started as long ago as 2150 B. C. Pre-Confucian history tells how an angry Chinese ruler attempted to ban liquor from the land after two court astronomers blamed their failure to predict an eclipse on drunkenness.

Laws against liquor were decreed in India as early as 600 B. C. About a thousand years later Emperor Liu Pei'i passed a prohibition law for China which had incisive teeth. He prescribed beheading for all distillers, vendors, and drinkers of intoxicating beverages.

Revived with World War.

Prohibition attained its greatest momentum to date, however, about the time of the world war when most of the countries which have had it, enacted their legislation. During that period, where prohibition was an issue, only New Zealand and Denmark voted against it. In New Zealand in 1919 it appeared prohibitionists had triumphed. They had won at home. But that country allowed its soldiers overseas to vote on the issue and when an almost solid bank of wet ballots rolled back from its 40,000 fighting men, the dry cause was found to be wanting by the narrow margin of 2,968 votes.

In spite of a campaign which began in 1840, the prohibition party failed in Denmark, though it succeeded in legislating liquor out of Iceland, a dependency. It was not until 1930 the party, after a study of conditions in the United States, gave up the fight with the report:

"Our age is not sufficiently developed to obey prohibition laws. We urge education in temperance instead."

OHIO DISTILLERY TO ISSUE STOCK WORTH $650,000

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—As Ohio voted on prohibition repeal today, the federal trade commission announced the Lynchburg Distillery company of Cincinnati had filed a proposal to issue nearly $650,000 worth of stock. The company, listed as engaged in the manufacture and sale of whisky, asked approval of an issue of $6,576 shares of common stock at a total price of $649,320. B. M. Markstein is president and Leonard Freiberg, both of Cincinnati, is secretary.

4,500,000 GALLONS OF AGED WHISKY IS READY FOR MARKET

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—To satisfy a thirst than ran to 167 million gallons a year before prohibition, America has immediately available a stock of 4,500,000 gallons of aged domestic whisky.

This, distillers say, can be multiplied by five through "rectification," a process that consists of adding pure grain alcohol and other ingredients to distilled liquor. Bootleggers call it "cutting."

Treasury statistics show 18,846,133 gallons of whisky in bonded warehouses as of July 31. All but 4,500,000 gallons of this had been distilled in the last four years, mostly this year, however. The law permits only four year old whisky to be sold.

In addition to this stock, the warehouses held 224,738 gallons of rum, 305,061 gallons of gin, 1,768,809 gallons of brandy, and 22,311,164 gallons of grain alcohol. Virtually all of this will be ready for the market as soon as repeal becomes a fact.

The distilleries are going full blast in a concerted effort to build up stocks. Early in the year a quota of 4,000,000 gallons was announced by the industrial alcohol division.

21ST AMENDMENT SETS RECORD FOR QUICK ADOPTION

Also Is the First to Repeal Another.

The twenty-first amendment to the federal constitution, which repeals the eighteenth, has two distinctions. This is the first time in the history of the United States where one amendment has repealed another. It also takes the record for speed in the adoption of amendments.

The eighteenth amendment was submitted to the states by congress on Dec. 17, 1917. Mississippi ratified on Jan. 8, 1918 and Nebraska, the 36th state, on Jan. 16, 1919. It was declared in effect on Jan. 29, 1919.

The twenty-first amendment was submitted to the people on Feb. 20, 1933. On Nov. 7 the 36th state voted to ratify it. It will go into effect Dec. 5 when ratified by the 36th congress.

The first ten amendments, constituting the bill of rights, were presented to the legislatures of the states by the first congress on Sept. 25, 1789. They were all ratified by 1791. Thereafter each amendment has been acted upon separately. The record of the remaining amendments follows:

14th, requiring due process of law in depriving citizens of life, liberty or property—submitted June 16, 1866, ratified July 28, 1868.

15th, declaring that the right to vote shall not be denied for race, color or previous servitude—submitted Feb. 27, 1869, ratified May 30, 1870.

16th, giving the federal government power to tax incomes—submitted July 12, 1909, ratified Feb. 25, 1913.

17th, relating to methods of choosing United States senators—submitted May 16, 1912, ratified May 21, 1913.

Deadline Likely to Be 3 Miles from Shore.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The country's turn away from national prohibition raises the question whether 17 treaties granting the United States the right to search suspected rumrunners within an hour's sail of the coast shall be considered dead.

These treaties—with Great Britain, Japan, Germany, France and other maritime powers—provide that liquor must be sealed when brought within three miles of American territory and extend the limit within which American officials may halt and search vessels suspected of an effort to land liquor illegally.

Check Canadian Rum Runners.

The pacts are similar to the agreement with Great Britain ratified in 1924 to enable American prohibition officials to check rum running from Canada and other parts of the British Empire.

All the treaties contain a provision that they are to "lapse automatically" in case high contracting parties shall be "prevented by either judicial decision or legislative action from giving full effect to the provisions of the present treaty."

They also contain a provision that after the lapse of the treaties the signatories shall enjoy the rights they possessed before the treaties were concluded.

Cutters Might Halt Suspect.

Whether repeal would be a "legislative action" within the meaning of the treaties is a question which has not yet been raised, but many legal authorities believe it would.

Other countries with which the United States has these treaties are Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Italy, Panama, the Netherlands, Cuba, Spain, Belgium, Greece, Chile, Latvia, and Poland.

Should the treaties lapse and no new ones be negotiated American territorial waters—that is an area three miles from the coast line—would become the limit within which revenue cutters might halt and search smuggling suspects.

STATE MONOPOLY OF LIQUOR URGED BY ECONOMIST

Prof. Marshall E. Dimock, University of Chicago economist, yesterday told a round table conference at the Union League club that the state monopoly of liquor control, as advocated by the Rockefeller Foundation, is the only feasible method of promoting temperance and driving out the bootlegger.

"Unless the element of profit is eliminated," said Prof. Dimock, "there will be no incentive to temperance, for competition is bound to stimulate sales. Neither car taxes be made so low under the licensing system, as proposed for Illinois, that bootlegging will be unprofitable."

Prof. Dimock favors, in modified form, the system in use in Norway, Sweden, and in the Canadian provinces. The state would have a complete monopoly in the purchasing and distribution of all liquors with the exception of light wines and beer, which could be sold freely.

SURGE OF REPEAL SENTIMENT LED BY THREE GROUPS

Women in Forefront of War on Prohibition.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

In looking backward over the prohibition struggle in the United States two years stand out clearly as turning points in the will of the people. These are 1913, when the demand for an amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting traffic in intoxicating liquors reached a vociferous stage, and 1928, when a nationwide movement for temperance reform, with repeal as its goal, took definite form and found solid backing.

It was at these points that organized militant effort stepped in and within five years reached their goals. The war accelerated the passage of the 18th amendment and the depression has hastened its repeal. Both sides won by direct political action. The genesis of the conflict of idea exemplified here is as old as the Roman republic, when the censors were permitted to enter any man's house and correct matters of extravagance. It came to this country with the Puritans. The first proposal to write prohibition into national law was made in 1876.

Leadership Is Reviewed.

The purpose, arguments and methods of the anti-prohibition organizations become interesting in the light of 1933, just as the methods of the prohibition groups were found worthy of study in 1919.

There were three organizations in the national field which took the leadership in what at one time appeared a hopeless struggle to remove the eighteenth amendment from the constitution. These were the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, and the Crusaders.

It was in 1921, two years after prohibition became the law, that Capt. W. H. Stayton of Baltimore organized the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Hewey H. Curran became its president. It attracted little attention at first. It was not until 1928, when prohibition appeared firmly entrenched but in reality had lost its cause in the popular mind, that this organization gained the powerful support of seventy nationally known business men and began to collect its war chest. From tentative programs of modification of enforcement statutes, the goal was stretched to ultimate repeal.

Fight "Shotgun Reform."

They looked into the growing list of prohibition killings and announced that "more than one thousand lives have been sacrificed in the ten year effort to enforce prohibition." This was followed by facts and figures and the whole shameful record of the prohibition staff, secreted or distorted up to that time. Another attack was in calling attention to the legislators who voted dry and did not themselves obey the law.

During 1929 the Anti-Prohibition association spent half a million dollars. Among the contributors were the Du Pont family, R. T. Crane, Stanley Field, and John J. Raskob. Ralph M. Shaw was chosen head of the Illinois division and outstanding men took charge in other states. The off year elections of 1927 had shown a swing to liberalism and it had become respectable to oppose prohibition. The association pointed out the steadily increasing number of arrests for drunkenness and for still operations and showed how half the cases in the federal court were prohibition cases. The association grew to half a million membership and with victory in sight the leadership was taken over by Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic National committee.

Women Join the Fight.

The women's organization, W. O. N. P. R., came into being in 1929 through the efforts of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, founder of the Women's National Republican club, who resigned from the Republican national committee three days after President Hoover's inaugural address. She said it was because of her abhorrence of the existing prohibition laws.

A temporary organization was formed in Chicago, with Mrs. Sabin as national chairman, Mrs. John B. Casserly of California and Mrs. Amasa S. Mather of Ohio as vice chairmen, and Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll of New York as national secretary. A permanent organization was formed at Cleveland in April of 1929.

The immediate objective was the election of a majority of repeal congressmen. The women entered the Illinois campaign of that year on the side of the wet candidate, J. Hamilton Lewis, against Ruth Hanna McCormick and followed similar tactics in other states. In September of that year the organization had 200,000 members. In 1931 the membership doubled, exceeding the membership of the 60 year old Women's Christian Temperance union. Mrs. Leslie Wheeler and Mrs. William H. Mitchell were the leaders in the Illinois division.

In 1932 the women concentrated on the political conventions and their membership passed the million mark.

The Crusaders Start.

On Jan. 16, 1930, a group of young lawyers and business men met in Cleveland and organized the Crusaders, perhaps the most militant of all the organizations. It was planned along the lines of the old Anti-Saloon league, with one objective, the defeat of all legislators who did not support repeal.

The Crusaders had over a million members and a military method of control. The commander-in-chief was Fred G. Clark of Cleveland. J. Russell Forgan and Seymour Wheeler were among the national vice commanders. Col. Ira L. Reeves was the western secretary. Many ex-soldiers belong to the Crusaders.

The United Repeal council was organized in 1932 by Raymond Pitcairn, Philadelphia lawyer. This included the three organizations named above, the voluntary committee of lawyers, the Republican citizens' committee against national prohibition, the National Security league, and the American Hotel association.

WESTERVILLE, O., HOME OF DRY LEAGUE, VOTES TO KEEP PROHIBITION

Westerville, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—This city, home of the Anti-Saloon league of America and boastful of its reputation as the "dry capital of the world," rolled up a big anti-repeal vote in Ohio's election today.

The village, which has been dry for more than a century—ever since it was founded—gave a margin of three to one against repeal.

On repeal of the 18th amendment the vote was for repeal, 429; against, 1,017. The vote on beer local option was in the same proportion, 400 for and 1,063 against.

A lone beer seller who had braved boycott threats after the legalization of 3.2 beer in April was thus voted out.

Founder's Precinct Votes Wet.

Elyria, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The home precinct of one of the two living founders of the Anti-Saloon league went wet in today's election. At the booth where A. R. Webber regularly votes the count on the question of repealing the 18th amendment tonight was: 175 in favor, 66 against. The league came into being at Oberlin, O., in 1893. Its headquarters later were moved to Westerville, which since has been its national headquarters.

Home of W. C. T. U. Is Dry.

Hillboro, O., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Hillsboro, starting place of the women's crusade which led to the founding of the W. C. T. U., today voted dry. The count was 1,236 against repeal and 923 for repeal.

The village of 4,500 from which the saloons were driven by the women in the early 70's later backslid and in the 90's supported 19 saloons and 3 wholesale liquor stores. Later it went dry by local option. It seems to retain that idea.

What the Dry Leaders Said in the Heyday of Prohibition

Before and during the prohibition era, dry leaders gave utterance to many prophecies and opinions on the sentiment of the people regarding liquor. Some of the more notable of these utterances were:

Mrs. Ella Boole [1917]—If we women can once get the 18th amendment in the constitution, the jails and asylums will empty and the curse of liquor will be banished forever.

Congressman Andrew J. Volstead [1920]—From now on, prohibition will prevail.

Dr. F. Scott McBride [1924]—The liquor forces can never succeed in restoring the legalized liquor traffic through repeal of the 18th amendment.

The Rev. Billy Sunday [1925]—Repeal the prohibition law? Ridiculous! You might as well try to dam Niagara with toothpicks. I've learned the will of the people on my travels and they don't want repeal.

Senator Morris Sheppard [1926]—There's as much chance of repealing the 18th amendment as there is for a humming bird to fly to Mars with the Washington monument tied to its tail.

Dr. McBride [1927] — Penalties should be increased and violations made felonies. A hundred million dollars is not too much to ask for enforcement of a law that has saved the country six billion 500 million.

Dr. McBride [1928]—Al Smith and his wet ballyhoo are the froth that the Democratic party will blow into nothingless at the Houston convention.

Billy Sunday [1928]—If Al Smith is the Democratic nominee for president, I'll head a dry ticket myself.

Dr. McBride [1929]—Prohibition enforcement is satisfactory. Wisconsin is out of joint just now, but in due time the state dry law is bound to return there.

Dr. McBride [1930]—Submission of repeal to the states or the people is impossible and ridiculous. Congress is two-thirds dry and the people are three-fourths dry.

Bishop James Cannon Jr. [1932]—President Hoover's speech accepting renomination is a surrender to the speakeasies, bootleggers, and nullifiers of the constitution. We will demand a strict enforcement plank from the Democrats. If they reject it, the people will speak.

Bishop Cannon [1932]—The Democrats have betrayed the moral forces of their party. Representatives of the moral majority of the nation will meet shortly to take action. It goes without saying that there will be no retreat, no surrender, no compromise.

Former Congressman William D. Upshaw [1932]—I accept the nomination as the Prohibition candidate for President in confidence. If all honest drys will be brave enough to vote their convictions, I will be elected.

Bishop Cannon [1933]—This 3.2 beer has made disgusting nullificationists out of our legislators and President Roosevelt. There is no more disgusting drunk than a beer drunk. I know, because I've held many of their heads.

Billy Sunday [1933]—Any one who claims repeal will win is crazy.

COST OF DRY ERA IS 35½ BILLIONS; 2,650 KILLINGS

Survey Shows Staggering Toll in 14 Years.

National prohibition, which was expected to be wiped off the statute books by the repeal votes of three or more states last night, has cost this country about 2,650 human lives and about 35 billion, 500 million dollars in the nearly 14 years of its existence.

The figures are from the files of the Crusaders, militant repealist organization which, on Dec. 10, 1932, issued what was then regarded as the most comprehensive study of prohibition costs undertaken up to that time. Col. Ira L. Reeves, former director of the Crusaders, and his statistical expert, William T. Biesel endeavored yesterday to bring the figures up to date.

The original survey dealt with approximately thirteen Volstead years from Jan. 16, 1920, when the law became effective, and including the available figures for 11 months of 1932. In their study of that period, the Crusaders found that the total cost of prohibition enforcement reached 34 billion, 565 million dollars.

Money Loss Drops in 1933.

For the year 1933, Mr. Biesel estimated, the cost probably will not exceed one billion, due to the return of legal beer, the general tendency toward nullification and the refusal of the national congress to appropriate huge enforcement sums. Prohibition killings have shown a similar tapering off, Mr. Biesel said.

On the monetary side, he explained, consideration was given to such factors as increased taxation, expanding bureaucracy, federal and state enforcement costs, padlocked property, loss of excise taxes to the government and diversion of revenue to criminals. The general summary set down the economic cost of the "noble experiment" for the thirteen years as follows:

Congressional enforcement appropriations	$ 132,958,530
State appropriations [8 years only]	5,585,850
Assessed value of property seized	186,867,322
Subsistence for jailed violators	111,103,870
Court costs for violators	111,103,870
Coast guard appropriations for enforcement	152,503,464
Customs service enforcement.	93,232,230
Criminal court costs to state and municipal govts.	2,922,622,000
Rental lost to padlocked landlords	303,615,000
Federal liquor revenue lost	11,988,000,000
State and municipal liquor revenue lost	6,540,620,000
Loss to consumers on excessive liquor bills, bootleg profits and protection	12,000,000,000

"The tremendous effect exerted by these huge sums upon the economic fabric of the United States almost staggers comprehension," Mr. Biesel commented. "The thirteen year cost is more than one-third greater than the national debt of 22 billions. It is more than two and one-half times the amount owed us by foreign governments. It is 10 billions greater than the cost of America's participation in the war, which was $26,361,000,000."

The Cost In Human Life.

The prohibition mortality lists for 13 years as compiled in the Crusaders' survey in 1932, showed a total of 2,602 persons slain, of whom 2,089 were private citizens and 513 were United States agents. The report showed that such killings reached a peak in 1926, and declined thereafter under pressure of the publicity attending prohibition killings. Deaths since the survey was made has brought the total to about 2,650.

"This figure is of necessity inaccurate," Mr. Biesel said. "The actual total is unquestionably much greater. It is probable that the total toll of lives taken by hair trigger enforcers and equally fast shooting bootleggers will never be known.

"The fact that flimsy, biased and sometime actually false records of the federal prohibition bureau alone tabulate a loss of 250 lives is an indication of what the total of untabulated killings must have been.

"Dozens of persons have been shot while resisting illegal search of their homes and many were shot while speeding to escape agents whom they mistook for highwaymen. In the 250 admitted federal killings, there were only 57 prosecutions and nine convictions."

A table of prohibition killings, as compiled from federal records and the daily press, was set forth in the 1932 survey as follows:

	Agents killed.	Citizens killed.	Total.
1920	20	40	60
1921	38	75	113
1922	44	67	111
1923	33	66	99
1924	42	106	148
1925	49	97	146
1926	37	79	116
1927	56	97	153
1928	41	87	128
1929	59	110	169
1930	65	62	127
1931	14	15	26
1932	15	18	33
Estimated killed by local & state agts.		1,170	1,170
Total	513	2,089	2,602

A table showing the killings by states was also compiled. It showed Texas first with 113 deaths, Georgia, second, with 120, and Virginia, third, with 87. Other states running high on the list were: Arkansas, 44; California, 35; Illinois, 43; Michigan 53; Mississippi, 56; Ohio, 55; and South Carolina, 43.

LA GUARDIA NEW GOTHAM MAYOR; HITS TAMMANY

G. O. P. Wins Control Over Budget Making.

given to the election by the backing of McKee by Mr. Farley, who is national and state Democratic chairman. Mr. Farley said repeatedly that "a vote for McKee is a vote for Roosevelt," but the President personally kept out of the campaign.

Prelude to 1936 Race?

McKee also charged that La Guardia's Republican backers sought to embarrass President Roosevelt and to build up a Republican machine with an eye on the presidency in 1936. La Guardia denied there was any Republican plot. He insisted the New York issue was whether "boss" government should be perpetuated. He said if Tammany won, John F. Curry would continue to run the town. He said if McKee won, that merely would amount to a change in bosses; Mr. Farley and Edward J. Flynn, Democratic leader in the Bronx, would succeed to the Tammany mantle.

With all these charges in the air, the voters went to the polls and registered their decision in the form of the greatest Republican victory in a New York municipal election since John Purroy Mitchel was elected mayor on a Republican-fusion ticket in 1913.

La Guardia carried every one of the five boroughs, even including Manhattan, which long has been the Gibraltar of Tammany Hall.

Tammany Defeats Pecora.

There was some salvage for Tammany. It retained the presidency of the borough of Manhattan, and the attorneyship.

There was some rejoicing in Tammany over the election of William C. Dodge as district attorney of Manhattan county. He defeated Jacob Gould Schurman, Republican-Fusion, and Ferdinand Pecora, Recovery, by a plurality of about 14,632.

The figures complete were: Dodge, 193,282; Schurman, 178,650, and Pecora, 119,738.

With either Schurman or Pecora in the prosecuting job it was to be expected that Tammany would be put on the run. With Dodge and Tammany still in control of the prosecuting office there was less trembling among Tammanyites.

For the Manhattan borough presidency Samuel Levy, backed by Tammany, won over his Republican fusion opponent, Langdon W. Post, and James J. Hoey, Recovery candidate, by the slender margin of 8,859 votes. The vote was: Levy, 202,591; Post, 193,732; and Hoey, 105,373.

Other Fusion Victories.

In the race for controller the effort of Frank J. Prial to elevate himself was futile. Prial wrested the Democratic nomination from Tammany, but lined up with the Hall in the election. He lost to Arthur W. Cunningham, Fusionist, 765,223 to 701,962. J. I. Cuff, Recovery party, obtained 485,897 votes.

For president of the board of aldermen the fusionists again won, with Bernard S. Deutsch getting 824,025 votes against 591,813 for Milton Solomon, Tammanyite. Nathan Straus Jr., Recovery, finished third, with 557,813 votes.

In Brooklyn, Raymond V. Ingersoll, Fusionist, won a surprising victory over Henry Hesterberg, McCooey-Democratic incumbent, and Joseph J. Baker, Recovery party nominee. With 187 districts missing out of 1,187, Mr. Ingersoll had an actual plurality of 55,288. The vote was 244,661 for Ingersoll, 189,373 for Hesterberg, and 151,691 for Baker.

In Queens, Borough President George U. Harvey, Republican-Fusion nominee, won handily over Chirles S. Colden, Democrat. Harvey's plurality was 36,711 with 141 of the 741 election districts missing. The figures were: Harvey, 141,261 and Colden, 104,449.

Other Minor Races.

James J. Lyons, nominee in the Bronx for borough president on both the Recovery party and regular Democratic ticket, won from Charles Patric Barry by an indicated plurality of 74,900. The vote was 194,438 for Lyons and 128,825 for Barry on the returns from 650 election districts.

Final returns from Richmond, with no election districts missing showed Joseph A. Palma, Fusionist, the winner by 999 votes over John A. Lynch, his nearest opponent in a four cornered race.

Almost complete returns from today's election indicated that the 60 million dollar state relief bond issue proposal had carried. The fate of the proposal to name a New York City charter revision commission was still in doubt on the face of midnight returns.

Control Board of Estimates.

The board of estimate, with 16 votes, thus goes overwhelmingly into Republican control. Tammany will have only two votes, those of Borough President Levy of Manhattan, and James J. Lyons, who won the borough presidency in the Bronx. Lyons is a Flynn man—Flynn being the Democratic leader who broke the alliance with Boss Curry of Manhattan and Boss John H. McCooey of Brooklyn.

While losing control of the board of estimate, Tammany did retain the whip hand in the board of aldermen. The Republicans have formerly held but a single aldermanic seat. The lineup tonight gave them at least 16 seats out of 65.

Another Blow at Tammany.

A severe blow at Tammany was struck in the Ninth aldermanic district, Manhattan, where Dennis J. Mahon, for several years the Tammany majority leader in the board, seemed certain of defeat by Morton Baum, 28, Republican Fusion candidate. In 40 election districts out of 60, Mr. Baum had 8,211 votes to 5,802 for Mahon. Since the resignation of Joseph V. McKee, last May, as aldermanic president, Mr. Mahon has been acting head of the aldermen.

Tammany managed to keep its hold upon the office of register of New York county, returning Martha Byrne. She defeated the Fusion nominee for that office, Sarah K. Herbert. Owen Bohan, the Tammany nominee for judge of the court of General Sessions, and Frederic L. Kernochan, his Fusion opponent, ran neck and neck, with Bohan enjoying a scant plurality, which, however, seemed sufficient to guarantee him the victory.

In Kings county also the McCooey organization retained its hold on some of the minor offices.

The five candidates for the Supreme court bench in the first judicial district, comprising Manhattan and the Bronx, who seemed most certain of election, Charles B. McLaughlin, Philip J. McCook, Edward R. Koch, Samuel I. Rosenman, and Dennis O'L. Cohalan.

Day of Disorders.

Disorders began early. More than 100 cases of assault were reported to the police before noon. Slugging was common. The use of blackjacks, knives and pistols was reported from the more turbulent sections.

Among the early arrests was that of William Chadbourne, campaign manager for La Guardia. He was charged with assault as a result of a fracas at a polling place in a public school building on the lower east side.

An entire election board on duty at a polling place in the Seventeenth Assembly district was arrested on charges of permitting disqualified voters to cast their ballots.

La Guardia came within an eyelash of precipitating a free-for-all exchange of fistcuffs at a voting booth in 113th street. He tore a badge from the coat lapel of a Democratic captain he happened to find inside the voting inclosure. A big six foot lieutenant of the Tammany worker stepped in and for a minute it seemed as if the two would come to blows.

A policeman intervened, a crowd gathered around the disputants and after a while peace was restored. La Guardia demanded that the police clear the polling place of all who had no business there. When his demand had been obeyed he left.

Official Is Slugged.

Blackjacks swung into action on fusion workers while the police are said to have "looked the other way" at a balloting place at Market and Monroe streets. Among those felled by the hoodlums was Special Deputy Attorney General William R. Covington, who had gone to the place to investigate reports of supposed irregularities.

Lewis R. Stuyvesant, another deputy of the attorney general's office, was mauled, but declined medical assistance. The officials charged that they were rushed from the polling place and attacked. The sluggers escaped in the excitement.

Two hundred persons were reported to have participated in a free-for-all "scuffle" at another voting booth. Several of the disputants emerged from the mêlée minus hats and bits of clothing, but no one was seriously injured. Police finally cleared the scene.

McKee Worker Stabbed.

In Brooklyn, George Bennett, a watcher for the Recovery party, was stabbed during an argument with six men who fled the scene in an automobile. He was taken to the Coney Island hospital.

The brawny muscle men in "Dan Finn's district" on the lower east side attempted to kidnap a prisoner from a patrolman. Joseph Baker had been arrested in the polling place for attempted illegal voting. A policeman took him, and was on the way to a nearby station with him, when twenty hoodlums surrounded them, about fifty feet from the polling place, and tried to wrest Baker from the policeman's grasp.

G. O. P. Gains in Assembly.

While the mayoralty fight was raging in New York City there was also a bitter contest going on throughout the state for control of the legislature through the assembly. Despite a tour of the state by the Democratic national and state chairman, Jim Farley, the voters gave the Republicans a gain of eight seats. This gives them a total of 85 members in the assembly, while the Democrats have but 73. The Republicans lost three seats upstate, but gained eleven in New York districts, giving them the largest representation from this city in a decade.

Farley had pleaded for Democratic and New Deal control to support Gov. Herbert Lehman and President Roosevelt. On the other hand, W. Kingsland Macy exhorted against the dangers of Tammany control of the state.

ROB SOUTH SIDE HOTEL.

Five bandits yesterday took $365 in a holdup of the Plaisance hotel, 1545 East 60th street. Walking into the lobby, they held up three employés and four guests, taking $350 from Paul Brattstrom, the clerk on duty; $10 from M. L. Livingston, the manager, and $5 from a gest. Mrs. A. F. Cottrell.

La Guardia Has Record of 2 Decades in Public Life

New York, Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Fiorello H. La Guardia has been a dynamic figure in the life of the city and the nation for almost two decades.

Known as a pugnacious and effective fighter, he has been in the forefront of movements for action at first assailed as extremely radical and within a few years written into the law of the land.

Mr. La Guardia is a native of New York City. He was born on Dec. 11, 1882, on Varick street. His father was an army bandmaster, and while very young he was taken to western army posts. He saw his father die in Tampa at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. It was said that his father died of "embalmed beef."

Gets Consular Job.

When he was only 20 Fiorello was appointed to serve with the American consulate in Austria-Hungary. He was attached to the offices in Trieste and Budapest from 1901 to 1904 and in the latter year was made consular agent in Fiume and remained there until 1906.

Returning to the United States he became an interpreter at Ellis island, where he stayed until 1910, meanwhile studying law and obtaining his degree from New York university. From 1915 to 1917 he was a deputy attorney general of New York state.

He was first elected to the house of representatives from the 14th district in New York in 1916 on the Socialist ticket. In 1918 he was reëlected, meanwhile having joined the army, where he served as first lieutenant, captain, and major in the air division on the Italian front.

Wins Aldermanic Place.

In 1919 he was chosen as the Republican nominee for president of the board of aldermen to fill the place left vacant by the election of Alfred E. Smith as governor. To the surprise of many he won the race. He passed several stormy years in the board of estimate while John F. Hylan as mayor and Charles F. Craig as controller and were battling uproariously. Mr. La Guardia mixed in the fights with a will.

In 1922 he made the race for the house again, this time from the twentieth district, and he won. He continued to hold that seat until 1932, when he was defeated by a slim margin.

In his service as a representative Mr. La Guardia was in the thick of the opposition of the Republican old guard group that dominated the national administrations until the election of President Roosevelt. He was an early fighter for prohibition repeal. He battled against the sales tax. He assailed Samuel Insull before the Insull collapse.

Second Race for Mayor.

In 1929, when Mayor James J. Walker was at the height of his popularity, Mr. La Guardia won the Republican nomination for mayor. Mr. La Guardia charged that the city government was reeking with graft and corruption but the voters preferred to retain Mayor Walker, who was victorious by an overwhelming plurality. Mr. La Guardia went back to the house, where in the closing days of the Hoover administration he fought the President's policies to the end.

A few months ago, backed by Samuel Seabury, he obtained the leading place on the slate to head the fusion attack on Tammany.

Mr. La Guardia was married in 1919 to Thea Almerigotti. She died and in 1929 he was married to Miss Marie Fisher, who had been his secretary. He is a Mason.

"WE LOSE, TAMMANY DOESN'T WIN," SAYS FARLEY OF LA GUARDIA

New York, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Postmaster General Farley, state and national Democratic chairman, who supported Joseph V. McKee, declared tonight the election of Fiorello La Guardia demonstrated that New York voters are "thoroughly dissatisfied with the present Democratic leadership in the city."

A gay party assembled in the postmaster general's private office in Democratic national headquarters. Mrs. Farley and a group of guests in evening clothes sat there.

Farley spread his hands palm upward to Prince Matchabelli, one of his guests, and said: "Well, we lose, but Tammany doesn't win."

LA GUARDIA PROMISE IS A NONPARTISAN ADMINISTRATION

New York, Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Fiorello H. La Guardia, Republican mayor-elect of New York, issued the following after his election became definitely known:

"Returns up to this moment indicate the election of the majority of the Republican fusion ticket. The results are indeed gratifying. This opens the way to a new era in municipal government.

"I fully realize the responsibility I shall assume on Jan. 1. I need and ask for the cooperation of all interested in good city government. I promise and now pledge a real nonpartisan administration. I shall take no active part in politics for the next four years.

"I am anxiously awaiting complete returns on my running mates on the ticket, and naturally cannot be fully happy until I hear definitely of their success.

"To all my associates and workers of the campaign, thanks. To the people of the city of New York I say that I appreciate the confidence placed in me and shall strive to be worthy of it."

JIMMY WALKER YAWNS AT N. Y. ELECTION RESULT

PARIS, Nov. 8 [Wednesday].—(AP)—Neither New York's hottest mayoralty campaign in years nor the anticipated swan song of national prohibition coud keep Jimmy Walker's eyes open after 1 a. m. today. In bed by midnight, the former New York mayor said over the telephone that it was "rather a novelty for me to be abed on a polling night. In fact, it's the first time it ever happened. I'd like to hear about it if you get the results by 1 o'clock, but after that it will have to go over till morning."

Heiress Who Divorced Her Chauffeur Weds Again

Beverly Hills, Cal., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Elizabeth McAllister, heiress to millions, disclosed today that she was wed at Yuma, Ariz., Oct. 25, to C. B. Judining, engineer here. Last year she divorced her former chauffeur, Charles J. Challette, formerly of Detroit.

Wilmette Joins the Two Carolinas in Dry Column

The village of Wilmette joined the Carolinas in the dry column last night when the village board passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale, manufacture or storage for sale of anything stronger in alcoholic content than one-half of 1 per cent. Beverages for medical and sacramental purposes are excepted. Wilmette has never approved a beer ordinance. The new prohibitory ordinance provides jail sentences of 30 days to six months, and fines of $25 to $100, or both, for violations.

10 Seconds Ample Time for Thief, Woman Learns

Mrs. Charles Cawley of Manchester, Ia., learned yesterday how fast thieves work. She was watching a display in the Electrical building at the World's Fair, and during the presentation she placed her purse on a near by railing. When she reached for it not more than 10 seconds later it was gone. Mrs. Cawley reported that the purse contained $10 in cash and two diamond rings valued at $4,000.

TAMMANY OUT BEFORE, ALWAYS REGAINS POWER

Observers Wonder if This Is Death Blow.

New York, Nov. 7.—[Special.]—The defeat of Tammany Hall marks the end of another resurgence in the history of that famous, and at times infamous, political organization, founded as a social organization.

The ebb and flow of Tammany power has punctuated the Wigwam career since Fernando Wood first taught the lesson that bosses could rule a city, and profit thereby. His first disciple was Boss Tweed, and the rules of Wood and Tweed were not more thoroughly repudiated than those of Croker, Murphy, and Curry have been. The city revolts led by Seth Low and John Purroy Mitchel were only less potent that the rebellions of McClellan and Gaynor. The Tiger has had its tail twisted not only by fusion but by its own offspring, although the circumstances and motives of the twisting have been as varied as the personalities of the men involved.

Loses on Several Issues.

Tammany has lost on several issues. The repudiation of Wood, due to his greed in building a city machine, was followed by that of Tweed after the disclosures of larcenous activity which followed the Tammany discovery that a machine could manipulate all the functions of municipal government. But the rather simple and straightforward graft of the early days of Tammany rule, which were slow to arouse public anger, gave way more recently to more involved manipulations.

The graft which in a rapidly expanding city was again and again forgotten by the voters had in the years of the depression and the mayoralty of James J. Walker risen to a point where it affected the pocketbook of every one, weakened the city's credit, and struck at the very foundations of Tammany patronage. The organization began to undermine its own people, and it was this which, more than any other one factor today, helped to bring about Tammany's defeat.

The recent attempt to tax the stock exchange revealed the desperation of the Tammany organization under Boss Curry. The political machine, which, through its franchise operations, once won for the board of aldermen the appellation of "The Forty Thieves"—the group which tossed money-bags with Jay Gould and Jim Fisk of Erie railroad fame—was brought into conflict this year with the city's bankers over loans and almost drove the stock exchange into New Jersey.

New Conditions to Face.

Whether Tammany can recover its power after today's defeat will depend on its ability to meet conditions which it never had to meet before. In the early days of its existence as a political machine, Tammany controlled the votes of Manhattan—which was New York before the consolidation—and gained national power. In recent years it has seldom been supreme, and although its prestige remained the votes lay in Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens. Tammany has existed for more than a decade as the result of political coalitions, not because of its dominating control.

And it may now be that this defeat, caused by the splitting off of the Bronx under Flynn and McKee, with the approval of Farley, and the inability of Brooklyn's McCooey to keep his leaders in harness, has the seeds of a definite disintegration.

The curve of power which Tammany has followed shows regular rises and falls. After Tweed it seemed that Tammany had dropped to a point where it would have to wear sackcloth and ashes for years. But it was only three years later, in 1874, that Tammany elected its candidate for mayor, William H. Wickham. Under "Honest John" Kelly Tammany came back into power, aided by the pressure of national alignments, and prepared the way for Croker.

Croker a Two Fisted Scrapper.

It probably was Croker who made the Tammany that is known today. A two fisted scrapper, with no scruples as to how he gained his ends and with a shrewd political foresight, Croker soon became the dominating member of a group of four which took over the affairs of Tammany after John Kelly's death.

The money which Tammany Hall exacted from houses of prostitution, from gambling places, from pickpockets and thieves, was so great that police captains paid thousands of dollars for their assignments.

There was no public outcry, no indignation, until a New England preacher, the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, sent out a blast from his pulpit one day which curled the hair of Tammany's leaders. They demanded that he prove his words, and he did so by personal investigation which led him to a place where nude girls pulled his whiskers as he sat sipping beer in a corner, wondering whether Sodom really had been wiped off the face of the earth. What is more, he told his congregation what he had seen.

Dr. Parkhursts's disclosures were followed by the Lexow investigation, which showed that Tammany's income from prostitution alone was $7,000,000 a year. That was too much for the voters and they rose in their wrath and elected William L. Strong, a bank president, while Croker sulked in Ireland. It was a major defeat for Tammany, but its results were nil, for both Croker and Tammany came back. The newspapers called it the "return from Elba."

The reformers had not done well, and Asa Bird Gardiner, the Tammany candidate for district attorney, framed the slogan "to hell with reform." Henry George, who had been one of the greatest opponents of Tammany, was dead, and in the first election after the consolidation of the greater city, Robert C. Van Wyck was elected Tammany mayor.

Again the city became wide open. Croker's organization at this time had turned to another form of graft and instead of depending on vice for revenue they went back to the Tweed formula of milking corporations, of which the franchise for the "Huckleberry railroad" in the Bronx was an example. These revelations and the Ice Trust scandal again brought a revulsion of popular feeling and in the next election Seth Low was elected mayor. On this fusion ticket was William Travers Jerome, who did much to carry the entire ticket to victory, and who in the years to follow was one of the most militant prosecutors of vice the city has known.

Murphy Takes Over Tammany.

Before his retirement to Ireland, Croker made a gesture toward cleaning up the red light districts, but it was left for Charles F. Murphy, another silent boss, and the last real ruler of Tammany—a man of keen political perception and leadership—to remove this stain from the wigwam's shield. His first strategy was to elect as Tammany mayor George B. McClellan, to run again fusion.

The big business methods of Tammany under Murphy were shown by the investigations of his relationship to insurance scandals, with contracts for large construction undertakings, and for railroad charters and franchises. The open robbery of the Tweed régime had given way to manipulations more difficult to trace or to punish. It was the era of the "honest graft," defined by George Washington Plunkett. "I seen my opportunities and I took 'em," said Mr. Plunkett ingenuously. He was Mr. Murphy's prophet.

After his reelection in 1905, McClellan broke away from Tammany control to some extent in his second term, and from that time on until the advent of James J. Walker, it can hardly be said that Tammany ever was completely dominant in municipal affairs, although the organization held to power through the increasing shrewdness of Murphy, and his desire to be more than a mere city boss. As a matter of fact, in Murphy's later years he was by far the ablest and fairest of the Tammany bosses, and he held an iron rein on his district leaders.

Gaynor Wins Election.

When William J. Gaynor was elected as Tammany candidate for mayor he went into office with an otherwise complete fusion ticket. His administration was generally approved, although it was marred at the end by the assassination of Herman Rosenthal, gambler, a murder which brought about a purging of the police department and the conviction of Lieut. Becker. Gaynor was about to accept a fusion nomination for mayor when he died, and his mantle fell on the shoulders of John Purroy Mitchel, president of the board of alderman. Mitchel's election in 1914 was fusion's greatest victory, but although he tried to give an economical administration he lost the next election to John F. Hylan, who had been skillfully developed by Murphy as a business men's candidate.

The alliance between Murphy and Hylan was close, although it could never be said that Hylan was absolutely dominated by Tammany.

Murphy died in 1924, just before the Democratic national convention, and with him went the power and skill which had marked the "new Tammany." There was no one in the organization capable of filling his shoes.

George W. Olvany, lawyer and judge, was made Tammany leader, and the men who had been held in check by Murphy ran over the easy-going Olvany and brought Tammany into quick disrepute. It was in this period that the city debt first began to rise and that officeholders exhibited complete disregard for the pay roll.

Olvany Banished After 5 Years.

So thoroughly demoralized did the organization become that after five years of Olvany he was banished, not only from the leadership but even from the direction of his own district, and became a discredited and forgotten member of the party.

It was with the knowledge among Tammany members themselves that something must be done to strengthen the organization that John F. Curry was elected leader. By this time James J. Walker was mayor and he selected Curry from the district leaders against the wishes of Alfred E. Smith. Curry was elected by only a narrow majority.

The alliance between Mayor Walker and Mr. Curry was so close that whatever one wished the other did, and so long as the country was prosperous there was no opposition. But with the coming of the depression the economic results of Curry's policies were quickly felt. The city was brought to the verge of bankruptcy, graft was universal, and political sinecures were a drain upon the treasury which it could not stand. When the bankers refused to lend money to the city, and disclosures of graft became daily more ominous, the state legislature voted the Seabury investigation which brought the house of Tammany down in quick disaster.

Officials Amass Money.

More than one city official was found to have amassed sums of money for which he could not account. Some officials resigned and after Mayor Walker was unable to account for money which had flowed his way he resigned and went to France, where he remains.

In the meantime Curry had made several other blunders. He had opposed Roosevelt for the presidential nomination after pleading vainly with Roosevelt as governor in behalf of Walker. He opposed Gov. Lehman's nomination. These two maneuvers cost him the political support of President Roosevelt and lost him all national prestige for Tammany.

After Walker's resignation Joseph V. McKee had succeeded him, and had quickly shown an aptitude for municipal affairs and a desire to trim the budget which aroused enthusiasm. But McKee's efforts were hamstrung in the board of estimate, the budget he had prepared was rejected, and he also resigned.

John P. O'Brien, former surrogate, and a man of personal integrity but no great capacity for taming Tammany, was put forward by Curry as ad interim mayor, and was elected. When the regular election came around O'Brien was renominated by Curry; McKee was drafted to run as an independent Democrat, backed by Edward J. Flynn, Democratic leader of the Bronx, and by Postmaster General James Farley, for the administration; La Guardia [G. O. P. radical] was named as the fusion candidate. Today's voting closed a clamorous campaign. Tammany has fallen again. Will it rise again, and, if so, under what alignment?

GIVE BLACK EYE TO MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IDEA

Rejected by Elections in Several Cities.

A number of cities in the country territory voted on the issue of municipal ownership in operation of utilities. The results follow:

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Completion of almost half the vote cast in Cincinnati tonight indicated defeat of a proposal to have the city acquire and operate gas and electric plants here, a $60,000,000 project. With 200 out of 484 precincts counted, the vote stood at 18,203 for acquisition of the plants, and 30,882 opposed.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 7.—(AP)—A $6,508,000 bond issue which would have paved the way for San Francisco to sell electric power generated at its Hetch-Hetchy water project in the Sierras was defeated by voters here today, who favored another bond issue for $12,095,000 to improve and extend the municipal distribution of water.

The power bonds which would have provided funds for a power house and transmission line were defeated 72,773 to 71,465 on complete returns from the city's 912 precincts. A two-thirds majority was necessary.

The water distribution bonds carried 103,752 to 48,067.

The bond issues are conditioned upon grants of 30 per cent for labor and material from the federal public works administration.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 7.—(AP)—On complete returns from 51 of the 149 districts in Salt Lake City the proposal for an $18,000,000 municipal power plant was falling behind by a vote of nearly 2 to 1. The totals were: For, 4,046; against, 8,798.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Early returns tonight on the vote for and against a proposal to issue $500,000 worth of bonds to buy a municipal power distribution system indicated its defeat, although the scattering vote, delayed by the tabulation of the count on prohibition repeal, was small. The negative votes led by approximately four to three.

Akron, O., Nov. 8 (Wednesday).—(AP)—Scattering returns early today indicated a number of bond issues for public improvements, totaling about $7,500,000, would carry in the city of Akron. The favorable majority for the bonds was in the ratio of four to three.

At the same time a county bond issue for $500,000 for public improvements was winning by the same margin.

Akron voters, however, appeared to be turning their backs to a proposition to buy a light plant. The question was yes or no on the purchase, not the floating of a bond issue to finance it. The financing question, in the event the proposition wins, will be taken up later. The margin of negative votes was small.

Akron, too, voted negatively by a ratio of four to three on scattered returns on the question of installing the city manager form of government.

Alton, Ill., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The Alton city council last night approved a recommendation by the municipal ownership commission that the city exercise its option to buy the Alton Water company. Estimates of the value range from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000. Plans were made for application to the public works administration for the needed funds to be secured by revenue bonds retired from the income of the plant.

Portsmouth, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—A proposal to establish a municipal electric light plant was defeated by the voters of Portsmouth nearly three to two in today's election. It was the third time the proposition had been rejected in the last four years.

Camden, N. J., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The proposal to construct a $10,000,000 municipal electric light plant was leading by a majority of 2 to 1 tonight on the basis of early returns.

With the first ten districts of the city's 108 reported, the count showed votes for the construction leading by more than 200.

GUARD PLUMBING CO. HEAD AFTER MYSTERY TELEPHONE MESSAGES

It was learned yesterday that police protection has been given to Leo Corboy, 8201 Kimbark avenue, owner of a plumbing company at 405 North Des Plaines street, following his receipt of a number of mysterious telephone calls and letters during the last month. Corboy, with his brother John, has done considerable work at the Fair, particularly at the Streets of Paris concession.

Investigators under Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the state's attorney's office are working on the case. They believe the messages are the work of a kidnap gang.

Police pointed out that neither the letters nor the telephone calls threatened Corboy. The telephone calls generally sought to get Corboy to meet the speaker at some hotel in a nearby suburb. From this detectives deduce that the caller sought to lure him to some spot where, perhaps, he would be seized by kidnapers. The letters were even more puzzling, chiefly concerning a "missing brother" of the writer who understood that Corboy had caused the "missing brother's" arrest.

MAYORS ELECTED IN MANY CITIES; SOME SURPRISES

G. O. P. Wins Cleveland; Democrats Pittsburgh.

Republicans and Democrats broke about even in mayoralty elections yesterday. The Socialists captured one city.

Cleveland, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Aided by a Democratic intraparty squabble, in which figured the names of James A. Farley, generalissimo of Democratic forces in the United States, Cleveland Republicans tonight apparently had reclaimed the mayoralty with the election of a former governor and three-time mayor, Harry L. Davis.

A total of 680 precincts out of 798 in the city had been tabulated when Davis assumed a lead of about 6,500 over his Democratic opponent, the incumbent, Ray Miller. The vote: Davis, 121,916; Miller, 115,430.

Tart Message to Farley.

Much speculation centered on how many of the Davis votes had been snatched bodily from Miller by virtue of the action of Congressman Martin L. Sweeney, Independent Democrat, who sent a tart message to Farley last week in response to a tacit suggestion from Harry F. Payer, an assistant secretary of state in Washington, that Sweeney endorse Miller.

Sweeney polled 60,000 votes in the primary, in which he ran against Miller and Davis for the mayoral nomination.

Farley expressed a personal desire to see Miller reëlected, but declined to take a part in the campaign in the capacity of Democratic national chairman.

Democrats Gain in N. Y. State.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The O'Connell Democratic organization rolled up a record majority for a mayoral candidate in the face of the most spirited opposition that has confronted the brothers since they ascended to political power in Albany county.

John Boyd Thacher, the incumbent, received a plurality of 24,907 over his opponent, Reynolds King Townsend, the candidate of a fusion group made up of Independents and Republicans. Thacher received 47,813 votes and Townsend 22,906.

The normal Democratic plurality has been about 23,000. All three of the Democratic candidates for the assembly were reëlected.

Democrats made striking gains in upstate New York, Buffalo elected a Democratic mayor for the first time since 1914; Rochester went Democratic for the first time in 30 years; Poughkeepsie, nearest city to the home of President Roosevelt, named a Democrat for the first time in four years; Cortland went Democratic for the first time since its incorporation 33 years ago; Lockport also went Democratic for the first time in 16 years.

In Jamestown, a 34 year old newspaper reporter, Leon F. Roberts, unseated Samuel A. Carlson, who has been mayor 24 years.

Pittsburgh Goes Democratic.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 7.—(AP)—William McNair, youthful newcomer to politics who has the backing of Roosevelt Democrats, tonight piled up a lead of more than 14,000 votes over John S. Herron, Mellon Republican, in the mayoralty race. In 258 out of 408 districts in the city the vote was:

McNair 65,925

Couzens' Son Detroit Winner.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8 (Wednesday).—(AP)—With nearly all of the city's 909 precincts reported Frank Couzens, 31 year old son of United States Senator James Couzens, early today had defeated his 69 year old opponent, Philip Breitmeyer, by almost two to one in Detroit's mayoral contest.

A proposal to seek a loan of $87,000,000 from the federal government for construction of a subway system was leading by more than two to one. Returns from 400 precincts gave 56,888 for and 26,113 against.

The election is nonpartisan.

In suburban Dearborn Mayor Clyde Ford, second cousin of Henry Ford, was reëlected over David Jones, who ran on a platform pledging himself to end what he considered the domination of the Ford Mofor company in Dearborn municipal politics. Mayor Ford received 7,926 votes to Jones' 3,986.

Boston Elects Democrat.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Frederick W. Mansfield, Democrat and lawyer, was elected mayor of Boston for the next four years, the complete vote of the city showed tonight. The vote in the city's 362 precincts in the six man nonpartisan contest were:

F. W. Mansfield [Dem.], 69,408; M. E. Nichols [Rep.], 67,499; W. J. Foley [Dem.], 60,931. Three other candidates, all Democrats, polled 48,000 votes among them.

Socialist Elected Mayor.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The Democratic administrations of two of the three largest cities in Connecticut were overturned today in municipal elections.

A Socialist, Jasper McLevy, was elected mayor of Bridgeport, by a plurality of nearly 6,000, in a three-cornered fight with the Democrat, James L. Dun, and the Republican, John G. Schwarz Jr.

In Hartford, Mayor William J. Rankin, Democrat, was denied reëlection as a split in the party sent the Republican, J. Watson Beach, into office by a narrow margin of about 2,000 votes.

One Democratic mayor, however, John W. Murphy of New Haven, held his office, defeating Maj. Edward L. White, Republican, by more than 7,000 votes after a quiet campaign.

Springfield, Mass., G. O. P.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 7.—(AP)—In a Republican sweep that carried many of that party's candidates into municipal office Henry Martens was elected mayor over his Democratic opponent, Theodore V. Quinlivan, today. As tabulation of the vote proceeded it appeared that Martens would have a majority of more than 4 to 3 over Quinlivan. The city government has been in the hands of the Democrats for the last two years.

Close Race in Toledo.

Toledo, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—A contest for mayor of Toledo which was close enough to make the result a toss-up was being waged tonight between Addison Q. Thacher, incumbent, and Solon T. Klotz, with a third candidate trailing.

A total of 136 precincts had been tabulated unofficially out of the 318 in the city when Klotz led Thacher by less than 1,000 votes—14,477 to 13,558. The third man in the race, Dr. Walter H. Hartung, had polled 10,409 votes.

Thacher and Klotz both ran as independents. The former nominally is a Democrat and the latter a Socialist.

Buffalo Elects Democrat.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Buffalo today elected its first Democratic mayor since 1914, George J. Zimmerman, the party's county chairman, winning handily. Zimmerman's opponent was Philip C. Schaeffer.

U. S. PUTS NEW LIMIT ON LOANS TO CANAL BOARD

Interested Only in Work for Next Two Years.

Sanitary district officials learned for the first time yesterday that only those of its construction projects that can be completed in approximately two years will be given consideration in the allocation of easy money by the national public works administration.

The new interpretation of the act, given by Attorney Lloyd H. Landau, general solicitor for the PWA, doomed the plans of the district to get federal money for many of the major works in its sewage treatment program. Under mandate of the United States Supreme court this program must be completed by the end of 1938.

Plan Applications at Once.

It was announced that a series of subapplications are to be made at once for funds to finance immediate projects that will conform with Landau's interpretation. The first of these applications was decided upon yesterday at a conference of representatives of the sanitary district and the public works administration held in the offices of Frederick Z. Marx, counsel for the PWA in Illinois, at 120 South La Salle street.

A total of $5,000,000 will be sought for the construction of four new sections of the west side intercepting sewer. These sections will extend along the west bank of the Chicago river from Taylor street to about Augusta street. A branch into the loop district will run under Franklin street and Wacker drive to Michigan avenue.

Other subapplications will follow as rapidly as Philip Harrington, chief engineer of the sanitary district, can separate short term projects from the program that had formerly been considered as a whole.

Landau Tells New Policy.

In explaining the new policy Mr. Landau declared that the government is not interested now in projects that will not employ labor during the next two years. The sum of $120,000,000, originally proposed as the amount of a federal loan to the district, is out of the picture, he said, for it is not a question of using that sum but of how much work can be done in the two year period.

"When I say two years I don't mean 24 months, but, roughly speaking, about that time," said Mr. Landau. "We're concentrating all our efforts on creating jobs now and we don't want to allocate money for work that isn't going to be done for the next three, four, or five years—in a time somewhere beyond the present emergency."

"That's a brand new program to me," said Mr. Harrington. "We were never before asked to segregate our work, but I'll have to go over our projects and pick out the ones that can be finished in the next two years. It looks like our treatment plant is out of the picture."

Immediate Jobs the Goal.

"Well, the administration is not going to put $50,000,000 in a pot and wait three or four years to use it," said Mr. Marx.

"If we had a job that could start in the next six months and would run full blast for the next three years, would that be acceptable?" asked Mr. Harrington.

"I can't answer that now," said Mr. Landau. "It may be that at the end of two years you won't have to come to us for money or there may be more sums appropriated. My understanding is that the President is in favor of expanding the $3,300,000,000 allocated for public works to 5 billion dollars."

Lansing, Mich., Republican Elected to Legislature

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The voters in Michigan's capital city today gave the state's Democratic organization its first setback since last November's landslide by choosing a Republican to fill an unexpired term in the legislature. With 35 out of 37 precincts reported Allan MacDonald, Republican, was credited with 7,277 votes over his Democratic opponent, J. Gottlieb Reutter, who received 4,742.

VIRGINIA GOES DEMOCRATIC BY LARGE MAJORITY

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The Democratic slate for United States senate, governor and major state offices piled up a lead of nearly three to one in today's election on the basis of returns from nearly half of the state's precincts.

Harry Flood Byrd, seeking to continue in the senate seat he now fills by interim appointment, was far in front of Henry A. Wise, his Republican opponent, but lagged slightly behind the rest of the ticket. With 726 precincts reported, he had 49,117 to 19,177 for Wise.

George C. Peery, former chairman of the state corporation commission, and John R. Saunders, incumbent attorney general, had better than three to one leads, in their races for governor and head of the state law department.

Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, a candidate to succeed himself led the ticket with 50,431 to 13,407 for J. Powell Royall, Republican.

BRITAIN ATTACKS U. S. PROGRAM TO CHEAPEN DOLLAR

But Also Announces Token Payment on Debt.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Seizing upon the first pause in President Roosevelt's campaign to depreciate the dollar, Great Britain today "cracked down" on the American monetary policy at three points.

The triple counter attack which England launched, as viewed by Washington officials, has two objectives. First, a retaliation against America's failure to reduce the British war debts, and, second, warding off the threat to England's foreign trade which President Roosevelt's depreciation of the dollar implies.

Will Drop Tariff Truce.

The three British moves today were:

1. Walter Runciman, head of the British board of trade, announced England's intention of withdrawing from the world tariff truce, a move aimed to choke off with higher duties American imports which have been facilitated by the dollar's slump.

2. Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, announced in the house of commons that Great Britain would make a token payment of $7,500,000 on her war debt installment due Dec. 15.

3. The gold value of the dollar in London was forced up when the dollar price of gold in the British market was allowed to slump 52 cents an ounce over night. In addition, the supply of gold in the London market almost doubled.

Try to Manipulate Pound.

Officials in Washington, who had long awaited British reprisals against the dollar depreciation plan, were deeply disturbed tonight, seeing in the British tariff move the beginning of what may be a currency debasing war. They admitted that England will endeavor to manipulate the pound, which had been forced up over the old gold standard parity, downward in order to maintain the advantage in world trade which grows out of a depreciated currency.

Great Britain pounced on the Roosevelt monetary program the first time that it was left unprotected. Because of the election holiday in New York, the reserve bank there was closed and unable to buy gold abroad as it has been doing.

At the same time that the New York Reserve bank was forced out of foreign markets the Reconstruction Finance corporation was obliged by the New York holiday to leave the domestic price for newly mined gold steady at yesterday's price of $32.84 an ounce. This is the first time since the gold buying began that the price has not been advanced.

Let Go a Broadside.

With America unable to continue today, either at home or abroad, its policy of higher gold prices and cheaper dollars, England let go a broadside. Each of the moves she made ripped at least a temporary hole in the depreciation of the dollar which President Roosevelt has been endeavoring to achieve.

The slump in the London gold price, which was in effect an increase in the dollar's gold value, was withheld until the day when America was out of the market. The supply of gold on the London market doubled today, coinciding with a decreased demand caused by America's forced withdrawal from buying.

Neville Chamberlain's announcement that Great Britain will make a $7,500,000 war debt payment was an indirect announcement that England will be in the market buying dollars. This will tend to offset the selling of dollars and buying of pounds which has accompanied American gold purchases abroad.

Most Direct Slap.

The most direct slap of all at the depreciated dollar was the announced intention of abrogating the tariff truce arranged before the world economic conference. Cheapness of the dollar in terms of the pound sterling has made imports into England profitable. The tariff will be raised to prevent this flood of imports.

Higher tariffs to stop imports from countries with depreciated currency is a move which was advocated in this country before the dollar went off the gold standard.

Commerce department officials today explained that the British board of trade, the body which announced withdrawal from the tariff truce, has power to raise British tariffs by proclamation. For this reason they expect retaliation to be swift.

Failure of the war debt discussions to reach a final refunding agreement and the arrangement to make a token payment was made simultaneously in London and Washington this morning. President Roosevelt's statement, in which he said that the token payment would not be a default, was read to the British parliament. The President said also that the fact that condition now prevented a settlement would be to prejudice discussions at a later date.

Expect Other Token Payments.

Officials expect that some of the other governments also will make "token" installments in December instead of openly defaulting. Last June, when Great Britain paid $10,000,000 on an installment of $79,950,000, Italy, Czechoslovakkia, Rumania, and Latvia also made small token payments. Finland, which then owed $148,592, was the only debtor to meet its obligations in full. France, Poland, Jugo-Slavia, Lithuania, and Estonia defaulted.

Had the negotiators for Great Britain and the United States reached definite conclusions, some of the other debtor nations, it is believed, would have sought immediate discussions of the long range status of their debts. They have been holding back, awaiting the outcome of the current talks about the British debt. These failing, the belief is that while some of them may seek assurance that "token" payments will be accepted without prejudice, overtures will be restricted to such representations.

It has been felt that the British government, which in its original debt funding accepted stiffer terms than most of the other nations, was in the strongest position to seek a revision, which might set the stage for a general clearing up of the whole program.

DANCER INJURED

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

DUISBURG, Germany, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Mary Wigman, the dancer, was in a hospital today suffering from a broken arm, sustained when she slipped on a dimly lighted staircase as she was leaving a stage where she had been performing. Miss Wigman, who caused a storm of comment when she paid her first visit to the United States in 1930, is recognized as a leader of the modern dance. In one of her dances she spins like a whirling dervish for seven minutes. Few dancers can do this for more than three minutes.

Fog Forces Lindberghs to Abandon Hop to Geneva

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Heavy fog forced Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh to abandon a flight to Geneva, Switzerland, today after they had flown part of the way over Belgium and France. Returning to Holland, where they arrived a few days ago from France, the Americans landed safely near Waalhaven airport.

BRITAIN TO PAY U. S. A 'TOKEN' IN DEBASED DOLLAR

London Repudiates Old Funding Agreement.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 7.—A "token" payment of $7,500,000 in American money will be presented to the United States by Great Britain on Dec. 15 in lieu of the total war debt installment due on that date of $117,670,765.

[At current exchange rates this token payment would amount to about $4,875,000 in gold.]

This announcement was made today before a crowded opening session of the house of commons by Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer. The December token payment will be delivered in rubber dollars, the value of which has been constantly bouncing up and down, as against the Indian silver which was chosen last June under special powers voted to President Roosevelt by congress last spring. These powers enabled him to receive a $10,000,000 token payment in silver valued at 50 cents an ounce. Britain still owes $65,950,000 on the installment which was due June 15.

Britain Repudiates Agreement.

Both payments are regarded by Great Britain not as payments on the debt as it is now funded, and still less as the interest thereon, Chamberlain said. Britain does not propose to meet its obligations represented in the funding settlement any longer. Both the June payment and the forthcoming December payment are presented to the United States merely as a recognition of the debt and as capital payments to be considered when a new agreement, if any, is reached.

They are made because Britain cannot afford to default—an action which would be popularly supported in this country, but which cannot be adopted because it might set a bad example to Britain's debtors, such as Argentina and Austria.

The commons was packed because it was known that not only would Chamberlain make a pronouncement on war debts but that many other important statements were pending. The members spilled into the surrounding galleries and some had to stand behind the speaker's chair.

Chamberlain Makes Statement.

"The discussions regarding war debts have now been concluded," Chamberlain said. "It has, unfortunately, not proved possible to reach an agreement with the United States for a final settlement.

"The government, however, recognizes the difficulties existing by reason of the unsettled economic and financial situation and has, accordingly, informed the United States that the government is prepared to make on Dec. 15 next a further payment of $7,500,000 in United States currency in acknowledgment of the debt pending a final settlement.

"The government has stated it is ready to resume negotiations on the general question whenever, after consultation with the President, it might appear that this could usefully be done."

Bolts Tariff Truce.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—The house of commons was told in a dramatic session today that Great Britain intends to withdraw from the world tariff truce on Dec. 7.

Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, was cheered when he said the tariff truce negotiated last summer by American Ambassador Norman H. Davis no longer is of any practical value because four nations have given notices of withdrawal and two have made reservations.

The tariff armistice was negotiated prior to the convening of the world economic conference. The Netherlands, the Irish Free State, Sweden and Switzerland have given notice of withdrawal from the truce, and France and Denmark have made reservations.

The truce was planned as a cornerstone of the economic parley and required all the arts of diplomacy that the American envoy could muster.

It was planned to break a vicious circle of tariff warfare, but when nothing was built on the keystone by the conference it began to crumble.

ARGENTINA OPENS BRITISH TRADE 'SCOOP' TO U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 7.—The Argentine government has virtually torpedoed the Anglo-Argentine trade treaty, which was formally ratified tonight. President Augustin Justo last night signed a decree extending the same trade concessions given to Great Britain to all nations, including the United States.

British commercial circles here were too astounded to comment today. The decree came as a surprise, since it was generally assumed that the concessions given Britain would be extended only to such countries as Italy and France, with whom Argentina has treaties containing the most favored nation clause.

RELIEF CHEATER GETS SENTENCE OF SIX MONTHS

Warrants Are Issued for 11 for Alleged Frauds.

One relief cheater was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction and warrants were issued for eleven alleged cheaters yesterday in the drive to clean up the rolls of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. The sentence was imposed upon Vernie Anderson, 39 years old, 5924 Aberdeen street, an ex-bartender, whose wife was found to have a bank account of $1,275.

Anderson was tried before Judge Leon Edelman in the stock yards court. He offered no defense and was not represented by an attorney. After he was sentenced he was taken away to begin serving him term immediately. His wife, Hilma, faces charges in the Women's court growing out of the same offense.

Increases Taxes, Says Judge.

"A man like this makes taxes higher and makes people believe there is graft in the relief commission," Judge Edelman said in sentencing Anderson. "The public is best served by putting him away for a while."

The complaint was brought by Raymond Nelson of the Cook county bureau of public welfare. Frederick R. Nyberg, counsel for the relief commission, outlined the charges.

The eleven warrants were taken out by James A. Peterson, attorney in charge of the relief investigations for the commission, before Judge Joseph H. McGarry in the new relief court at 11th and State streets.

Named in Warrants.

Those named and the amount they are charged with having obtained under false pretenses follow:

CHARLES SHACK, 3634 West Roosevelt road, $93.23.

HUBERT SPURRIER, 5670 Avondale avenue, $350.95.

ELMA HARRICHUK, 715 Reese court, $95.88.

ROBERT STEVENSON, 5222 Wood street, $48.75.

MARSHALL McNULTY, 2119 Gladys avenue, $131.35.

JOHN ALLEN, 3356 South Lowe avenue, $35.

COOLEY DALEY, 2240 Jackson street, $44.79.

Peterson announced that Robert J. Dunham, chairman of the commission, has instructed him to draw up a new form of affidavit that will have to be signed by all persons now receiving relief or who apply for aid later. The affidavit will permit more rigorous prosecution of relief frauds in the future, he said.

BUS LINES CUT FARES TO WEST 15 TO 25 PCT.

Reductions of 15 to 25 per cent in bus line fares between Chicago and west coast points were announced yesterday by officials attending a meeting of the National Bus Traffic association in the Congress hotel. L. B. Markel, president of the association, said that the reductions, with some exceptions, would become effective at once.

Other reductions will be made as quickly as practicable, he said. The modifications of the rates grow out of competition with the western railroads, many of which recently cut fares.

Approximately eighty-six bus lines which are members of the bus association have agreed to reduce their fares to retain their business. In a conference yesterday between representatives of the association and the independent bus companies the latter decided to reduce their rates to maintain their present competitive status with the organized group. Independent bus company fares will be slightly lower than those of the association members.

As an indication of the fare changes by the association, fares to Los Angeles and San Francisco from Chicago will be $27.50 and $29.50, respectively, in place of the previous rates of $34.50 to either destination. Bus rates to points each of Chicago will not be changed, since rail fares to the east were not reduced, it was stated.

out—precedent according to veterans. He, a Democrat, spoke through the lips of a Republican member. Thomas J. Stack, a Peoria Republican, read a press release from the governor's office, and that contribution to the debate was considered the best final summation of argument for the bond issue idea and against the minority counter proposals. After Stack read it to the house, he changed his vote and supported all of the bills.

"The public and the members of the legislature already have my assurance," read the governor's statement, "that if, by any remote possibility, the bond referendum is not carried, or any other circumstance arises to make the bond issue ineffective, a special session of the legislature [unless it can be done at the next regular session] will be called promptly to pass legislation to relieve in all events real estate from added taxation for relief. The legislature will surely support such measures.

"In view of my stated purpose of reducing real estate taxes, I have been opposed to use of the retailers' occupational [sales] tax after Jan. 1 for any other purpose than that of reducing taxation on real estate."

Picks Up Seven Votes.

This was read just before the roll call on the key measure of the Graham bill, a vote which substantiated advance predictions that the plan had picked up at least seven votes to carry last week's total of 95 up to the 102 necessary to avert delay. The vote was 103 to 45. Then followed the other five bills in rapid succession, three of them gathering 103 votes and the other two 104 votes. The negative totals on the five were 40.

ASKING 16 MILLIONS IN DENTAL CARE FOR NEW YORK CHILDREN

New York, Nov. 7.—[Special.]—A systematic plan to provide for the dental needs of the 1,600,000 pre-school age children by the department of health at a cost of $16,000,000 a year for the first two years and of half that amount for each succeeding year has been presented for approval to the board of directors of the First District Dental society.

The plan has the backing of Health Commissioner Dr. Shirley W. Wynne and would entail the expenditure of $10 a year for each child for the first two years and of $5 a year for each year thereafter.

Dr. Charles Gordon Heyd, past president of the Medical society of the state of New York, last night expressed his approval of the plan at a meeting of that society. He said it costs $105.11 a year to educate a child and that an additional $10 a year would be "money well spent."

Exception to the project was voiced by Dr. Waldo H. Mork, past president of the society. He said the health department's appropriation for the entire city is $5,000,000.

CHARGE RUSSIANS KILL 200 CITIZENS OF MANCHUKUO

TOKIO, Nov. 7.—(AP)—A Rengo [Japanese] news agency dispatch from Harbin, Manchukuo, today said Manchukuan authorities had ordered an investigation of belated reports concerning "the massacre of 200 Manchukuo citizens" early in October in the Siberian village of Petrovsky, near Blagoveshcensk. The reports, the sources of which were not stated, said bands wearing soviet army uniforms twice raided Petrovsky, which, although in Russian territory, is inhabited mainly by Chinese.

DISMISSES NEW INTEREST SUIT AGAINST SMALL

Judge Friend Holds He Has No Jurisdiction.

Circuit Judge Hugo M. Friend yesterday dismissed, for want of jurisdiction, the bill by which Attorney General Kerner sought to recover from Len Small, former governor and state treasurer, additional payments of interest on public funds which Small withheld while he was treasurer.

Charles W. Hadley, special assistant attorney general who is prosecuting the case, announced that an appeal will be taken from Judge Friend's ruling. Attorney General Kerner will come to Chicago for a consultation before the final order of dismissal is entered.

Small was indicted and acquitted at Waukegan in 1922 on criminal charges growing out of the retention of the interest, but the Supreme court, in a civil suit started in the Circuit court of Sangamon county, at Springfield, ordered that he make an accounting of the money which he got and return it to the state.

Agree on Compromise.

The accounting indicated that he owned approximately $1,300,000, but Oscar E. Carlstrom, than attorney general, agreed to a compromise judgment under which Small repaid only $850,000 and the case was dismissed. In his present bill, Attorney General Kerner sought to recover additional damages, on the ground that the state had been injured by a fraud of the then attorney general, its own counsel in the case.

Attorney Werner W. Schroeder yesterday argued before Judge Friend on demurrers to the bill, charging that the court lacked jurisdiction to review the ruling of a court of equal jurisdiction in Sangamon county, and that while a verdict might be set aside on grounds of fraud by the defendant, there is no provision in law for setting one aside on grounds of fraud by the plaintiff's attorney.

"It is conceded by all," ruled Judge Friend, "that this court could not by a bill of review review the proceedings of another court of equal jurisdiction. There is another line of decisions, however, under which a court of equity has broad power to impeach a decree on grounds of fraud.

Doubts Right of State.

"This, however, is a direct proceeding, asking that a court disregard a settlement, as the plaintiff does not want an attorney general to have the benefits of a fraud. There is very, very grave doubt as to the state's right to maintain this bill.

"The salient fact is that this bill asks that the same case be tried over, and I have no jurisdiction, because it is a direct attack upon a previous decree. The bill is therefore dismissed for want of jurisdiction."

Small sat in court while the action was dismissed. A similar suit against Fred E. Sterling, former state treasurer and later lieutenant governor, for interest which he received on state funds while he held the former position is to be heard soon by Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan.

U. S. AND FOUR STATES FIGHT FOR SAMMONS

Outlaw Wanted for Wide Range of Crimes.

Four states and the United States government were fighting last night for the privilege of trying James [Fur] Sammons, Chicago public enemy, for an assortment of crimes ranging from attempted bribery to murder. The Indiana authorities, who arrested Sammons for intoxication at Cedar Lake on Monday, refused temporarily to accede to any of the claims for his custody.

There was no doubt in Sammons' mind as to where he wished to be tried. He greeted with a smile Chicago detectives sent to the Lake county jail at Crown Point to get him and announced he would willingly return here to stand trial on an attempted murder charge.

Chicago Is Turned Down.

But Prosecutor Robert Estill of Lake county refused to permit the Chicago detectives to take Sammons back with them. It was pointed out that Sammons has always had things pretty much his own way in the Chicago courts. Illinois has commuted a death sentence and paroled him from prison on several occasions.

A strong claim for Sammons was put in by State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor of Baltimore. Sammons is wanted there for participation in a $47,000 pay roll robbery in 1926. Willie Niemoth, another Chicago gangster who was Sammons' accomplice in the robbery, is now serving the third year of a ten year sentence in the Maryland penitentiary.

Indiana itself may keep Sammons and prosecute him. The charges placed against him since he was arrested in a roadhouse waving a revolver include assault with intent to kill, carrying a revolver without a permit, carrying concealed weapons, public drunkenness, and statutory charges based upon his acquaintanceship with Mary Mitchell, a 22 year old blonde who was arrested with him.

Bonds on these various charges aggregated $37,000. A telephone call late yesterday indicated that Sammons has powerful friends backing him. The caller asked the court clerk in Crown Point if a $35,000 certified check would be accepted as bail. The clerk told the caller to appear in person, but he had not done so at a late hour.

Wanted in Wisconsin.

The fourth state interested in Sammons is Wisconsin. A wire from the Sheriff at Shawano said that Sammons was wanted there for murder and bank robbery.

Government agents also appeared at the Crown Point jail. They examined the $3,200 in currency found upon him in an effort to determine if any of it was counterfeit. They also announced that Mann act charges might be placed against the gangster.

Prosecutor Estill said he was convinced that Sammons had played a major part in the crime wave that has swept Indiana recently following the escape of ten convicts from the Michigan City prison. The prosecutor hoped to identify the gangster for bank robbery.

The attempted bribery charge against the prisoner was based upon the testimony of Deputy Sheriff Jack Cook that Sammons tried to give Cook money when the deputy arrested him.

A Fugitive from Chicago.

Sammons has been a fugitive from Chicago since last September when he forfeited a $20,000 bond by failing to appear in court for trial on charges of trying to kill three guards who were wounded during an $85,000 pay roll robbery at the International Harvester company plant in 1926. Sammons already has been tried on the Harvester robbery charge. He was convicted, but the Illinois Supreme court reversed the conviction.

It was revealed yesterday that the forfeited $20,000 bond has not been collected by the state. Two men scheduled the property for the bond. They are Vasileke Alexopoulos, 2154 Montrose avenue, and Nicholas Alex, 2604 Wentworth avenue. Their attorneys made a motion to vacate the judgment in the case and arguments are to be made on the motion Nov. 29 before Judge Philip L. Sullivan. William Carroll, in charge of the bond department of the state's attorney's office, said he would resist efforts to have the forfeiture set aside.

SLEIGHT OF HAND TRICK FAILS AND PENALTY'S DEATH

Angelo Alonghi, 1336 South 48th avenue, Cicero, was found beaten to death in his automobile in Stickney last Saturday. He was an alcohol peddler and a number of people suspected that he had been slain because he was infringing on the territory of some syndicate.

Yesterday, however, Investigators Joseph Mooney, Willis Brennan, and Carmen Varlinga of the state's attorney's office solved the mystery of his death. Alonghi was killed because, in trying to flip a spoon into a cup, he was so inept that he hit Jerry Devino, 37 years old, 3944 South Clinton avenue, Stickney, in the eye.

The scene of the unsuccessful sleight of hand trick was Fioravanti Ringo's saloon at 1406 South 50th avenue, Cicero. Devino showed his impatience by hitting Alonghi with a chair and then kicking him until he was dead. Then he went away. Ringo and his bartender, Leonard Guarnere, irritated that Devino would do such a thing in the saloon, wrapped the body in burlap and wire and drove it, in Alonghi's car, to the vicinity of Devino's home.

The three men have confessed their parts in the killing and its aftermath and two witnesses have corroborated them.

Tries to Kill Self by Driving Car Over Cliff

Frank Coduti, 40 years old, 4219 Gladys avenue, attempted to end his life yesterday by driving his automobile over a 70 foot cliff in the lake front park at Lake Forest. The car was wrecked against a tree half way down the slope, but Coduti escaped with a cut on his forehead. He told Lake Forest police, who gave him first aid and sent him home, that he was despondent over a quarrel with his wife, Rose, whom he married four months ago.

DROPS CONTEMPT TERMS IMPOSED ON 2 POLICEMEN

Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland yesterday vacated sentences for contempt of court that he had meted out last week to Lieut. James J. Killackey and Patrolman Rocco Filetti of the vehicle bureau. Killackey had been sentenced to 15 days and Filetti to 10 days in the house of correction for disregarding the instructions of the judge by arresting drivers of the Eagle Cab company who were operating without licenses.

The vacation of the sentences came to light while Otto Weiner and William Daly, assistant corporation counsels, were taking legal steps to have the sentences set aside. They had filed a writ of error with the Appellate court, but, according to Attorney Weiner, when they attempted to obtain the court records, they were told that Judge Holland had impounded them. On returning again to ask for the files, they were informed that the sentences had been vacated.

SEIZE HOODLUMS AFTER THEIR CAR HITS 2 OTHERS

Four young hoodlums, fleeing in a rain of bullets from members of a police motor squad, last night crashed their car into two others, overturning the first and wrecking the second, at Washington boulevard and Kostner avenue. The policemen continued the pursuit and captured the four several blocks further south.

The driver of the overturned car was Harry G. Pierce, 946 Edgecomb place. Driving the one that was wrecked was Miss Gertrude Webb, 5501 Washington boulevard, a teacher at the Marshall High school. Both escaped serious injury.

During the chase about twenty shots were fired by the policemen. William Terrell, Michael Fleming, and Arthur Marsh of the Fillmore street station. Those arrested, all between 19 and 22 years old, are Armand Cozzi, 2222 Taylor street; Nicholas de Pietro, 2150 Polk street; Frank Fratto, 825 South Leavitt street, and Vincent Cardamoni, 2140 DeKalb street.

FIVE WISCONSIN FINANCIAL MEN ARE INDICTED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Five officers of Madison financial institutions today were indicted by a Dane county grand jury.

The most prominent of the men brought under charges for the first time are Edward B. Steensland, former president and now chairman of the board of directors of the Union Trust company, Madison, and L. D. Atkinson, vice president of the company.

The two men deferred pleas to Nov. 15 on eighteen charges involving alleged fraudulent advertising in stock sales and violation of the state blue sky laws in the sale of split loans on out of state real estate.

The men were given until Wednesday morning to furnish a bond of $5,000 each.

Conrad F. Martens, president of the Northwestern Securities company, was indicted for selling stock without a license and is held under bonds of $2,500.

Ray H. Farness, former officer of the Joseph Boyd company, which failed, and who is awaiting trial for banking law violations, was indicted on two counts of obtaining money by false pretenses in the amount of $1,000 and for selling stock in violation of the securities law. His bond was set at $2,500.

W. J. Hobbins, president of the Capital City bank, Madison, which failed, and who has appealed to the Supreme court on a conviction and sentence to from one to three years in prison, again was brought into court on five charges of embezzlement. His bond was increased from $5,000 to $10,000.

With the exception of Farness, who entered a plea of not guilty, pleas of all the men will be taken on Nov. 15.

Held to Grand Jury in Shooting of Neighbor

Ignatius Hagen, 53 years old, 959 North Kedvale avenue, was held to the grand jury in bond of $2,000 yesterday by Judge Jay A. Schiller on a charge of assault to kill. Hagen is alleged to have shot Stanley Karzinski, 24 years old, 2642 Hirsch street, when the latter, with some friends, created a disturbance in the apartment building in which Hagen lives. Karzinski has since recovered.

COOKERY SCHOOL STARTS WITH AN OVERFLOW CROWD

Women Throng Ballroom on South Side.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN

If there had been more chairs available yesterday at the Trianon ballroom at 62d street and Cottage Grove avenue there would have been several hundred more pupils than the 5,000 who packed the place for the opening south side session of THE TRIBUNE'S third annual cooking school. The capacity was reached, however, half an hour before the program started, and those who came on time found themselves both figuratively and literally out in the cold because so many others had come early.

ERNEST AMIET. [Former chef.]

The first arrival took her station at the main entrance on Cottage Grove avenue at 8:30 a. m., ushers reported. Doors were opened at 10:30. Scores of disappointed women besieged each of the various entrances for nearly an hour after the big show began at 12:30, waiting around in the hope that they could claim the places of any who left early. But those who came stayed, so gradually the later comers drifted away, to try their luck again today.

Entertainment and Instruction.

Under the directing hand of Phil Maxwell as master of ceremonies, the features of the entertainment that spiced the culinary instruction of Mrs. Ida M. Chitwood went onto the stage like a professional revue.

Margery Maxwell, operatic soprano, sang the Jewel song from Faust, and the crowd loved it. She gave them "I Love Life" as an encore, and they let her and her accompanist, Miss Ruth Shelters, go reluctantly.

Vincent Lopez, whose fingers are as skilled on the ivories as in clasping a baton to lead his orchestra, sat down at the big piano and dashed off "Canadian Capers" and "Nola." He had to come back for a series of bows.

Sheila Defies Laryngitis.

Sheila Barrett of the Chez Paree proved herself a trouper when she got out of a sickbed and appeared to give a few sparkling imitations of celebrities in spite of laryngitis. The Doring Sisters, W-G-N radio attraction, demonstrated their own brand of harmony. Announcer Russ Russell presented them.

Erik Dahlberg, maitre d'hotel of the Drake, stepped to the stage to tell the secrets of "Bombe Parisienne" as it is concocted in the hotel's kitchens, with the aid of Chef Theodore Rooms. And Irene Rich of the films, radiant as always, captivated the "students" with a brief little talk on how to keep slender.

Carl Craven launched the entire performance with a rap of his baton and a summons to sing the old folk songs everybody loves. Joan Kay, blonde and brown eyed, strummed her ukulele and crooned her radio hits into the loud speaker, and a whole coterie of clever youngsters from the Ethel and Gertrude Morgan School of dancing, in vivid costumes, won the audience with their novelties and vim.

But nobody could take the spotlight away from Mrs. Chitwood, who lectured on what to cook and how to cook it.

Mary Meade, cooking editor of THE TRIBUNE, welcomed back the "leading lady" of the production and presented her to her class for one of those whirlwind demonstrations of what can be done with excellent ingredients and the desire to cook wisely and well. French piecrust was the first thing Mrs. Chitwood chose to make, because it is one of the most baffling of tasks to the average cook.

To match that crust, there was a delectable cream cheese filling that utilized both vanilla and orange flavoring, and which had the egg whites folded into the filling instead of piled on top for a meringue. Then came California prune pickles, stuffed peppers au gratin, spaghetti Milanese, and coffee marshmallow cream.

Today's Program for School.

Phil Harris, orchestra leader, who deserted Hollywood to appear at the College inn, will be among today's headliners at the second session of the south side cooking school. Frida Savini, opera soprano, will sing during the intermission. Frank Bennett, with his wife and teammate, Cathryn Bennett, will direct the community singing.

Charles Willard and Kathryn Penn will come from W-G-N, to be introduced by Pierre Andre. Lillian Gordoni will stage a "Musical Pot Pie." Ernest Amiet, gold medal winning chef of the Palmer house, will demonstrate one of his favorite recipes, and Miss Ethel McDonald, home economist of the L. C. Wiswell company, will talk briefly on cooking.

VIRGINIA NEGRO WILL BE TRIED FOR MURDER OF MRS. ILSLEY, MAID

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Preparations for the murder trial of George Crawford, Negro, in Circuit court here on Dec. 12 were started promptly today by state and defense counsel following the overruling by the court of a motion to quash the indictments.

Judge James L. McLemore of Suffolk refused to grant the motion on the grounds that no evidence was produced in the hearing yesterday that Judge J. R. H. Alexander of Leesburg has excluded Negroes from the grand jury that indicted Crawford because of race or color.

Crawford was sitting in front of the judge's bench as the jurist made his ruling. Immediately Commonwealth Attorney John Galleher demanded immediate trial.

Crawford is charged with the slaying of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, well known in this fox hunting and horse raising country, and her maid, Mrs. Nina Buckner, at the former's Middleburg estate on Jan. 13, 1932.

Only recently he was returned from Massachusetts after an extradition battle that finally reached the Supreme court. He has been kept in the Fairfax county jail at Alexandria, but was brought here yesterday and again today under a heavy armed escort of state troopers.

U. S. JUDGE CUTS STEVENS HOTEL TAXES $76,989

Orders Receiver to Pay One-Half of Penalty.

Attorneys for the Stevens hotel, having failed to obtain from County Judge Jarecki a remission of half the penalties on the hotel's delinquent taxes for 1929 and 1930, yesterday got from Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson an order upon the receiver for the hotel to pay the taxes and only half the penalties.

It was the first case in local courts in which the federal court has taken an action, implied or direct, to cut state and local tax bills. The hotel is in federal receivership. Judge Wilkerson expressed some doubt as to his jurisdiction in the matter.

"I'm not certain that my order is a complete release for half of the penalties," he said.

If County Treasurer McDonough gives the hotel a receipt in full for its 1929 and 1930 taxes when the payment is made, within a few days, the federal court order would save the hotel $76,989 in penalties. The hotel owes a total of $866,868 for the two years, of which $153,979 consists of the penalties which were halved.

Orders Taxes Collected.

Some time ago Judge Jarecki instructed the state's attorney to intervene in other courts where receiverships of tax delinquent properties were pending in order to collect the taxes. Several weeks ago attorneys for the hotel appeared before him and told him that they would abide by a previous promise to pay the hotel's back taxes when earnings rose as a result of World's Fair business if he would reduce the penalties by one-half.

Judge Jarecki may do this under the law, in cases where objections were filed to the payment of the taxes, but the statute provides that the objections must have been filed in good faith. As a test of good faith, the judge has ruled, the taxpayer must have paid at least half of his tax bill when the objection was filed.

The Stevens had paid only 40 per cent of its 1929 bill, and none of its 1930 bill. Since it did not come within his rule, Judge Jarecki refused to cut the penalties. Arthur Hall, receiver for the hotel, then filed the petition before Judge Wilkerson on which yesterday's action was taken.

Call Attorney as Witness.

Assitant State's Attorney Francis Clamitz, appearing for the county, argued that the County court has taken jurisdiction in the matter of tax penalties. For the hotel Attorney Paul Hassell of West and Eckert, counsel for the receiver, was called as a witness.

He testified that the receiver was not appointed until June 3, 1932, and urged that he could not be held responsible for failure of the previous managers of the hotel to pay 1929 and 1930 taxes. The hotel has paid 75 per cent of its 1931 taxes, he added.

Attorney Clamitz did not take an appeal from Judge Wilkerson's order, and his superior, Hayden N. Bell, head of the civil law department of the state's attorney's department, refused to say whether one will be sought later. Judge Jarecki and Treasurer McDonough refused to discuss the matter of the issuance of a receipt in full for the 1929 and 1930 taxes when the hotel makes its payment of only half of the penalty.

Evanston Hotel Robber Is Captured; Confesses

Evanston and Chicago police yesterday arrested J. LaForte in his room at 840 Montrose avenue, as one of the bandits participating in a robbery Monday night on the Ridgeview hotel, 901 Maple avenue, Evanston. Two men and a woman raided the hotel, got $700 from the safe, and then kidnaped E. S. Braden, the night manager. They released him later. LaForte was identified by Braden, and police said he admitted driving the bandit car. In his room police found two guns and $160. Detectives said they were seeking Don Blanco and his wife, Beatrice Blanco, for questioning in the case.

MR. SKENDROVICH SHOWS REGRET WITH A BRICK

In the era of wild money that ended in 1929 John Skendrovich, a tailor, invested his savings in a flat building at 1416 Fullerton avenue. The crash came and he lost the building. Monday he passed the tailor shop which he had deserted to become a landlord. In it another tailor was sewing a seam. John Skendrovich at this point rebelled against fate. He shied a brick through the window. Yesterday he told Judge Jay J. Schiller that he couldn't stand to see what might have been if he had attended to his sewing. The judge, after sentencing him to six months in the Bridewell, granted him probation.

NRA AN OLD TEXT IN A NEW COVER, G. O. P. IS TOLD

Ex-Gov. Harding of Iowa Hits U. S. Program.

William L. Harding, former governor of Iowa, attacked the NRA in a vigorous old fashioned oration last night before members of the Hamilton club. He was the principal speaker at one of the meetings arranged by the club to promote the "rejuvenation" of the Republican party in Cook county.

"There is nothing new about the NRA," declared Mr. Harding. "This tripping beauty, bedecked in short skirts, is as old almost as the human race. History is replete with efforts similar to this program all back along its corridor.

"Just one illustration. The record of history is definite on the subject of debts. Every nation that has gone down into the abyss owes its fall to the destructive and deadly load of public and private debts. A case concerning Julius Caesar, as recorded by Suetonius, reveals a ghastly parallel.

On Caesar's Debt Laws.

"Concerning Caesar's debt laws you read: 'As to debts, he disappointed those who looked for their cancellation, which was often agitated'—[where have we heard that before?]—'but finally decreed that the debtors should satisfy their creditors according to the valuation of their possessions at the price paid for them before the civil war, deducting from the principal whatever interest had been paid, an arrangement which wiped out a fourth of their indebtedness.'

"And where is the Roman empire today? It didn't participate in the late war. It sank long ago beneath a load of public works and public debts.

"NRA is not a new book written in 1933. The text is the same as that used in 1917 and 1918 in the Wilson administration. The cover of the book has been changed, that is true. The picture of the blue eagle has been printed thereon. However, in the text you find the government through inspectors, extra officials doing extra-legal things under the guise of emergency, as was done in the historical period of the world war and thereafter.

Discusses Price Fixing.

"The country merchant by the roadside has been told when to get up and when not to. Wages are fixed, hours are fixed, milk prices are fixed, everything that is paid out is fixed. Income has not been fixed.

"Individual initiative, the right to run your own business, the privilege of doing your own thinking, have been denied. Everything has been concentrated in Washington. Now, I may make mistakes. But I want to make my own mistakes. I don't want Hugh Johnson to make them for me.

"If a citizen wants to breathe, if he wants to take a vacation, if he wants to buy a suit of underclothing, he patiently waits by the radio until the President of the United States issues a ukase at 10 o'clock Sunday evening.

"Then he goes forth and inquires as to his duties from the local committee. The local committee refers the matter to the county committee, and the county committee to the state committee, and the state committee to the national committee, down in Washington.

Then to the Brain Trust.

"The national committee refers the matter to the brain trust, and the brain trust dissects the inquiry, analyzes it, separates it on paper by the formula of Prof. Nut, then reassembles it and goes forth with a butcher knife and kills a million pigs.

"No, this is not the same representative democratic government of old. The NRA has been tried many times in the past. It has failed in every trial in the past, always has failed and always will fail. America has been, and will be again, a land where the individual can write his own ticket, ride in his own automobile and sleep as late in the morning as he sweetly wills."

COD AND VOH WANT SKM TO PAY TAXES PDQ

More About Du Page County Mixup.

The affairs of the RFC and of the HOLC are still mixed up with the troubles of the COD and the VOH, all because of the tax delinquency of SKM it was learned yesterday.

In this lexicon of abbreviations RFC stands for the Reconstruction Finance corporation. HOLC means the Home Owners' Loan corporation, which is financed by the RFC to aid home owners who face mortgage foreclosures.

VOH is the Village of Hinsdale and COD is the county of Du Page. SKM is Samuel K. Markman, a resident of COD and VOH, who is also a lawyer employed by HOLC as general counsel in the Chicago area.

Owes 10 Years' Taxes.

Attorney Markman is a home owner, who has been delinquent in his taxes for ten years, until at present he owes COD and VOH an aggregate of $8,233, much of it in accrued penalties. Yesterday Mrs. Retta K. Martin, county treasurer of COD, said that Markman had not paid anything on his delinquent taxes nor had he made any effort to compromise his delinquent bill. He has, however, paid half of his 1932 tax bill which now is in collection, she said.

Mrs. Martin explained that she had always offered Attorney Markman's home at the annual tax sale but she added that at no time had a tax buyer purchased a lien upon the property.

Says He Intends to Pay.

On Oct. 14, Mr. Markman said that he intended to pay his delinquent taxes, and that he had not done so in the past because of a dispute with a lien buyer who had purchased a tax lien several years ago. At his Chicago office yesterday a secretary said he was in Washington on business.

The connection between SKM and COD and VOH is obvious. The RFC is financed by TAXES, and in turn these TAXES are supplied to HOLC. The HOLC pays SKM a salary of $350 a month. But SKM has not paid his taxes to VOH and COD, and the financial affairs of both are in a precarious position because SKM is among the 35 per cent of the property owners of VOH and COD who are delinquent.

GARY MAN, FIRST TO LOSE EAGLE OF NRA, WINS IT BACK

Theodore Rahutis, Gary roadhouse proprietor, who was the first business man in the country to have his Blue Eagle taken from him by NRA authorities, had it back yesterday with five more emblems for good measure.

"I'm so glad to have it back I got some extra ones and plastered them up all over the place," he said. "They're going to stay there this time. Anybody who wants to investigate can do so because I'm doing my part."

During the month that followed the government's removal of the emblem on Oct. 6, Rahutis said his business fell off 50 per cent. The Blue Eagle had been taken from him because he failed to offer a defense to charges of his employés that he was violating the President's agreement regarding their hours and wages.

But Rahutis wanted it back so much he collected facts and figures that showed he was living up to the recovery act and presented them to the Gary compliance board. The board consulted NRA officials in Washington and was instructed to return the emblem if its members considered Rahutis deserved it.

JOHNSON ASKS FARMERS TO BACK UP PRESIDENT

Warns NRA and AAA Are Siamese Twins.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Condemning "malcontents and cheap politicians," Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator today appealed to the agricultural midwest, torn by the farm strike, to "give the President a chance."

"When malcontents, cheap politicians, or professional agitators declare the agricultural adjustment act is too slow," Johnson told more than a thousand business and civic leaders here in a luncheon address, "they are blocking recovery.

"Look well at these malcontents," he warned. "Find out if they ever did anything to help. Find out if they can be expected to be loyal supporters. Ask if they were leaders of the great delusion of 1929. Ask if theye were the ones who advocated doing nothing for agriculture the last twelve years, when agriculture sank to its lowest ebb.

Give Plan a Chance.

"Give the plan a chance to work. Who did as much for agriculture in as short a time as President Roosevelt? Give him a chance."

Gen. Johnson likened the NRA and the AAA to the Siamese twins, in appealing for support and coöperation of the country.

"The truth is," he continued, "the NRA and the AAA are the same thing. We can't succeed if the AAA fails and the AAA can't succeed if the NRA fails. The best way to help industry is to help the farmer and the best way to help the farmer is to help industry."

The farmer, he said, can do this by supporting the NRA and making it a success, not by "listening to chiselers and small time politicians."

The farm loan job has been a regular pineapple, much harder than mine," he added. "It is just getting into its stride. You are going to feel the effects of it out here very shortly.

"Wheat is not so bad. Dairy and live stock are the laggards.

"The Federation of Labor reports the NRA this week increased purchasing power 20 per cent. No one looking into the figures of the agricultural department the last 10 years can doubt this is going to boost the prices of all farm products. It is certain to act in dairy, meats, and poultry products. . . . If you want prices of these products to go down kill off NRA and let pay rolls decline.

"If you want to boost the NRA, boost the AAA. If you knock one, you knock the other down.

Farm Prices Lagging.

"I do know there has been a lag in farm prices, I do know when industrial prices were lagging farm prices were shooting up, but now industrial prices are going a little ahead of farm prices.

"You can't put four million men back to work without increasing industrial costs. I do not believe there is a farmer in this country who would advocate turning those four million men back on the streets as a method of reducing those costs."

Admitting there had been chiseling, gouging, and profiteering under the Blue Eagle, Johnson pointed out the last presidential exemption under the retail code excusing towns of populations of 2,500 or less from adhering to the code, which, he said, "eliminated price gouging in rural districts."

"Team work is the answer," he concluded. "If you want to get out of the depression play the game behind the President's leadership."

NRA A CHARTER, HE SAYS, OF 'THE RIGHT TO WORK'

Edward Filene, Boston, Defends Codes.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and chairman of the Massachusetts state recovery board, tonight said the NRA was not a code restricting American liberty but a charter of economic freedom without which political freedom becomes a mockery.

"It is a charter, in the first place," Filene said, "of man's right to live—not of some one's right to get a living if he is clever enough to get it at some one else's expense—but the right of every human being to get a living in accordance with the resources which are now available to human life.

Tories of '76 and '33.

The merchant drew an analogy between the Tories of the revolutionary era and the "Tories" of today. He described them as persons imbued with "loyalty to the established order, loyalty to the conviction that we must not, under any circumstances, depart from these traditions under which the social order has endured. . . . A Tory is not a person who is opposed on principle to some particular form of social order. What the Tory objects to is the forming of any social order."

"This government which America is now perfecting," Filene said, "is and can be no dictatorship. It is the very essence of democracy and is self-government in every real sense. That it will make mistakes we may be sure. That it will halt and fumble where haste is necessary, and that it will plunge ahead where caution would be the wiser course, is only to be expected. But that America, having once set out to achieve liberty in the machine age, will turn back because of the terrified shrieks of these modern Tories is to me almost unthinkable."

"On Way to Greater Liberty."

"One year ago this nation was sunk in cynicism and depression—spiritual as well as economic—but suddenly we became a nation filled with life and hope. We had settled no problems. Poverty and unemployment were as widespread as ever. No longer, however, did we view them as burdens to be borne until, by the grace of God, prosperity should leave its hiding place and reappear around the corner."

". . . I do not mean to be optimistic nor to minimize the tremendous tasks ahead of us. The changes we are now making are so fundamental and the social mechanism with which we are working is now so complicated that no immediate cure-all can be expected. But America has at last faced the realities. She has gloriously begun the task. She is on her way, in this year of 1933, to such prosperity and to such human liberty as mankind has never known before."

LITVINOV, RUSS ENVOY, GREETED BY ROOSEVELT

Recognition Discussion to Start Today.

recognition and that his course would depend on what sort of bargain could be struck.

It appears, however, that neither the Russians nor the promoters of recognition in the administration contemplate any actual settlement of the differences during these negotiations. What they are aiming at is recognition accomplished by an exchange of notes between Washington and Moscow in which each government will promise not to propagandize against the form of government of the other and in which the settlement of American claims against Russia and Russian counter-claims against the United States will be referred to experts representing each side.

Recognition Likely This Week.

If the President accedes to this program, recognition is likely to become an accomplished fact by the end of this week. This program represents a stand to which the soviets have inflexibly adhered. They have contended from the start that recognition must precede a settlement of the claims and counter claims.

With recognition in the bag, the soviets could prolong the discussion of claims and counter claims indefinitely or flatly refuse to settle. As to pledges not to propagandize against our form of government, such soviet promises to other countries have not proved worth the paper they were written on.

The administration is convinced, however, that the American people are not disposed to continue the attitude of intransigeance and would approve recognition on the basis of a compromise. Administration officials regard the reaction of the public to the possibility of recognition as distinctly favorable.

Will Seek Loans Here.

The soviets are talking of buying hundreds of millions of dollars worth of American machinery, cotton, pork, and other products—on credit. It has been proposed that the RFC advance perhaps as much as 150 millions of such credits. It is understood, however, that the matter of credits will not enter into the present negotiations, but will be deferred like the matter of claims and counter-claims.

Final settlement of debts and claims is believed to be a long way off. Russia has a claim for damages from American participation in allied intervention in 1918-1919 to offset a repudiated American governmental loan amounting to 325 million dollars with interest and private American claims filed to the amount of about 400 million dollars, including 86 millions for Russian bonds sold in the United States.

LITVINOV COMES SMILING

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Smiling and gay, looking like a fat, elderly cherub, Maxim Litvinov, soviet commissar for foreign affairs, landed in New York from the Berengaria this morning. He was taken off by a tender which brought him to quarantine to be met by James Dunn, state department chief of protocol. In delicate deference to the proletarian opinions of the country's distinguished guest, Mr. Dunn wore a black derby, thus discarding the usual top hat of diplomacy.

Litvinov, who is as particular about diplomatic niceties as even Mr. Dunn can be, had been warned in advance so his top hat also remained in its box. He wore a wide brimmed two gallon black felt and looked like a congressman from the west. Also, perhaps out of pure delicacy of feeling, there was an unusual number of policemen on the tug to see that some discontented Russian didn't pop up in a submarine and sink the country's guest.

Amused at Police Guard.

At Jersey City, where the party entrained for Washington shortly after 11 o'clock, there was also a crowd of policemen. There must have been more police on the job than newspaper photographers. All this mightily amused Litvinov, who is accustomed in his own country and elsewhere in Europe, to go about almost unguarded.

On the trip up the bay he expressed much interest in the statue of Liberty, which one of his party said extended a welcome to them with her face to the sea, and he was also keenly interested in the skyscrapers of lower Manhattan.

The trip to Washington was uneventful but was almost marred by an error which might have had grave diplomatic consequences had it not been discovered in time. The menu in the restaurant car was headed "Trip of Maxim M. Litvinov, assistant people's commissar for foreign affairs." When it was pointed out that Litvinov is commissar, not assistant, the menus were hurriedly withdrawn from circulation until the offending word had been blocked out.

Welcomed by Hull.

At Washington, Litvinov and his two assistants, Constantin Umansky and Ivan Divilkowsky, were welcomed by Secretary of State Hull and Col. Watson, the President's military aid. They drove at once to the house at 1637 Massachusetts avenue of Boris Skvirski, head of the Russian information bureau, who has been acting as a sort of unofficial ambassador. This will be their headquarters during their stay in Washington.

From this after a short rest, Litvinov drove alone to the White House, to make a formal call on the President. He arrived a little ahead of time and was shown into the Green room, where he waited for a few minutes until the President came down stairs and entered the Blue room. Litvinov was then conducted to the Blue room and introduced to the President by Mr. Dunn and Secretary Hull, and after a formal interchange of courtesies the whole party moved over to the Red room, where they were received by Mrs. Roosevelt.

After eight minutes of general conversation the Russian commissar left. He emerged on the steps of the White House to face another battery of cameras and he was photographed smiling broadly in the center of a row of brilliantly uniformed naval and military officers.

To Talk Business Today.

Litvinov refused consistently today to answer questions or give interviews. He read a prepared statement to the reporters who met him at quarantine and firmly declined to say anything more until he had talked with the President. That first business talk takes place at lunch tomorrow and before that Litvinov will have had a talk with Secretary Hull at the state department.

He himself hopes to conclude his work very shortly and hopes to be able to sail homeward on the Majestic about the fifteenth of this month.

Miss Madi Bacon, 27 year old swimming instructor and graduate student in music at the University of Chicago, yesterday expressed her scorn of the "forty-odd male onlookers' who stood by while she attempted to rescue a drowning man in the Lincoln park lagoon at Fullerton avenue Monday morning.

"If any one of them had helped me I could have saved his life," she said.

Miss Bacon, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. Bacon, 2533 Cleveland avenue, was driving across the Fullerton avenue bridge when she saw the man struggling in the lagoon. She stripped off her outer clothing and leaped in to save him, but could not pull him up the embankment. Police arrived too late to revive the victim, Theodore Petropolous, 2222 North Clifton avenue, whose death was ascribed to suicide by drowning by the coroner's jury.

BOLSHEVIKS HAIL 16TH BIRTHDAY; MILLION PARADE

Russia Sees "Victory" in Roosevelt Talks.

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Soviet Russia with its customary gusto today celebrated the sixteenth anniversary of the most important date on its calendar—the October revolution—coincident with the arrival in the United States of its foreign commissar, Maxim Litvinov.

Litvinov went to the United States for conversations with President Roosevelt concerning recognition of the soviet union. Newspapers found space to refer prominently to this coincidence despite the fact that their columns were filled this day more than any other with praises of the "Socialist construction" and the forward march of the soviet union in world affairs.

See Victory for Bolshevism.

"For the whole world," the newspaper Izvestia said in an editorial, "the meeting of Litvinov and President Roosevelt in Washington has a great historical significance.

"By initiating these negotiations the world's leading capitalistic power confirms that all the latent hopes of extermination of the U. S. S. R. now are pure fancy."

Meanwhile, in the Red square the Red Legions of the Proletariat paraded in another day-long demonstration, in which approximately one million persons were estimated to have participated.

They cheered Dictator Joseph Stalin; Mikhail Kalinin, president of the Soviet union; Vyacheslaff M. Molotov, president of the Union Council of the People's Commissars, and other high officials who watched and saluted from the reviewing stand atop Lenin's mausoleum.

50,000 Troops March.

Some 50,000 troops of the Red army's Moscow garrison, together with several battalions of sailors, carried out the military phase of the celebration.

A chill drizzle which fell from dismal gray skies did not dampen the enthusiasm of the marchers, but it did prevent the usual military aviation demonstration accompanying the marching army corps display on the ground.

Tonight Kalinin will be host to the foreign diplomats in a reception forming the outstanding social event of the year.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Nov. 7.—Simultaneously with the arrival of Maxim Litvinov, soviet Russian foreign commissar, at Washington today, the latest edition of the communist internationale's official journal arrived at Riga.

It contains four long articles devoted to the revolutionary activities of Moscow's agents in the United States, including a 5,000 word open letter from "Ikki"—executive committee of the comintern—addressed to the American communist party giving instructions on how to convert the present disorders in America into revolutionary conflicts to overthrow the Roosevelt administration and make the United States a soviet republic.

Gives Orders to N. Y. Paper.

Another article outlines the future policies of the official Moscow newspaper in America, the New York Daily Worker. This publication must hereafter concentrate on circulating an open letter among American revolutionaries and developing a campaign of sabotage against the NRA.

One of the most interesting revelations in the journal is the statement that 70 per cent of the present members of the American communist party are emigrants from foreign countries.

The chief handicap to Moscow's ambitions in America, the report continues, is that communism is an idea which came to the United States from abroad and its propagation and development have been carried on by immigrants, especially those employed in the clothing and textile trade. The report says the movement must free itself from the immigrant groups and become a real American communist party.

Calls U. S. "Crook."

"During the period in which the world seemed to be recovering after the war, the world was under the control of a band of robbers," the report says. "The biggest crook was the United States, which not only profited the most but which became the most successful robber of all. America succeeded in robbing everybody else and it was not for nothing that it earned the title of Shylock.

"The end of the stabilization period came as Stalin [Russian dictator] predicted, with the robbers falling out among themselves. They stopped paying Shylock and when the thieves fell out the depression developed.

"The population of America believed that President Roosevelt would find a peaceful, painless way from the depression. His wild campaign of demagogy developed illusions among the masses, who are now becoming dissatisfied. Class feeling has already developed in America and one of the most important tasks of the communist party is to convert this into class hatred and class warfare."

Fight for Right to Strike.

Order number six of Ikki's open letter to the American communists is especially interesting, since it urges the communist party to "fight with all forms of terror for freedom to strike, for freedom of speech and press, and against all forms of persecution and exile of foreign workers."

Other instructions specify that hereafter American reds must concentrate their efforts in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, New York, and Detroit, particularly among workers in the mining, metallurgical, automobile, textile, and transport industries, instead of concentrating on less important regional strikes.

FARM PICKETING CUTS SIOUX CITY MILK SHIPMENTS

Anti-Strike Organization Planned.

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Picketing by farm strikers in this territory cut the city's milk shipments from the surrounding territory to 20,000 pounds today, compared to a normal 80,000 pounds.

Estimates by I. W. Reck, president of the Sioux City Milk Producers' association, for the last three days are: Sunday, 10,000 pounds; Monday, 8,000 pounds; Tuesday, 20,000 pounds.

Receipts were normal up to last Thursday.

Live stock receipts, too, have been sharply curtailed. Packing plants are continuing to pack and ship meat products but are depending on floor stock for the present supply.

One plant killed 1,500 animals today, but had none to kill yesterday, and will not kill tomorrow. A second plant is killing sufficient stock to supply local orders.

Plans were under way tonight by anti-strikers in the Sioux City area to organize a "law and order league" in Plymouth county. An organization meeting was called for tomorrow afternoon at Le Mars.

Three milk trucks came into Sioux City today. No pickets were in evidence along the road, it was reported.

Patrol Minnesota Roads.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Pickets patrolled many roads in Minnesota today as the opposing farmers were cheered by an announcement that a farm strike leader had resigned because he did not favor this form of activity. He was Chairman E. T. Ebbesen of the Redwood County Farm Holiday association.

Find Dynamite in Rail Car.

New London, Wis., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Six sticks of dynamite, about three pounds, were found today fastened under the floor of a cattle car on a siding at Hortonville on the Chicago and North Western road.

The car was spotted for Henry Gartlin, a cattle and hog shipper, who usually ships a full car load each Tuesday. Anticipating difficulty owing to the strike, Gartlin did not plan to ship today.

The dynamite with cap and fuse attached was fastened safely to the floor of the car.

Milwaukeean Hurt.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—A Milwaukeean was injured in the milk strike today.

Clarence Ludwig, driver of a truck for the Layton Park Dairy company, was surrounded by a dozen farm cars on the Colby road compelling him to stop. Pickets emerged from all cars, a spiked plank was thrown in front of the truck and as the pickets approached the truck some one of them threw a brick through the windshield. The shattering glass cut Ludwig on the face.

Husband Prints "Liar" on Wall; Wife Asks Divorce

Mrs. Louise Franz, 39 years old, 316 Courtland avenue, Park Ridge, filed suit for divorce in the Circuit court yesterday against Herbert G. Franz, wholesale cotton distributor of Chicago and New York. The bill alleged that Franz struck his wife on numerous occasions and that once he printed the word "Liar" in 17 places in their home. Franz has property valued at $250,000, according to the bill. The couple were married June 22, 1910 and have three children.

GUNMEN ROB TAVERN OWNER.

John Gatewood, owner of a beer tavern at 2421 West Lake street, was robbed of $125 and a wrist watch valued at $25 by two colored gunmen who entered shortly after he opened for business yesterday.

GOES UNDER KNIFE

PRINCESS MARY.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Princess Mary, the princess royal, was said in a physicians' bulletin tonight to be progressing favorably after an operation for the removal of the appendix.

The king's surgeon, Sir Stanley Hewett, performed the operation at her Mayfair home. She had been suffering from a nervous breakdown.

The princess royal, the Countess of Harewood, is the only daughter of King George and Queen Mary. She is 36 and is the mother of two sons, Viscount Lascelles, 10, and Gerald David.

CHARGES SPOUSE PLAYS, SHE LIVES IN COLD GARAGE

The charge that her ex-husband, Knowles Pittman, rides to hounds and goes yachting while she is forced to live with their two children in a one room, unheated garage in Winnetka was made to Judge Rudolph F. Desort yesterday in the Superior court on behalf of Mrs. Louvia Pittman. Pittman, a minor official of a steel company, lives at 576 Oak street, in the same suburb.

"He sails every year in the Mackinac race," said her attorney, Lloyd A. Faxon. "His weakness for associating with men of wealth, to the exclusion of earning income to support his children, has caused Mrs. Pittman much sorro wand humiliation."

Mrs. Pittman alleged that Pittman earned $250 a month, and had paid her only $40 since Jan. 1. He owes her, she charges, $8,000 under a divorce decree which awarded her $150 a month in 1927. Pittman replied that his salary was only $100 a month. Judge Desort ordered him to pay $200 by today.

"You might as well make it right now," replied Pittman.

"In that case," said Judge Desort, "you can go to jail right now."

MINERS IMPRISONED HOURS.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Eight miners were imprisoned for several hours in Mowequa coal mine today when a squeeze caught and held the cage in which they were descending, but were later released. The mishap will delay the mine opening for three more weeks.

U. S., IOWA DENY LIABILITY FOR BURNED BRIDGES

Hold County Responsible for Strikers' Acts.

The Illinois Central and the Great Northern railroads were rushing the replacement of two bridges burned by Iowa farm pickets yesterday while authorities differed on the subject of responsibility for paying for them.

Inquiries in Washington and Des Moines brought replies that neither the federal government nor the state of Iowa will pay for the bridges.

Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior and dispenser of the federal government's easy money, said if the railroads applied for loans with which to replace the bridges, putting up security in the regular manner, the applications would be considered on their merits. He indicated that the government would be glad to make loans to the railroads.

Holds County Is Responsible.

"In my opinion the state would not be responsible for damages inasmuch as the county is vested with authority and responsibility for the protection of property," said Gov. Clyde Herring of Iowa when queried at Des Moines. "I believe it would be up to the county government to handle any claims for damages. If there should be any request from the county for state aid it would create a legal question that would have to be handled by the proper state department. I feel, however, that the county would have no more claim upon the state than the state would have upon the federal government for some breach of state law."

L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central, said that a crew of men with equipment had been rushed to the scene of the burning of its bridge near Meriden, Ia., Monday night, as soon as reports of the fire were received. This bridge is being replaced, he said, and will be ready to permit the passage of trains this morning.

Trains Must Run.

"We have to run our trains," said Mr. Downs. "We are replacing the bridge now and will ascertain in due course where the responsibility lies." The Illinois Central bridge was 28 feet high and 160 feet long.

Officials of the Great Northern road, a bridge of which was destroyed by the striking farmers six miles north of Sioux City, said in St. Paul that they also are rushing replacement and will endeavor to learn later where the responsibility should be fixed. The Great Northern officials were informed that county authorities are seeking to apprehend the individuals responsible and that if they are found financially able they will be made to pay the damages.

FOUND DEAD FROM GAS.

Randall Plunkett, 31 years old, an insurance salesman, was found dead in the kitchen of his home in Joliet yesterday. Police said that Plunkett, who had been in ill health, apparently had committed suicide by inhaling gas.

HEIRESS DENIES REPORT SHE HAS GIVEN UP COUNT

They Will Wed Some Time Somewhere, She Says.

Despite reports to the contrary, Mrs. Merry Fahrney Parker-Pickering, young Oak Park heiress, is still determined to marry Count George di Georgio, who is now en route to Chile.

"Of course I intend to marry the count," said Mrs. Parker-Pickering last evening in her home at 400 North Euclid avenue, Oak Park. Her mother, Mrs. Emory H. Fahrney, heard part of the interview but made no comment.

Mrs. Parker-Pickering expressed indignation over published reports that her romance with the count has collapsed, and denied statements attributed to her that she had definitely given up the thought of marrying him.

She Is Sure They'll Wed.

"No matter what is said, Count di Georgio and I are going to be married," said Mrs. Parker-Pickering. "My parents do not object, as has been reported. All they ask is that I be cautious, take my time, and be sure I love the count. I do love him, and in due time I will go to him or he will come to me."

Mrs. Parker-Pickering also said she wished to correct stories to the effect that she and Count di Georgio had purchased jewelry in New York with her money.

"I never bought him any jewelry," she asserted. "Any woman who would buy a man jewelry would be stupid."

Still Plans Trip to Chile.

As to her reported plan to join the count in Chile, where he expects to get a divorce from his present wife, Mrs. Parker-Pickering said she would get a passport and money for the trip "in proper time." It had been announced previously by Mrs. Fahrney that Mrs. Parker-Pickering would not be given the funds for such a trip. The young woman, it is said, has no independent income at present although eventually she will share in the $6,000,000 fortune left by her grandfather, the late Dr. Peter Fahrney, patent medicine manufacturer.

Count di Georgio sailed for Chile from New York on Saturday at the request of authorities who charged he had overstayed his passport limit. That was the only reason he left, Mrs. Parker-Pickering insisted.

J. C. O'MAHONEY, AID OF FARLEY, IS SLATED AS WYOMING SENATOR

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The death of the veteran Senator Kendrick of Wyoming may bring about a change in President Roosevelt's "little cabinet."

Reports from Cheyenne, Wyo., today stated Joseph C. O'Mahoney, first assistant postmaster general, appeared headed for the United States senate.

It was believed O'Mahoney would accept the appointment, which would create a vacancy in Postmaster General Farley's department.

Under the Wyoming law, a special election must be called if a vacancy exists in the senate more than a year prior to the state's general election. The law, however, allows the governor to make an appointment if a vacancy exists during a session of congress.

LAKE FOREST'S TWO WAY POLICE RADIO STARTED

A two way police radio system was put into operation in Lake Forest yesterday, giving that community the honor of being the first in the country so to equip itself.

Under the supervision of Chief of Police Frank Tiffany, one of the squad cars left the Lake Forest police station and after proceeding about two miles began testing. In the car were a receiving set and a sending set. Similar apparatus was in the station.

Chief Tiffany spoke through the microphone in the automobile and was heard at the station. Then he paused and received an answer from the station. The reception was excellent.

By Dec. 1 three other squad cars are to be fitted out with the two-way radios. The system is expected to facilitate police work and make crime in Lake Forest, already difficult, much more difficult so far as criminals are concerned. For its population, Lake Forest covers an unusually large area—16 square miles—which is almost two times that of Evanston.

Put in EVEREADY PRESTONE

NOW $2.95 A GALLON

The same safe, all-winter anti-freeze sold last year for $4.45. Concentrated—not diluted or cheapened in any way.

HUNDREDS of cars out on the street and in unheated garages will have frozen radiators, cracked engine-blocks, and big repair bills before many more hours have passed.

Boil-away anti-freezes—a makeshift at best

If you buy a boil-away anti-freeze it will evaporate during the next warm spell and leave your car unprotected. You'll have the bother of continual testing and frequent refilling.

Formerly, boil-away anti-freezes, with all their faults, had one appeal—low initial cost. But today, at the new low price of $2.95 per gallon, Eveready Prestone is within the reach of all. And, of course, in all-season cost it offers real economy. It won't boil away or heat up your motor—even during the warm days. It won't cause rust. One filling will last you all season long.

How many "permanent" anti-freezes will last through the winter?

To bring you the honest facts on many so-called "permanent" anti-freezes, rigorous laboratory tests have been conducted. For hundreds of hours, each product was run through an automobile cooling-system at a speed and engine-temperature exactly duplicating actual driving conditions.

The 25,000-mile anti-freeze

Under this test Eveready Prestone was unchanged after 1000 grueling hours—still giving full protection not only against freezing, but against rust. Other anti-freezes, in the same test, broke down and became definitely corrosive in from 50 to 200 hours.

This test means that Eveready Prestone will protect your car all winter long—25,000 miles of driving and upwards.

Do not confuse Eveready Prestone with either alcohol or glycerine

Eveready Prestone is a distinctive patented product—approved by every car manufacturer, and by all leading radiator makers.

Many a can of "permanent" anti-freeze is nearly half water. Eveready Prestone is concentrated. At $2.95 a gallon, it is your safest, most economical all-winter protection against freezing and rust. Have it put in now.

The important thing in buying an anti-freeze is to figure cost to a definite protection point, not the price per gallon. See how reasonably you can get all-winter protection against freezing and rust with Eveready Prestone.

FIND YOUR OWN CAR ON THIS CHART

For example, a Model-A Ford can be protected to a temperature of zero with 1 gallon of Eveready Prestone. Cost $2.95.

NORTH ILLINOIS CITIES INDORSE SUPERHIGHWAYS

BY HAL FOUST.

The Fox Valley federation, representing civic interests of the river valley cities forty miles west of the loop, yesterday indorsed the proposed elevated highway construction in Chicago. Attending the meeting, a luncheon in the Hotel Baker of St. Charles, were representatives of Rockford and other northern Illinois cities farther from Chicago, and they concurred in the action.

LESTER J. NORRIS.

The meeting also indorsed a proposal for using a portion of the 30 million dollar Illinois relief bond issue for roadway beautification with labor furnished by charity agencies.

Send Resolutions to Springfield.

Lester J. Norris, president of the federation, was instructed to carry the two resolutions to Springfield to present to Gov. Horner and to leaders of the general assembly. The relief bond issue bills yesterday passed the lower house of the legislature and are awaiting concurrence by the senate in house amendments before being presented to the governor for signature.

"The elevated highway and road beautification propositions are related," said Mr. Norris, "because a primary benefit from both would be to ease the unemployment problem this winter. They are further related because both would be returning some benefits to the motorists who are financing the work.

"The elevated highway construction would be financed by a federal loan to be retired with state gasoline tax revenue. The relief bond issue likewise is to be retired with gasoline tax revenue."

Sees Jobs for 60,000.

James Bulger, director of the Chicago Motor club, cited estimates that 20,000 men could be employed directly and indirectly in the elevated highway construction. With $18,000,000 of the $30,000,000 relief money, it is estimated that 40,000 men could be put to work within a month or two in widening highway shoulders, sloping ditches and planting trees, thus improving the appearance of the roads and lessening the hazards of motor travel.

Among those who attended the meeting were: Bert H. Smith, publisher of Batavia Herald; William D. Knight of Rockford, former Winnebago county state's attorney; R. H. Cooper, Aurora; R. F. Angell, St. Charles; B. A. Knight, Rockford, John A. Logan, Elgin; Albert R. Joseph, Elgin; E. A. Keplar, secretary of Fox Valley federation; C. W. Norris, St. Charles; Dr. F. G. Miller, St. Charles; and G. E. Powell, superintendent of relief work, Elgin.

Others who attended were: Robert P. Stahl Jr., Kane county emergency relief commission; E. H. Ross, state emergency relief commission; Walter M. Smith Jr., resident engineer, Illinois division of waterways; R. T. Cash, district engineer, state highway department; H. H. Gugler, St. Charles chamber of commerce; Clarendon Mower, Rockford; Albert M. Wolf, St. Charles; and George Barton, Chicago Motor club.

WIFE DENIES SHE SHOT MATE; HUNT OTHER WOMAN

The shooting of Allan Ryley, 39 years old, in his room at the Dorian hotel, 4545 Woodlawn avenue, developed several mystery elements yesterday which had police puzzled. Ryley said he was shot accidentally. His estranged wife, Isabelle, 32 years old, 8119 Merrill avenue, said last night that she had not shot her husband, although she admitted being with him at the time of the shooting. Meanwhile police were hunting for a pretty young woman acquaintance of Ryley.

The Ryleys separated two years ago and she filed suit for divorce, charging cruelty. She obtained an order for $5 a week temporary alimony, which Ryley refused to pay. She began seeing him several weeks ago in an effort to persuade him to pay the back alimony, she said.

Mrs. Ryley was also said to have learned about Ryley's friendship with the unidentified girl and to have quarreled with him on this subject. Police said they were convinced that she shot her husband during such a quarrel Monday.

Ryley was in a serious condition last night and could not be moved to a hospital. He is a nephew of former Ald. Guy Guernsey and brother of two Chicago policemen, Lieut. Howard Ryley of the South Chicago station and Patrolman Harold Ryley of the Chicago Lawn station.

WIND POSTPONES STRATOSPHERE FLIGHT BY SETTLE

Crew Ready in Hope of Later Attempt.

A surface wind of 13 miles an hour caused Lieutenant Commander T. G. W. Settle to postpone his balloon flight into the stratosphere again last night. Late yesterday afternoon he announced that weather conditions appeared favorable for the ascension early this morning.

Commander Settle called off his plan for the ascension at 11:30 o'clock last night after spending anxious hours in the office of the U. S. weather bureau scanning reports as they came in from distant stations and along the airways. He said he planned to make the flight today if it were at all feasible, but the high surface wind caused the abandonment of the plan. The balloon cannot be inflated with safety in a wind of more than six miles an hour.

Ground Crew Held Ready.

The ground crew and technicians who are assisting Settle and his companion on the flight, Maj. Chester L. Fordney, marine corps scientist, will stand by for tonight, as two high pressure areas are moving toward Chicago and may provide the proper weather conditions with a low enough surface wind to make the ascension possible.

The balloon, the air tight metal gondola in which the two men will ride, and all other equipment for the flight, are held at the Goodyear airship dock at 35th street and the lake in the World's Fair grounds. The ascension will be made from that point if favorable weather permits. Commander Settle said last night that no decision had been made as to whether he would make the flight after the close of the Fair.

First Attempt on Aug. 5.

The navy balloonist's first attempt to reach the stratosphere in a balloon to study the cosmic rays there was made early in the morning of Aug. 5, when he ascended from Soldiers' field. The cord operating the gas release valve at the top of the bag stuck and forced the balloon to descend after it reached an altitude of 5,000 feet. Commander Settle, who was alone on that flight, landed safely in a railroad yard at 14th and Canal streets.

FREE BEER WILL FLOW TODAY AT CHICAGO'S FAIR

Personal Responsibility Day to Be Celebrated.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Today is Personal Responsibility day at the Fair when one thousand barrels of beer and some two hundred thousand sandwiches will be distributed free to the visitors.

Alderman John Coughlin heads Mayor Kelly's committee in charge of the celebration. The brewers are supplying the beer. The packers are contributing the sandwich materials and A Century of Progress Exposition is donating the grounds.

Serve from 20 Stands.

Twenty stands, spaced at regular intervals throughout the grounds, will dispense the beer and sandwiches from the time the gates open at 9 a. m. until the last barrel has been drained dry.

The Fair management yesterday ordered a loosening of ticket regulations so that poor persons, unable to pay the admission fee during the summer, will have an opportunity to witness the Exposition. Friday will be the day. All members of the 117,405 families on the Cook county relief rolls will be admitted free to the grounds on that day.

How to Get in Free.

The visitors will be admitted at all gates from 9 a. m. to midnight on the presentation of their identification cards marked either "Cook county bureau of public welfare" or "unemployment relief service." These cards are issued to heads of families but will admit all members of the family.

With the trust indenture precluding the issuing of free tickets it became necessary for the Fair to handle the expense in another way. For each adult admitted 20 cents will be placed in the trust fund from the working cash fund and 2 cents for each child will be similarly allocated.

Snow and cold weather kept Fair attendance at the lowest figure of the Exposition yesterday. At 11:30 p. m. the official attendance was 20,625.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

Lieut. Com. Horace D. Nuber yesterday was appointed by Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius to replace Capt. Frank H. Roberts as naval representative at the Fair. Capt. Roberts left yesterday for three weeks in Washington, following which he will take command of the U. S. S. Milwaukee, one of the new 10,000 ton cruisers in Pacific waters. During the summer Commander Nuber was aid to Capt. Roberts. He will function as naval representative if the Fair is reopened in 1934.

The Administration building at the Fair is now in the process of remodeling in anticipation of the reopening next year. The exterior of the building will not be changed, but the interior of the south wing is being changed greatly. The north wing of the Administration building will be used during the winter months for storage purposes. With only a skeleton staff in the executive offices the south wing of the building will house all the Fair activities during the winter.

Miss Suzanna Onstott of Forest City, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Onstott, with whom Lincoln lived in New Salem when he operated a store and was postmaster, returned to the Wigwam in the Lincoln group at the Fair. Miss Onstott loaned to the exhibit the chair in which Lincoln sat and the table on which he wrote his letters.

One of three Lincoln letters recently discovered by the grandson of Judge William Martin, early collector of the port at Alton, which were loaned to the Wigwam at the Fair, was sold yesterday to Kingman Brewster, Washington, D. C., attorney and collector of civil war material. Mr. Brewster also purchased the pocket rule carried by Lincoln.

The 554 lectures on art given in Fullerton hall at the Art Institute in connection with the World's Fair art exhibit, which closed at the Institute Nov. 1, drew a total of 66,386 persons, officials of the museum announced yesterday. Dudley Crafts Watson, who gave 295 of the lectures, had the largest number of listeners, 41,431.

PICKS CHAIRMEN FOR TEAMS IN CHARITY DRIVE

Charles W. Bergquist, chairman of the trades, industries, and professions division of the Community fund which will open its public campaign for charity contributions next Monday, appointed chairmen for seven fund raising teams in the division yesterday. The fund expects to raise $4,000,000 to be distributed among 101 private welfare organizations.

The chairmen are Louis Yager, insurance [other than life insurance]; Lucius Teter, real estate; J. D. Swigart, paper, books and school supplies; Jack Miller, amusements; Charles Wright, railway supplies; W. K. Glenn, plumbing and heating, and J. C. Moore, advertising, publishers, magazines and metropolitan daily newspapers.

The official notification that the Junior Association of Commerce had indorsed the campaign was received yesterday by R. Douglas Stuart, head of the fund, from G. A. Bray, president of the association. The services of its 400 members as active workers in the trades, industries and professions division were offered.

COUNTY BOARD SEES NO CHANCE TO CUT SALARIES

County Commissioner Peter M. Kelly said last night that he and a majority of the members of the county board are opposed to further salary cuts for county employés. Kelly's statement was in reply to suggestions that the $4,915,156 deficit which the county faces in its 1934 budget could be made up by salary decreases.

"We would have to cut all salaries 50 per cent to make up the deficit," Commissioner Kelly declared, and this is an impossibility. About 70 per cent of the employés do not receive more than $125 a month."

The county pay roll is approximately $850,000 a month or $10,200,000 a year for 4,000 employés. Commissioner Kelly, however, could not offer an alternative to balance the budget. Other possibilities, he said, would be the entire elimination of certain departments.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

GEN. JOHNSON ON A FREE PRESS.

In his Chicago address Gen. Johnson said:

"Any system for licensing the press is wholly repugnant to me."

A moment later he said:

"In my official opinion there is no authority in NRA to license a newspaper."

As he is, by conviction, opposed to limiting the freedom of the press and as he has no intention of issuing licenses to newspapers and other publications, the general may be said to be in complete agreement with editors and publishers on these immensely important points. As the general is determined to preserve the freedom of the press as laid down in the constitution, he ought to have no objection to stating his views specifically in any code intended to govern publishing. But that he will not do.

The situation is a curious one. Both sides of the table profess to believe passionately in the constitutional guarantee of a free press, but the representatives of the government, all of whom have sworn to uphold the constitution, decline to reduce their views to writing and incorporate them in the contract. Why Gen. Johnson refuses to do so he did not make clear in his address.

To be sure, he did refer to the fight for the reservation as a "synthetic dead cat" and as "primitive witch doctor dancing." He did say that those who are opposing him are "seeing things under the bed." But all of these phrases together and a great many more cannot explain why the general is opposed to stating specifically in a formal fashion the thing he says he wants and the thing the publishers know they want.

Later, in an interview at his hotel, the general explained his opposition more fully. He said that the inclusion of a reservation of the freedom of the press would be an affront to the dignity of the President. Just how and why it is an affront he did not say, and for our part we confess we do not follow him.

Another explanation was offered a moment later when the general suggested that any invasion of the rights of the press by the NRA would result in an instant appeal to the courts by the newspaper which had been subjected to censorship or suspended. The courts, he said, would be bound to protect the newspaper in its constitutional rights.

The people are greatly indebted to Gen. Johnson for this illustration because it presents the issue in an easily understood form. The general spent the morning denying that any government in Washington could ever attempt to coerce opinion, but in the evening he conceded that some such thing might happen, if not in this administration, then in some other. That is precisely the position taken by the publishers and editors. As sensible men, not wholly unaware of the ways of the world, they know that when a contract is signed each party to it may be expected to make the maximum use he can of it. They know that governments the world over, in this as well as other countries, have sought to control the press, and, through the press, the people.

The constitution as originally drafted contained no bill of rights. Alexander Hamilton, the man who said "the People, sir, is a great beast," argued against including a statement of individual liberties in the constitution and for the moment his opinion prevailed; but it quickly became apparent that the constitution itself could not be ratified without these specific guarantees. They were incorporated in the first ten amendments, whose ratification became, in fact, a condition to the ratification of the constitution itself.

Only a few years elapsed before the alien and sedition laws were being enforced by precisely the courts which Gen. Johnson says will defend the rights of the people against governmental tyranny. The same thing has happened again and again in world history. The freedom of the press was not sustained a few years ago by the subservient courts of Minnesota and was protected by the Supreme court of the United States by the narrow margin of one vote.

To include a specific reservation of the free press in a newspaper code is, of itself, no guarantee against censorship and coercion of opinion. In the last analysis the people themselves must protect themselves, as they did against the sedition laws. But it is still profoundly true that an omission of a specific reservation in the code now, after all the attention that has been directed to the question, must greatly weaken the legal position of the newspaper which Gen. Johnson foresees appealing to the courts for protection. The court will search the code in vain, if Gen. Johnson has his way, for any specific restraint on the government's right to coerce a newspaper.

It must not be supposed that a tyrannous government such as Gen. Johnson envisages would act directly to suppress a newspaper for opinions or facts it had voiced. That is not the way things are done. The government would allege that the newspaper it wanted to discipline had violated some article of the code having to do with the management of a newspaper as a business enterprise. And in the absence of any specific reservation to the effect that the government may not coerce a publication it would be easier for a subservient or illiberal judge to do the government's bidding.

The newspapers do not and never did object to regulations by general law. Newspaper corporations and newspaper editors, like all corporations and individuals, are subject to the general laws. Newspapers have no immunity from the building code, from the tax laws, from the laws of property and the criminal statutes. They are not above the law and do not want to be. They are determined, merely, to protect themselves from a special code of law concerning them, alone, the acceptance of which might, conceivably, as Gen. Johnson himself has admitted, be used in the effort to deprive them, and through them the people, of the "liberty without which there are no liberties."

MORE REGULATION.

The members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States have cast a vote decisively in the affirmative that water carriers and highway carriers should be regulated. The outstanding features of a platform that will be pressed by the chamber at the next congress, in so far as they apply to water transportation, are that all common carriers should be obliged to obtain certificates of public convenience and necessity, that they should submit their port to port rates to regulation and that all vessels which are not common carriers and which accept cargo for hire should be obliged to charge the common carrier commodity rates. There appears to have been little discussion or argument other than the protest of the Chicago delegation, and the affirmative vote was piled up by the representatives of interior cities who thought or cared little for the effect of such legislation on great lakes navigation.

There are five hundred and eighty-two American vessels of all types on the great lakes, of which possibly seventy-five are operated in common carrier trade. Most of these are either railway owned car ferries or rely on the railways for the bulk of their traffic moving on lake and rail rates, already subject to regulation. Their port to port traffic is insignificant compared with the enormous tonnage transported in contract vessels—probably less than five per cent.

The great bulk of the tonnage does not move in competition with other forms of transportation, but exists solely by virtue of the ability of the water carriers to furnish low cost transportation and flexible rates adapted to market conditions. Most of it enters into the very lives of the communities bordering on the lakes.

If we examine the personnel of the committee that drafted the platform we can understand the underlying reasons for the recommendation placed before the chamber. It consisted of five representatives from the Atlantic seaboard, one representative of a common carrier on the Mississippi, two from gulf ports, one from the west coast, two railway men, a chain grocer, and a coal operator from Indianapolis, said to be the world's largest landlocked city. New York had two representatives and Boston and Philadelphia one each, yet not a single lake port city was given a voice despite the fact that great lakes traffic forms the bulk of our domestic water borne commerce.

Mr. Eastman, who is charged with the duty of submitting recommendations to the next congress for an overhauling of our transportation laws, has shown a disposition to build up his conclusions from a fund of information collected by his own staff, to which all interested parties are asked to contribute. We trust that he will be able to see that the conclusion of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States is nothing but the acquiescence of an uninformed majority of delegates to the report of a committee many, if not all, of the members of which had an ax to grind.

The great lakes cities appear to have no organization to protect their interests. They should at once take steps to counteract this recommendation for entirely unnecessary bureaucratic control of the industry it represents.

Editorial of the Day

GOVERNMENT AND PRIVATE GOOD FAITH.

[The Arizona Star, Tucson.]

The gigantic fraudulent operations on the part of certain large financial operators like Kreuger and Samuel Insull, together with an undue amount of shady exploitation of the innocent public by other financial powers in whom the people placed their trust, have been one of the foremost revelations of the last four years.

It is entirely proper that the administration act within reasonable limits to protect the public from such gigantic frauds in the future, but of even greater importance is it necessary for the government that seeks to give such protection to the public to apply the same standards to its own acts. If it is wrong for private business to defraud, to break faith, to perform dishonest acts and play upon the credulity and ignorance of the people, then it is an even greater fraud for the same government to defraud, break faith, perform dishonest acts, and play upon the credulity and ignorance of the people. There cannot be one code of morals for private business and another for government business. In fact, a government that perpetrates a fraud is infinitely worse and does far greater harm than a dozen Kreugers or Insulls.

One of the oldest methods by which governments defraud is to debase their money. It is an old, old trick which tyrants, dictators and kings for centuries have used from time to time to pay for their wars and squanderings. Early in history it was done by secretly mixing some cheap metal with gold and silver coins. Of more recent times it has been done by issuing paper money without permitting redemption in gold.

Here in the United States there are millions of people who own government bonds which they bought in good faith. They believed in the honesty and integrity of the government. The bonds and notes specifically provided that principal and interest were "payable in gold coin of the present weight and fineness." As long as the government pays interest and principal in paper money or checks which buy just as much as gold coin buys, the government has kept faith; but when the government pays in paper money or checks which do not buy as much as gold coin would buy, it has not only broken faith, it has committed a gigantic fraud. Furthermore when it breaks such faith deliberately and unnecessarily it has placed itself on a much lower moral scale than Insull or Kreuger. The resentment expressed by the revelations of the last four years will be calm and quiet as compared with the resentment that will develop when the government breaks faith and defrauds and cheats by debasing its currency.

Father, dear father, come home with me now,
I really think that you must;
You've eaten so much in order to drink,
I'm getting afraid that you'll bust.
Come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father,
Come home.

But you had to order a steak;
Then a dozen fried eggs with one glass of beer,
Come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father,
Come home.

To lick up three whiskies you ate twenty hot dogs,
With your highball came beef and coleslaw;
You wanted a toddy, but you had to buy first
And eat two dozen big oysters raw.
Come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father,
Come home.

You've swallowed nine pies, ten sandwiches, too,
In order to sit here and drink;
Seven slices of ham, eight cans of sardines,
And two or three chickens, I think.
Come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father,
Come home.

It isn't I fear you'll get noisy and drunk,
No, father, that isn't the question;
It's your health, father dear, I am worried about,
I'm afraid you'll get indigestion.
Come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father,

GOD'S WOOING.

God is the Loom, the Weaver, and the Wove;
All these wild forms that blaze, and change, and die
Are but rich vesture of His changeless love
Which burning pure behind them all doth lie;
Whose pulse throbs hard beneath its glittering sheen
With infinite desire that He be loved again.

Where flames the love that will not test its power?
False is the heart that dare not prove its claim!
Therefore He tries, and sifts, and waits, each hour;
Therefore exults, if one but call His name.
Sorrow endures while clouds black out the sun;
The sun creates the clouds; they serve him, every one.

Athwart all clouds the Bow still gleams on high.
From pain come tears; from suffering, sympathy;
There is no proof of Love but Sacrifice.
Of fire and cloud, tempest and dust and blood
He builds the Soul of Man, the Chosen of Man's God.

Oh, the strong longing of His heart! that drove
The princely Wooer of that faithless Soul
To doff His power, and, stripped of all but love,
Plunge where she gasped, faint in this prison-hole;
Cleave the black loom that hid from her the sky
And fire the falling flame of her divinity!

Now by each soul that loves through stress and storm;
By every heart that serves, though bleeding sore;
Earns others' safety with its own deep harm;
Dies with a smile that others may live more—
O Thou Eternal Lover! thou shalt free

ONE PHYSICIAN'S DIET.

A PHYSICIAN of very large experience who would not like his name used gives his method of dieting. His mother died when he was a child. Thereafter he was allowed to follow his own whims in eating. In consequence he was a dyspeptic at 18, but, having gained wisdom with experience, he managed to work hard until about his eightieth birthday.

He advises that all foods be eaten slowly and chewed well. His meals are arranged in courses. Each course consists of one simple article of diet. After eating that one course he pauses and then deliberately passes to the next.

Breakfast—

First course: Cup of coffee and hot milk, half and half.

Second course: Unsweetened breakfast food with evaporated milk.

Third course: Dry, brittle toast, or heated wheat muffins, or hard wheat or rye rolls with butter, or Philadelphia cream cheese.

Fourth course. One cup coffee and hot milk, half and half.

Sixth course: Fruit.

The butter is spread on the bread. It is never melted or soaked into the bread, toast, or muffins.

Midday meal—

Soup without bread or crackers in cold weather; vegetable salad in hot weather.

Fresh meat [cooked without excess of grease], or a meat, egg, or cheese salad. Boiled, baked, or creamed potatoes and two green vegetables cooked without grease.

Dessert consisting of light puddings or custard, ice cream, ripe and unsweetened fruit in season, crackers and cheese, nuts.

Evening meal—

Either a soup or a vegetable salad. [Sometimes he eats both a soup and a vegetable salad, but as different courses.]

Poor man's pudding, unsweetened, and made with skim milk and served with warm evaporated milk as a sauce.

Toasted bread or a heated plain wheat or rye roll or white flour muffin. Cream cheese is used as a spread.

No sweets are eaten with the evening meal. The doctor ascribes his ability to retire early and to sleep long and well to his habit of making his evening meal a light one and one free from sweets.

One hour before breakfast orange or lemon juice, grapefruit juice, tomato juice, or a banana is taken.

In this series of menus no amounts are given except as to coffee. He is, however, a light eater, and the quantities he eats are not large. The keystone of his method is simplicity. He eats simple foods with no added condiments except small quantities of salt. What he eats is never greasy and never "rich," in the usual sense of the word. He eats deliberately, and rarely starts on one dish until he has finished with that which was scheduled to precede it. None of his dishes represent combinations of dishes, such as a meat stew. He never eats a bite of this and then one of that. And, above all, he does not smother his foods in butter or other fats, dressings, sauces, or sweets.

COATED TONGUE.

F. S. writes: I have a thick, white coating on my tongue. I am 23 years old and am in perfect health. Although I have used many things I have halitosis. Could this be caused by the coating? What should I do?

REPLY.

Such a coat may be the cause of halitosis. It can be scraped off with the back of a table knife. This should be done periodically. Among the causes of such a coat are constipation, reverse peristalsis due to constipation, infected gall bladder, sleeping with the mouth open, snoring.

CHRONIC ARTHRITIS.

F. K. O. writes: What is the cause of enlarged finger joints below the nails? The bumps on them are as large as a small bean, and are glossy on the skin. They are on almost all the fingers of both hands excepting the thumbs. I am a woman aged 60.

REPLY.

Your description suggests both Heberden's nodes and gouty tophi. The former is the best bet. They indicate that you have a form of mild chronic arthritis that is very prevalent in older people. Gouty tophi are masses of uric acid and urates deposited in the connective tissue. They indicate gouty arthritis.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a $4,000 first mortgage on a home and there is a $700 second mortgage paid by contract every month. I would like to assist this party in securing a loan from the government, but would like to know if it would be a good thing for me to do. J. H. C.

The only definite assistance that you can give him is in agreeing to taking government bonds instead of cash. The advisability of this would depend upon a comparison of the value of the mortgage with the estimated value of the bonds, taking into account the greater marketability of the latter and your circumstances as bearing upon the importance of this point. We suggest that you talk the matter over with your banker.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland.—Foreign wine dealers who expected to make a quick cleanup when Finland annulled its prohibition law have suffered heavy losses. Finland is consuming less than one-tenth of the wine it drank before prohibition was adopted fifteen years ago, when the population was smaller and the standard of living was much lower than it is today.

Gustaf Walden, director of the government alcohol monopoly, reports that Finland has practically ceased to be a wine drinking country and that the drinking habits of the people have changed within the last fifteen years.

At present the monopoly has large stocks of the best foreign wines in its eighty stores located throughout the country and, although they are being offered at extremely low prices, practically the only wine being sold is in some of the larger Helsingfors restaurants, which are permitted to make a 60 per cent profit on their sales.

This means that a bottle of good Burgundy, which can be bought for $1 in a monopoly store, costs $1.60 in the restaurant. Prices of other drinks are in the same proportion. Second class restaurants are permitted to charge prices 45 per cent above those of the monopoly stores and third class eating houses 30 per cent.

The restaurant owners, Walden said, are complaining that their profits have decreased since prohibition was liquidated. Under prohibition they purchased the cheapest grades of foreign booze from bootleggers and sold them at the usual speakeasy prices. They had a clear profit, for prohibition in Finland did not develop the graft and corruption which it did in the United States.

Not a restaurant or speakeasy in Finland paid a police official or politician for protection. The police never made raids, so even lawyers' fees and court expenses did not cut in on their profits. The authorities in Finland never went after the retailer seriously. Even the bootleggers making home deliveries were seldom molested.

Finnish prohibition enforcement always concentrated its efforts against the wholesalers, the rum runners in the Finnish gulf, who were flooding the country with rotgut alcohol made in German, Polish, and Czechoslovak distilleries from the residue of sugar beets. It was only the increasing success of the smugglers to supply the Finnish market which finally forced the government to permit the referendum which canceled the law.

Today the monopoly has succeeded in driving the Helsingfors bootlegger out of business. His price for a bottle of whisky delivered at your door direct from his bathtub was $2.50. Today at the monopoly shops you may select one of twenty-five varieties of English, Scotch, and Irish whiskies which cost from $1.90 to $3 per bottle. Cognacs and all varieties of wines and liquors are equally cheap.

"The only place you can discover the prices we charge for bottled drinks is within our stores," Walden said. "We do not believe in advertising, for our policy is not to increase the consumption of drinks but to supply a demand. We don't want people to drink, but still if some one comes to us and asks us to import for him either one bottle or 100 bottles of a beverage not in our catalogue we will do it for him.

"We believe our policy is the best, for today we are turning over to the government annually 200 million marks [about $4,500,000]. This is our net profit from the legalized sale of alcohol, so the amount of money which the bootleggers formerly handled can be estimated. The new law stipulates that in the future a part of these profits will be used for temperance work."

Drinking customs in Europe, especially northern Europe, are much different from those in the United States. Over here drinking is usually done at meals, while in America it was generally between meals. With prohibition in Finland people also began to drink between meals and since they generally mixed their drinks themselves from pure alcohol they became accustomed to drinks of a potency which would lift the scalp from an ordinary tippler. Through establishing good restaurants serving good liquor the monopoly hopes to teach the people to eat while they drink.

PLEA FOR TOLERANCE.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Your cartoon on the NRA in today's TRIBUNE shows just what your paper stands for—Capitalism! Why not picture one of the many good angles of this NRA? Start with section 1 of the code: the abolishment of child labor, or would you understand what this means?

Why not be more tolerant in your cartoons, and during these trying times cooperate with this wonderful man who is putting forth his best efforts to help those who so need help?

THERESA BUDINGER.

A BENEFICIARY.

Elgin, Ill., Nov. 4.—I am very much disappointed in THE TRIBUNE'S attitude of opposition toward the NRA.

We have been waiting for four weary years for something to be done.

At last we have a scheme that appears to be sound and sensible and a man with the courage to put it through in spite of all opposition.

Unless some one of us can propose a better plan I think the best thing we can do is cease criticism and aid the only reasonable plan yet produced.

If it must be done through a redistribution of wealth, why not? Capitalism, as at present, has proven its failure through inability to stop recurring depressions and widespread suffering.

I have worked along with many others, some of whom were working for $4 or $5 a week. I have seen what the NRA has done for them. My own wages have been raised from $12 for 54 hours to $20 for 35 hours. I wish that for a short while some of the capitalistic supporters would try to live on $12 a week or even on $20. What a change that would make. B. W. LOHLAUER.

DIRTY CRACKS.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—I read THE TRIBUNE and I don't see why you critics print dirty cracks against the recovery act.

Creatures like you were known before Washington called them Tories; they danced while American soldiers were freezing and starving at Valley Forge. Lincoln called them Copperheads; cowards who would not fight in the open. Theodore Roosevelt called them slickers and slackers; they snapped at his square deal. Franklin D. Roosevelt calls them chiselers.

It is amusing how your kind of people squawk "respect for the constitution" when millions of our people are unemployed and starving.

This new deal will win out without plutocrats.

Hurrah for Gen. Johnson!

JOSEPH DROPSKI.

BLOWING OFF STEAM.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—Your paper is a disgrace to the intelligent people of our city. When President Roosevelt took office one of the first things he did was to ask for coöperation and constructive criticism. Well, what have you done? Nothing but knock and berate. Why don't your cartoons offer something to help alleviate the conditions in our wonderful country? As a newspaper that thinks, yours is of the kindergarten class. You haven't the guts to print the above. MAC MARGOLIS.

CHINA AS A MODEL.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—I am heartily in accord with the thought behind your front page cartoon in today's TRIBUNE entitled "Fenced Off." It is a clear, concise exposition of what millions of our people are up against.

In my own personal experience, each rise in commodity prices makes my pay check shrink more and more, and I find there is nothing left over with which to buy the products of manufacture. Multiply such cases by millions and you will find the true reason for our seeming lack of progress toward recovery. Pin a man down to where it takes all he earns to provide the bare necessities and you are destroying his ability to purchase the products of manufacture. Thus, markets are destroyed, purchasing power is annihilated, because when people cannot buy, factories and stores cannot operate, resulting in unemployment.

When you raise the cost of all commodities (without proportionately increasing salaries) you destroy purchasing power of the masses.

With such unemployment you have depression.

The ability of the masses to buy the so-called luxuries, such as automobiles, radios, carpet sweepers, and hundreds of other manufactured articles, is the very lifeblood of prosperity. Take away this ability to purchase and you have what? Depression!

If you want to see what it means for a nation to exist on the bare necessities of life, take a look at China. The ability of the American people to consume the products of manufacture has been the reason for our steady progress as a nation and for our high standard of living, of which we are so justly proud!

Are these college professors trying to convert us into a second China? It begins to look like it. C. B.

WORTHY OF SCORN.

Oak Park, Ill., Nov. 4.—As a regular reader of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE may I be allowed to express my complete disgust with the cartoon published Saturday? It seems to me that the entirely false impression of the aims of President Roosevelt's NRA program that one can read into this malicious picture is apt to be productive of serious misunderstandings on the part of uncritical readers. "No relief anywhere" is certainly not the ultimate objective of the NRA, although it seems to be the evident program of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Fair criticism is welcomed by any intelligent reader; malignant fault finding such as this is only worthy of scorn.

MAC HENRY SCHAFER.

AU REVOIR.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—I would like to tell the world why I have discontinued my subscription to THE TRIBUNE paper and I am going to ask your paper to print it in the Voice of the People column.

Your cartoons and editorials against President Roosevelt are disgusting. This is not my own opinion only. Plenty of people I know think the same. Shame on you, TRIBUNE. GEORGE FORD.

SCHOOL ECONOMY RECORD IS LAID BEFORE PUBLIC

Board Issues a Pamphlet Explaining Program.

The school board yesterday made public a pamphlet addressed to the citizens of Chicago which sets forth the reasons which made its economy program necessary, the details of that program, and the results which it has accomplished, both in improving the credit of the schools and in providing better school facilities for thousands of pupils.

"The board of education," the pamphlet concludes, "submits that the adoption of its economy program means that: the schools will be kept open, housing conditions will be greatly improved, a sound educational program will be retained, educational opportunity will be equalized and made more democratic, substantial progress will be made toward the restoration of credit, and taxes will be reduced."

Shows Financial Troubles.

The financial crisis which made the economy program necessary is first discussed. The board sets forth that the lowest estimate of its deficit at the end of this year, before the economies were instituted, was $10,000,000, and that other financial authorities took the position that failure to collect a large proportion of taxes would make a deficit as high as $35,000,000. The 25 per cent reduction in 1932 real estate assessments will add at least $6,000,000 more to the deficit, the board states.

"While some of the distinguished educators who were consulted," the board says, "took the position that the schools must continue to be operated as they were or be closed in order to force the taxpayers and citizens to finance them, without change, other educators advised that sufficient economies could and should be put into effect to keep the board's expenses within its estimated income and still insure the maintenance of an adequate school system. The board's survey confirmed this latter view.

"Since taxes constituted practically the sole source of the schools' income, municipal financing experts agreed that the board not only would have to live within its estimated income, but that it would have to reduce its deficit before any credit of any kind could be extended."

On Abandonment of Portables.

The board's report to citizens, parents, and taxpayers then gives in detail the steps which it took to enforce its economy project. Regarding the portable schools, hundreds of which have been abandoned by the more efficient use of school space, due to abolishment of junior high schools, the report says:

"Heated with a hot blast stove, with inadequate ventilation, a semblance of even temperature [in these portable schools] is impossible. In snow and rain the high school student must leave a heated portable schoolroom and run to the main building at 45 minute intervals to laboratory or other classrooms. Many of the ills with which pupils are affected during the colder season are a direct result of the use of portables. The absence of adequate sanitary and toilet facilities is so well known that it hardly need be discussed."

Summary of Economy Program.

The results of the economy program are then summed up as follows:

"There has been no curtailment of educational activity. All of the so-called 'tool' subjects [reading, writing, mathematics, etc.] have been retained. Instruction in cultural subjects [literature, art, music, languages, history, science, etc.] has in no way been reduced.

"In the matter of athletics, the reorganization of the athletic activities insures the continuation of athletic training in elementary schools and through the high schools, with undiminished opportunity for training in swimming, baseball, football, track, and all other sports.

"There has been no change in the matter of vocational training, that is, manual training and household art, except that the full program in these subjects is carried to the high schools. Even the kindergarten has been retained. Those adjuncts of school activity, such as bathrooms, lunchrooms, and playgrounds in connection with the schools, are all maintained in communities where there is need for them.

Junior College Eliminated.

"The only change is the elimination of Crane junior college, the most expensive unit in the Chicago school system, serving only 10 per cent of those eligible to attend, where of those attending only 12 to 25 per cent completed the course. This was maintained under questionable legal right. To this may be added the experiment known as the junior high school, of doubtful educational value, of much greater cost, and resulting in serious discrimination of educational opportunity against elementary and senior high school pupils."

The economy program, including the shortening of the school year, will save taxpayers about $10,000,000 a year, the board says. In addition, its members point out, the discontinuance of the junior high type of instruction, and the conversion of those buildings into senior high schools, will save about $27,000,000 which otherwise would have been necessary to relieve overcrowding in senior high schools.

France to Continue Policy of Repudiating Its Debt

PARIS, Nov. 7.—(AP)—France's debt default policy, officials said today, is unaltered by Great Britain's decision to renew the token payment. The French government might have raised the question of debt negotiations if England had settled, but inasmuch as Great Britain failed to solve the problem, neither the government nor the parliament, the officials added, is likely to change its attitude.

FIVE RECEIVERS PROMISE TO MAKE REPORT TO COURT

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday were $415,756, making a total of $85,113,510 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 28. The day's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for the last four years follow:

	1928.	1929.
Nov. 7	$ 42,815	$ 97,706
Uncollected	16,636,516	44,428,044
	1930.	1931.
Nov. 7	$ 145,096	$ 130,139
Uncollected	70,343,773	72,180,500

Five receivers who operate 35 buildings informed Chief Justice D. J. Normoyle of the Circuit court yesterday that they would present reports next week on the financial condition of their properties and the amount of fees paid to themselves and their attorneys. The 35 properties owe $110,000 in back taxes.

The receivers, who were summoned in accordance with Judge Normoyle's efforts to collect taxes, are the Metropolitan Trust company, the Lawndale National bank, B. M. Lake, George A. Lane Jr., and William B. Lasson. Accounts of the 3,000 receivers appointed by Circuit court judges will be examined in the campaign, and Judge Normoyle has told receivers he will remove them, or in flagrant cases hold them in contempt of court, if they cannot satisfactorily explain failure to pay taxes. County Judge Jarecki has ordered all receivers to apply 75 per cent of the net incomes from their properties toward the payment of delinquent taxes.

Among the receivers who were summoned by Judge Normoyle last week was William C. Warneke. Mr. Warneke's report, however, showed that he had paid the taxes on the property he controls and he was commended by Judge Normoyle.

JUDGE WILL SET RACKET TRIAL DATE TOMORROW

Judge Philip J. Finnegan yesterday announced that he would set a date tomorrow for the opening of the trial of 23 defendants in the racket conspiracy case. The announcement was made after the judge had ordered the state to furnish the defense with a bill of particulars and a list of witnesses within five days.

Thirteen defendants appeared in court yesterday and entered pleas of not guilty. All of them demanded jury trials with the exception of Ald. Oscar Nelson [46th], who petitioned for a bench trial.

Assistant State's Attorney Edwin J. Raber indicated that the state would demand that Ald. Nelson's case be heard by a jury in order to avoid a separate trial. Judge Finnegan said that he would rule tomorrow on the motion for a bench trial.

HITLER TROOPERS TO KEEP EYE ON STATE OFFICIALS

Will Control Obedience to Nazi Principles.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Capt. Ernst Roehm, chief of the Nazi storm troopers, will in the future appoint his own delegates as aides to officials in Prussian state offices, according to an agreement with Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering which was announced today.

The mission of these semi-military delegates will be to "coöperate and advise officials, safeguard the state's security, control the obedience of officials to Nazi principles, arbitrate cases of friction between the police and storm troopers and eliminate spies and agents provocateur."

The delegates have only advisory power but will report to their storm troop superiors when they deem action is necessary. They will appoint their own assistants.

Expect Others to Follow.

Since the other German states usually follow the example of Prussia, it is expected they will adopt the same system, thus further strengthening the stranglehold of Chancellor Hitler's party.

Meanwhile, German business is doing everything in its power to convince Hitler that it is standing firmly behind his government. At a meeting in Berlin tonight 13,000 representatives of busines sorganizations promised to support Hitler in Sunday's elections. Two hundred similar rallies were held by barons of industry throughout the reich.

In Berlin Krupp von Bohlen-Halbach, chief of the Association of German Industry and whose plants provided most of the German guns in the world war, sounded a "cry for peace and equal security."

"Foreign countries may assert that German industry is calling for peace but really wants orders for arms," he said. "Before the whole world I solemnly declare that German industry agrees wholeheartedly with the words of Chancellor Hitler that Germany is ready to destroy the last German machine gun if other nations do the same.

"Can Find Work to Do."

"We approve this offer not only for the sake of moral reasons but for plain business reasons. German industry has shown before and after the French invasion of the Ruhr that it can find work to do in a disarmed state. Furthermore, German industry is convinced that simultaneous and equal disarmament by all states, thus guaranteeing peace, will give a powerful impulse to the economic life of all nations which cannot in the least be equaled or approached by orders for arms.

"German business also is of opinion that it is unbearable and hampering the progress of the world to apply different moral standards to different nations."

This was another reference to Germany's complaint that she is still being crushed and treated as a second class nation by the victors of the world war.

Support Hitler, His Plea.

"Every man and woman in Germany should vote for Hitler and his foreign policy to restore pride in our honor," the industrial chief concluded.

Rudolf Hess, deputy leader of the Nazi party, decreed today that women shall not be dismissed from their posts if they are supporting relatives. In the event they do not need an income, they can be replaced only by men who support families, the decree adds. Hess also decreed that after Sunday's election and plebiscite all big festivities and banquets will be forbidden.

"Utter simplicity must reign in all Nazi homes," he ordered.

The list of 685 candidates chosen by the Nazis to be elected to the reichstag was published today. They are cheifly Nazis, but include a group of former members of the Nationalists, the Bavarian Peoples' party, the Peasant party and one former Catholic Centrist.

GEN. LUDENDORFF IS WON OVER TO HITLER'S CAUSE

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

MUNICH, Nov. 7.—A reconciliation between Gen. Erich Ludendorff and Chancellor Adolf Hitler, it is reported with some authority, promises to be the culminating feature of the tenth anniversary of the Munich "beer ball putsch," which will be observed here on Thursday.

Gen. Ludendorff deserted his comrades after that miniature revolution and became a violent opponent of the entire Nazi philosophy. It has been a cherished ambition of Hitler since he took over the government to bring about a reconciliation.

While Gen. Ludendorff continued his attacks on the Nazi régime in the columns of his newspaper, the Volkswarte, until it was suppressed, it is believed he has been won over by Hitler's plea for a united nation. It is also believed the chancellor would have their reconciliation be a prelude to one between President Paul von Hindenburg and Gen. Ludendorff.

Russia and Spain Protest Goering's Words at Arson Trial

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Protests by ambassadors of two nations against statements made last Saturday by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and federal minister without portfolio, while on the witness stand in the reichstag fire trial, and a threat to bar all foreign correspondents from the incendiarism hearings were made today.

A categorical demand has been made by Russian Ambassador Chinchuk upon the German government for a public disavowal of a reference by Gen. Goering to the alleged failure of the soviet union to pay its bills.

[Goering, testifying in the reichstag fire trial, said: "I would like our relations with soviet Russia to be better," adding that more German workers could live because of Russia's orders "if Russia paid her bills."]

Hold Conference Today.

The ambassador yesterday presented a verbal note and will follow it with a conference with Konstantin von Neurath, the foreign minister, tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Berlin listeners said they heard a broadcast from a Moscow station which said the Russian embassy had commented that Germany would on no occasion in the future doubt the validity of the Russian notes, as the orders probably would be withdrawn.

Spanish Ambassador Zulueta visited Von Neurath today to ask an interpretation of Goerings strictures on the Spanish revolution, which he described Saturday as more bloody than the German revolution.

The Spanish envoy said he was given a satisfactory interpretation and the incident was considered closed.

Threatens to Bar Foreign Press.

He charged biased reporting and description of the hearings as not concerned with incendiarism, but as a high treason trial. Writing in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, the press chief said:

"The German people positively refuse to permit the continual falsified reporting in which the court is charged with violating the rules and in which the noxious elements and saboteurs of every kind of kultur are being elevated to martyrs."

"A Piece of Knavery."

"The Reichstag fire," the press chief continued, "was a piece of knavery intended to start a civil war in Germany and hinder Germany's fight for independence and honor."

Arthur Garfield Hays and Leo Gallagher, American attorneys, and other foreign attorneys, Sommerfelt added, abused Germany's hospitality by criticizing the proceedings of the court.

It was announced that Dr. Joseph Goebbels, reich minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, will testify at the trial tomorrow.

Woman, 72, Is Divorced on Ground of Cruelty

Circuit Judge Walter J. LaBuy yesterday granted Mrs. Johanna Fredrickson, 72 years old, 3336 North Harding avenue, a divorce from Gustav Fredrickson, 60 years old, a carpenter. They were married in 1896. Mrs. Fredrickson charged cruelty. Her bill, filed by Attorney Harry X. Cole, stated that her husband was afraid of harming her so long as her pet collie lived, but that when the dog died, in 1930, he began to abuse her. Mrs. Fredrickson was given the house in which she lives under the terms of the decree.

DOLLFUSS TURNS DICTATORSHIP'S SCREWS TIGHTER

Head of Austria Falls on Socialists.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Nov. 7.—Turning the screws of dictatorship a little tighter has become a part of the Dollfuss regime's daily dozen. Adverse to the abrupt action counseled by his pro-Fascist Heimwehr allies, the chancellor never lets the day go by without a gentle turn of the screw, but today he outdid himself.

Three interdictions fell on the Socialists. First they were ordered to call off their annual observance of the 15th anniversary of the death of Victor Adler, one of the fathers of Austrian Marxism, on Saturday. The anniversary falls the day before the anniversary of the republic and the observance was to prevent the workers from turning the celebration into a national holiday.

Orders Editorial Removed.

Secondly, the Socialists were ordered to call off plans to illuminate the rathaus [city hall] Monday in honor of the 10th anniversary of Burgomaster Karl Seitz's assumption. The Arbeiter Zeitung, the street sale of which already has been forbidden, was ordered to cut out an editorial on the approaching 15th anniversary of the "Downfall of Hapsburg Absolutism." In the editorial regrets were expressed that the liberation cannot be celebrated and the workers were counseled to "keep cool."

Impatient with Dollfuss' tactics, the Heimwehr took it on themselves tonight to smash up a meeting of the Landbund, the Farmers' party which is represented in the government. Two former ministers in the Dollfuss cabinet, Franz Winkler and Vinzenz Schuny spoke at the rally.

Schuny had delivered an impassioned appeal to Dollfuss to free himself from the Fascists and return to the democratic fold.

"We are for Dollfuss and for the guild state, but against fascism and against the Heimwehr," he said.

Riot in Political Hall.

Dollfuss' police had made up their minds to call a halt when 100 Heimwehr did it for them, precipitating a brawl in the famous Viennese political hall called the "Eye of God."

A new plague of Nazi flags and stink and tear gas bombs at the university, the Technical academy and the Anatomical institute in Vienna and provincial capitals led to another dictatorial order forbidding the sale of practical jokes of an explosive nature.

The first contingent of "assistant soldiers," recently authorized by the other European powers, began service in Austrian garrisons today. The contingent totals 8,000 recruits. They will be trained for six months and then be succeeded by another 8,000, thus building up the reserve.

Austria's request that her army of 22,000, to which figure she was bound by the post-war treaty of St. Germain, be increased to 30,000 was granted last summer by France and the other European powers.

EDWIN A. DAVIS, FORMER INSULL AID, ENDS LIFE

Can't Find Work; Blames Old Employment.

Despondent because his former close connections with Samuel Insull had made it impossible for him to find an executive position with utility companies anywhere, Edwin A. Davis, former Chicagoan, shot and killed himself yesterday in the yard of his home at Los Angeles.

Mr. Davis, who was 52 years old, was vice president and controller of the Middle West Utilities company from 1929 until the collapse of the Insull utility empire. Previously he had had a long career with other Insull interests. He was with the Public Service Company of Oklahoma from 1916 to 1920, and was auditor for Middle West from 1920 to 1929.

Three months ago, with his wife and their daughter, who is 11 years old, Mr. Davis moved to California with the intention of starting over. Three weeks ago he traveled to New York in high hopes of getting a place with a Long Island electric company, but returned melancholy and told Mrs. Davis "nobody wanted a man with the Insull mark on him."

In the Davis home was found a note giving instructions as to the disposal of a small amount of securities. The family formerly lived at 2403 Central Park avenue, Evanston.

BANDITS PASS UP CHECKS.

Edward S. Braden, night manager of the Ridgeview hotel at 901 Maple avenue, Evanston, who was kidnaped and robbed of $700 Monday, disclosed yesterday that his captors had allowed him to retain $2,000 in checks which were in the hotel safe.

BRITONS ATTACK PARIS AND BERLIN FOR ARMS FIASCO

Lloyd George Apologizes for Criticizing Britain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The disarmament debate in the house of commons tonight degenerated into a series of orations devoted to personal justifications of previous actions.

Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, denied once more that he was responsible for Germany's withdrawal from the league of nations and the disarmament conference. Later David Lloyd George, wartime Liberal prime minister, who had sat through a bitter verbal lacing for having made statements that Great Britain had not honored the Versailles treaty's disarmament provisions, rose to apologize and to attack France.

Sir John's speech concentrated on developments in Germany after the Nazis had resigned from the league and walked out of the disarmament conference.

Says Action Was Premeditated.

He pointed out that as soon as this was done, manifestoes were plastered all over Germany and an election was called to ratify Chancellor Hitler's action. He asserted that this could not have been prepared over night. He added that the draft terms presented to the disarmament conference by Prime Minister MacDonald last March had already been accepted in principle by the Hitler government, which had come to power the preceding January.

Sir John finished on a conciliatory note, asserting that a disarmament agreement must be reached whether Germany is at Geneva or not, but that German precipitation in the final pact is essential.

Sir John began his attack on Lloyd George by accusing him of fouling his own nest. This charge was taken up later by Sir Austen Chamberlain. Both accused Lloyd George of stating in news reels and newspapers that Germany had observed the provisions of the Versailles treaty whereas the former allies, including Britain, had not.

Blames Berlin for Everything.

Sir John quoted figures intended to prove that Britain had disarmed since the war on sea and land and in the air.

This line was also taken by Sir Austen, who asserted that Lloyd George "published broadcast to the world charges against his own country which I hope he is prepared to modify. His articles did not, I think, serve the cause of peace by doing less than justice to his own country. These and his other utterances became welcome propaganda for the dominant party in Germany."

Sir Austen asked Lloyd George to speak carefully in the future and blamed Germany for the breakdown of every European conference which has failed since the war.

Lloyd George Apologizes.

Lloyd George in his reply attacked Sir Austen for disturbing European peace through charges of German bad faith. He apologized for the film in which he asserted that Britain had not disarmed, declaring he did not know it was going to be circulated abroad.

As soon as he was informed it would be circulated abroad, he said, he tried to rectify matters by writing a newspaper article showing just how much Britain had disarmed. This article was circulated in the United States.

Lloyd George wound up with the assertion that France is willing to wreck world peace through demands for security. He said France, as the most militarized country in the world, is still willing to ruin the chance of agreement on a technical point of probationary supervision in Germany.

Hitler Approaches Italy.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

ROME, Nov. 7.—An early Italian step to ascertain what would be the reaction of Great Britain and France if Germany were to propose a meeting of the signatories of the Mussolini four power peace pact to consider the general European situation, with particular reference to disarmament, is expected as a result of a two hour conversation which Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, German minister of aviation, had with Premier Mussolini this morning.

Gen. Goering bore a letter from Chancellor Hitler thanking Mussolini for his "action in favor of equitable systematization of international relations," and giving an outline of the attitude of the German government toward disarmament. A long discussion ensued in which Gen. Goering amplified his country's viewpoint.

Germany Seeks Way Out.

Gen. Goering's presence in Rome is interpreted here as an attempt to break the ice and approach Great Britain and France through Italy with a view to rendering possible a resumption of the discussion of disarmament.

The German government, according to this theory, feeling sure of its victory in next Sunday's plebiscite on Hitler's policy, is believed to be looking ahead and trying to find some way out of the crisis precipitated by its own impulsive actions. In this attempt the German government turns first to Mussolini, seeing in him the only person capable of acting as an intermediary between Germany on the one side and Britain and France on the other.

Snow Covers Outdoor Gardens of Building at Fair

Fair and Colder

The second snowfall of the season, which appeared in Chicago and suburbs yesterday afternoon, is to be followed by the coldest weather so far this fall, according to the forecast of W. P. Day, government meteorologist. Temperatures of 24 degrees in the suburbs and 28 in the city were predicted for today. Today will be fair, according to the forecaster. Unsettled weather, with rain or snow, is predicted for tomorrow.

Snow fell in central Illinois yesterday. Bloomington reported a temperature of 34 degrees.

OWNER OF DELLS IS QUESTIONED BY COURTNEY'S AIDS

Louis Silversmith, said to be part owner with Sam Hare of the Dells, Morton Grove roadhouse, was questioned yesterday in the office of the state's attorney in the Criminal Court building. It was shortly after he left the Dells that John [Jake the Barber] Factor was seized by kidnapers on July 1.

While Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley said that Silversmith was not in custody, it was noted that a policeman accompanied him when he went to lunch and returned to the Criminal Court building. It was rumored yesterday that the Touhy gang, alleged kidnapers of Factor, originally had planned to rob the roadhouse and later seized Factor as an alternative.

It was also learned that the state is searching for a former highway policeman, who is said to be a ringleader in the kidnaping plot. Factor is said to have identified Roger Touhy, Louis Kator, Gustave [Gloomy Gus] Schaffer, Willie Sharkey, and Edward [Father Tom] McFadden as his kidnapers. All except Kator, who is a federal prisoner in Chicago, are awaiting trial in St. Paul for the kidnaping of William Hamm Jr., St. Paul brewer.

SUSPECT IS HELD IN SLAYING NEAR THE GOLD COAST

Fred Nimtz, 27 years old, 61 Burton place, was ordered held to the grand jury on a charge of murder yesterday by the coroner's jury which investigated the slaying of Samuel Studner, 1317 North Maplewood avenue. Studner was found dying from stab wounds outside his cleaning establishment at 1449 North Clark street. Nimtz who served one year in the house of correction for a burglary in 1921, was seized the day following the murder on Oct. 28, and held after circumstantial evidence linked him with the crime for which robbery appeared to be the motive.

Mrs. Ann Kelly, 437 Deming place, was a surprise witness at the inquest. She said she had known Nimtz for several months as "Fred McCarthy." She testified that he came to her apartment at 3 o'clock the morning after the murder and he appeared to be extremely nervous. She also said she noted a cut on his right hand.

EASY MONEY FOR BANTAM FLEET TO ROUT SMUGGLING

Coast Guard Spending 15 Millions on Fleet.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Besides building up its regular battle fleet with a part of the 3 billion 300 million dollar public works easy money fund the United States is constructing one of the hard hitting pocket navies in the world, inquiry revealed today.

The coast guard is now engaged in spending 15 million dollars from the easy money fund on building a bantam fleet which will patrol the shores of the country in time of peace and be the nucleus of home defense in time of war.

First enemy of this new pocket navy will be no foreign power, but the rum runner who attempts to cheat Uncle Sam of his tariff and taxes by smuggling booze after repeal.

Equipped with its own seaplanes, also being built with easy money, the coast guard's tiny fleet will be prepared to fight in the air as well as on the water. Each of the six new 300 foot revenue cutters which are to be built will carry aircraft.

Yards and Arsenals Busy.

Arming of the coast guard with new teeth is understood by those close to the administration to be only one step in a program to give the United States a navy second to none. Shipyards and arsenals already are humming with activity on the 238 million dollar construction program for the regular navy.

Lathes in the world's largest cannon factory, located at the navy yard here in Washington, are screaming more continuously now than in any period since the world war as guns are being turned out for the new navy and coast guard ships.

Meanwhile at the navy department estimates of appropriations which will be asked of the next congress are being drawn up. It was learned today that these estimates will call for a continuation of the present high speed construction program.

Most of the coast guard's 15 million dollars is going into the building of six super-modern revenue cutters. Costing more than $9,000,000, three of this midget fleet will replace outmoded cutters and three others will be net additions to the coast guard's strength.

31 Planes to Fight Smugglers.

Another two millions is going for seaplanes. Convinced that smugglers will turn to planes when hard pressed at sea, the coast guard is planning to be forearmed. Besides, its experts point out, seaplanes can patrol a much wider area in a day than a boat.

Already operating three huge flying boats, the coast guard will have 31 new seaplanes when the present program is finished. At least one plane will be assigned to each of the six new cutters.

The rest of the easy money allocated to the coast guard is going for smaller cutters and patrol boats. Some money will be spent on air fields for the planes.

Drink Victim Given $500 Damage Against Druggist

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 7.—(AP)—A Common Pleas court jury today granted a $500 verdict to Arthur E. Souders against the druggist who sold him a ginger preparation that caused him paralysis in 1930. The verdict was the first growing out of numerous similar cases of paralysis here three years ago.

EPISCOPALIANS OPEN MEETING AT DAVENPORT

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Davenport, Ia., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Seventy-five of the 120 bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church were present at the opening session of the meeting of House of Bishops of that church here this afternoon. The most Rev. James D. Perry, primate of the Episcopal church, is presiding over the sessions, which will continue through Thursday.

Among important matters to come before the bishops will be the formal request of a minority of the clergy asking the bishops to find a way to restrain liberal bishops from participating in services of communion administered by ministers who are not Episcopally ordained. At the same time it is expected that the house will make some pronouncement regarding church unity developments between the Episcopal, Lutheran, old Catholic, and Greek Orthodox churches. The question of "supplementary ordination" for ministers of other churches is said to be on the agenda. The latter proposals have been brought forward by Bishop Frank E. Wilson of Eau Claire, Wis.

The request for action against Episcopal bishops or other clergy uniting in communion services with clergy of other churches refers to the union communion service at the St. Louis cathedral in which Episcopal Bishops F. F. Johnson and William Scarlett invited a Methodist clergyman to officiate.

Bishop Perry has announced that he will appoint an assistant presiding bishop of the church to succeed the late Bishop Hugh L. Burleson of South Dakota.

"Yes Tom, COLD WEATHER DEALS A POOR HAND"

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

Mary: "It is a happy circumstance, Tom, especially in the winter operation of a car, to locate two aces in your partner's hand—as I have in Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and Conoco Bronze Gasoline—both sure tricks. Harry and Sue being late can be forgiven unless you consider poor choice of oil and gas a fault." Tom: "But we arrive everywhere on time even in the coldest weather." Mary: "True, but not everyone realizes that Conoco is responsible for our car always being ready to start. Our friends figure that the quick starting and economical operation of our car is pure luck." Tom: "How do you know so much about oil and gas?" Mary: "Since you turned the car budget over to me I've tried out the leading brands and bought those which give us the most for our money. I simply apply my method of buying supplies for the house to buying oil and gas. I have the car checked up regularly, too, and when it turned cold I changed the oil to winter grade, something I'm told most car owners are careless about. As to cost, you'll recall we have had no repair bills. We get more miles between drains and greater mileage from each gallon of gas. This with full protection, thanks to the 'Hidden Quart'." Tom: "Well! I always said you were a great little manager."

DR. NATHANSON ACCUSED IN TRIAL BY FORMER AID

Says He Ordered Disposal of Woman's Body.

Mrs. Fay Wexner, 1311 South St. Louis avenue, took the witness stand yesterday in the Criminal court of Judge Walter P. Steffen and told of the death of Mrs. Ruth Baccus, 40 years old, of Stockton, Ill., in the office of Dr. Frank L. Nathanson. The physician is on trial before a jury qualified to impose the death penalty on a charge of murder by abortion.

Mrs. Wexner, a former attendant in Dr. Nathanson's office at 3846 West Madison street, told the jurors that Dr. Nathanson had ordered her husband to "take the body out and dump it" after Mrs. Baccus died on the operating table on Jan. 18. When Wexner refused, the witness said, Dr. Nathanson announced his intention of "getting rid of the body" himself until those in the office threatened to summon the state's attorney.

Tells of Patient's Visit.

Mrs. Baccus first went to Nathanson's office on Jan. 16, Mrs. Wexner said. The witness said she overheard Nathanson tell Mrs. Baccus that the operation would cost $50.

Mrs. Baccus returned for the operation on Jan. 18, Mrs. Wexner said, and went into the operating room at 10:30 o'clock in the morning.

"About 1 o'clock," the witness said, "Dr. Nathanson came out and appeared to be very excited. He ordered me to get Earl Terry, a man who sometimes administered anaesthetics for him. Terry was in the reception room, and I sent him in. Pretty soon they came out, and Dr. Nathanson said: 'Well, she's gone.' He told me to send the rest of the patients away."

Questioned by Prosecutor.

Questioned by Assistant State's Attorney Philip Treacy, Mrs. Wexner said that all the patients were women.

"Then Dr. Nathanson told Terry and me not to say anything," the witness continued. "He said that if we were questioned we should say that the woman was ill when she came to the office." Mrs. Wexner then told of her husband's arrival and his refusal to dispose of the body.

Mrs. Wexner said she left the doctor's employ in September when he told her that he did not want to "work while the case is pending." The witness also told of a meeting later at a lawyer's office at which she, Dr. Nathanson, and Terry were present. She said that Dr. Nathanson "threatened to kill us if we went to the state's attorney." The trial is one of the first in which the state has asked the death penalty in an abortion case.

JUDGE CONSIDERS $507,344 CLAIM OF MRS. BUSBY

Probate Judge John F. O'Connell yesterday took under advisement, following final arguments by counsel, the claim of Mrs. Esther Busby against the First National bank for $507,344.

Her husband, Leonard A. Busby, traction executive, left an estate at his death in 1930 which consisted largely of stocks encumbered by bank and brokers' loans. Mrs. Busby charges that the bank was negligent of its duty as executor of the estate in that it failed to sell the stock immediately and pay off the loans. As a result the falling stock market not only wiped out her equity in the estate, but left a deficit.

"The bank could not have foreseen the international complications which arose," said Attorney John D. Black, counsel for the bank in his closing argument. "It could not foresee that England would leave the gold standard or the suspension of the National Bank of Austria. These factors contributed to the calamity here."

"Regardless of Melvin Traylor's guess as to the stock market," said Edward Johnston, Mrs. Busby's attorney, in rebuttal, "the bank was not justified in speculating and holding the stocks for a rise. The executor's duty is to liquidate an estate as quickly as possible, and nothing can be shown to change the application of this fundamental rule."

U. S. to Push Trial of 76 for Liquor Conspiracy

The trial of 76 defendants in the government's $1,000,000 liquor conspiracy case in Hammond will go forward despite the approach of repeal. This was revealed yesterday as Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick of Hammond set the trial date for Nov. 22. Orders also were received from United States Attorney James Fleming at Fort Wayne to proceed with the trial regardless of the vote on repeal. More than 2,000 offenses are charged in the indictment of the defendants from Chicago, Chicago Heights, Hammond, and Gary.

FELONY COURT'S FIGHT PROGRAM IS A KNOCKOUT

Harry Stron, 37 years old, former pugilist and ex-convict, won by a knockout over Policeman John J. O'Gara of the West North avenue police station in the feature event. Stron then lost a decision to eleven bailiffs in the battle royal.

The experience gained last week by the bailiffs in subduing Frank McDonnell, rampant attorney, on orders of Judge Thomas A. Green was a factor in their victory. The Felony court arena, which has played to standing room since the McDonnell bout, was crowded yesterday when Stron appeared to answer a charge of vagrancy.

Judge Schiller Presides.

Stron opened the preliminaries with a request to make a few remarks to Judge Jay A. Schiller, who has replaced Judge Green on the bench.

"Don't I get a receipt for the $125 that this copper took away from me?" Stron demanded.

"I didn't take——" began the policeman. Stron, however, felt that the verbal sparring had gone far enough. He started a long overhand right hand punch from the vicinity of the jury box which landed on O'Gara's jaw.

The policeman went down and stayed there. No count was necessary.

As Policeman O'Gara's handlers dragged him from the arena Judge Schiller sentenced Stron to serve six months in the county jail for direct contempt of court. The sentence was the signal for the opening of the battle royal.

Strike Stron with Their Chins.

Stron sprang at the nearest bailiff, and the other bailiffs, well versed in their part in such scenes, closed with the defendant. Several bailiffs struck Stron on the fist with their chins before the prisoner was taken to the county jail. Felony court fans are awaiting the next appearance of Stron on Nov. 22, when the vagrancy charge comes up again.

Spectators expressed satisfaction with the two bouts, but there was some talk of providing defendants, bailiffs, and attorneys with boxing gloves. It is feared that some one might be seriously injured in the spirited bare fist fighting.

WOMAN CONVICT REFUSED CIGARET, CANDY ALIMONY

Judge Rudolph F. Desort refused yesterday in the Superior court to grant temporary alimony to Mrs. Bessie Opas, who is serving a sentence in the women's penitentiary at Dwight for conspiracy to murder her husband. The husband, Maryan Opas, 5114 South Racine avenue, is suing for divorce on the ground that she has been convicted of a felony.

The alimony had been asked for Mrs. Opas that she might have some pin money in jail to buy candy and cigarets.

"I'm not going to make jail too pleasant for this woman," said Judge Desort. "Besides, I don't believe in women smoking."

He allowed Mrs. Opas' attorneys $150, however, to prosecute a cross-bill to Opas' action, in which she charges him with adultery.

CIVIL SERVICE BOARD ORDERS 5 COPS OUSTED

Five policemen, four of whom were charged with being intoxicated, were ordered discharged from the force yesterday by the city civil service commission. Richard J. Collins, president of the commission, repeated his warning that the commission will not tolerate drunkenness among members of the police force.

Those discharged were Garrett M. Garvan and Eugene J. Donohue of the Rogers Park station, Frank J. Martin, Brighton Park; Edmund Buckely, Fillmore, and Thomas Smart of the Maxwell Street station. Besides being charged with intoxication, Garvan was alleged to have threatened to shoot a young woman who resisted his advances and Donohue was charged with having failed to take action to prevent the attempted assault. Martin and Buckley also were charged with intoxication.

Patrolman Smart was found guilty of being absent from his post without being regularly relieved from duty. He had been detailed to guard the property of the Medill High school at 14th place and Throop street. While he allegedly was away from his post typewriters valued at $1,400 were stolen.

EXPEDITION HEAD TELLS OF FLIGHT OVER EVEREST

Air Commander P. F. M. Fellowes, commander of the Houston Mount Everest expedition whose two planes, carrying four men, flew over the peak of the highest mountain in the world, described the flights and the long preparation that preceded them before a luncheon of the Rotary club at Hotel Sherman yesterday.

Photographs of the top of the peak disclosed a small triangular lake of hot water, Commodore Fellowes said. That lake is the only thing about the mountain that was not fully charted, and remains the only mystery left to Mount Everest. He also described two near tragedies to the two planes, one when an observer broke his oxygen line at an altitude of 39,000 feet, and the other when one of the pilots lost his oxygen tube from the mouthpiece.

The expedition accomplished its purpose last spring. It was supported by Lady Houston, who put up the necessary $40,000.

Student Denies He Wiped Hands on Emblem.

BY GUSTAVO RENO.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 7.—President Grau San Martin tonight refused to tender any form of apology to the United States government for an alleged insult to the American flag yesterday by Juan Antonio Rubio Padilla, a member of the student directorate, which is Grau's chief support.

Padilla, who was boarding an airplane en route to New York to board a steamer to the Pan-American conference at Montevideo as a Cuban delegate, was said by witnesses to have wiped his hands on the flag and turned about to receive the plaudits of the crowd. The crowd, however, apparently realizing that serious international complications might develop from the incident, failed to cheer.

Refuses to Recall Padilla.

The War Veterans' association tonight demanded that Padilla be recalled as a Cuban delegate, but President Grau refused. He also denied the organization permission to send an apology to the United States.

Grau was asked late tonight by Segundo Curtiss, another member of the student directorate, to hand United States Ambassador Sumner Welles his passports. Grau said he would consider the matter. Curtiss suggested that the directorate arrest Welles and throw him in Cabanas fortress on charges of conspiring to overthrow the government in collusion with other oppositionist factions.

Welles said today:

"I consider the incident at the docks most serious. Relations between the United States and Cuba are delicate and critical. I have informed Washington fully and am now awaiting instructions."

Student Denies Incident.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 7.—(AP)—J. A. Rubio Padilla, Cuban student, today issued a signed statement denying that he wiped his hands on the American flag before boarding an airplane for Miami yesterday. The statement said:

"Reports that I wiped my hands on the American flag are absolutely false. I want the American people to know that we have respect for the American flag and we would not do such a thing.

"I do not know how the reports were circulated because when I entered the plane I had both my hands full. I had my hat, an overcoat and a package in my hands, and could not have touched the flag, which was in the ceiling of the plane."

RESTAURANTS VOTE IN INDIANA ON PLAN TO RETIRE FROM NRA

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 7.—[Special.] — Restaurants throughout the state were preparing tonight to vote on a proposal that they withdraw from the NRA program and voluntarily remove the Blue Eagle from their establishments. Francis Wells, Indiana recovery director, was hastening action to forestall the threatened withdrawal.

In an effort to keep Indiana's 1,275 restaurants under the recovery banner, Wells instructed all local compliance boards in the state to investigate and report immediately on compliance with the restaurant code.

Where it is shown that restaurants are unable to increase their income to offset added costs under the NRA, exceptions will be extended to code provisions, he said.

The proposal that Indiana restaurants voluntarily withdraw from the recovery movement was made at a meeting of the executive committee of the Indiana State Restaurant association.

Local chapters throughout the state were instructed to hold elections on the proposal and to report by Friday.

Reasons outlined by W. S. Akin, secretary of the restaurant association, that their members voluntarily remove the Blue Eagle, were:

"Failure on the part of the NRA to take adequate measures to prevent 'chiseling,' inability of restaurant operators to cope with mounting food and labor costs and price cutting by 'chiselers,' and failure of NRA officials to permit them to operate temporarily under the proposed national restaurant code, which provides a uniform 'mark-up' on food prices, after repeated appeals had been made."

IOWA GIRL GOES ARMED AFTER KIDNAP THREAT

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Margaret Hise, West Liberty, Ia., student, carried a revolver to her University of Iowa classes today as police continued investigation of extortion letters which she had received.

An all night guard was stationed at the Delta Delta Delta sorority house, where Miss Hise received a third threatening letter demanding that her father "dig up $10,000."

Miss Hise received the first letter Oct. 26 and thought it was a joke.

All of the letters were typewritten. Chief of Police W. A. Bender thinks it may be the work of a maniac.

WOMAN SAYS MURREL BEGAN ATTACK IN AUTO

Tells Story as He Asks Release on Bail.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Sobbing and incoherent at times, Blanche Ralls today told the story of alleged rape by Lieut. John H. Murrel, former all-American football star. She testified at a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner P. A. Lockhart.

Miss Ralls, 28, from Alabama, started her story with a dancing party at the St. Anthony hotel, following with details of an early morning visit to a night club.

Without the slightest sign of recognition, the army officer and Miss Ralls faced each other across a table. The hearing was held to determine whether bond for Lieut. Murrel would be recommended by Commissioner Lockhart. The lieutenant had been in jail since Oct. 27.

A motion for the discharge of the defendant filed by Egbert Schweppe, chief defense counsel was overruled by Commissioner Lockhart.

Her Story of Attack.

Miss Ralls gave the names of several prominent San Antonians as members of the dancing party, including Phil Wright Jr., son of the San Antonio fire and police commissioner.

She said the attack started while Lieut. Murrel was driving her home in his car.

"I told him I'd tell my brother and he'd be killed," Miss Ralls sobbed, "but he said he'd gotten away with it before and he'd do it again."

She testified the rape occurred in a ditch filled with weeds, and that when she screamed she was threatened with having her "head beat to a pulp" if she didn't stop.

In a statement given a few days ago to District Attorney Smith, Miss Ralls said she had been married twice, the first time in March, 1922, at the age of 16, and the second time in January, 1931. She has a son 11 years old by her first marriage, it was stated, and has filed suit for divorce against her second husband.

Lieutenant Under Guard.

Lieut. Murrel entered the court room accompanied by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Murrel, and his sister, Miss Rae Murrel. United States Marshal Guy McNamara, with two uniformed customs inspectors and two deputy marshals, guarded the lieutenant.

Miss Ralls was accompanied by Major R. K. Whitson, Fort Sam Houston provost marshal. She wore a chic brown beret and a green coat with heavy gray fur collar.

Miss Ralls began her testimony today by stating that she had resided in San Antonio for two months, that she is 28 years old and that before coming here she lived all her life in Birmingham, Ala.

Miss Ralls testified she saw Lieut. Murrel for the first time on the morning of Oct. 22, about 12:30 a. m. She said she had gone to the St. Anthony hotel to dance about midnight with Jack Plummer, Frank Paschal, young Wright and a Miss Newman.

Lieut. Murrel, Forrest Miller, and a Mrs. Quail joined the party, Miss Ralls testified.

Plan Ride to Night Club.

They danced until about 1 o'clock when she, Miss Newman, Wright, Plummer and Paschal went to a filling station about three blocks from where she lived.

Arrangement had been made, Miss Ralls said, for them to meet Lieut. Murrel, Miller and a Mrs. Quail at the filling station from which they were to go to a night club. They found Lieut. Murrel, Miller and Mrs. Qual waiting at the station, the witness testified, and all got into Murrel's car. She sat with Lieut. Murrel, Miss Ralls stated, Miller sat with Mrs. Quail and Wright sat with Miss Newman.

They went to Shadowland, Miss Ralls related, arriving there about 2:15 a. m. and danced 45 minutes. The party left Shadowland, picking up another man, whom she did not name, as they left. They dropped Mrs. Quail off at her home, Miss Ralls testified, and went back to the filling station.

Says Wright Got Angry.

She asked what time it was, she testified, and became greatly alarmed when she was told it was 5 o'clock in the morning. Wright and Miss Newman were sitting in his car, Miss Ralls stated, and she went over to them, saying that "we must go home."

Wright became very angry, the witness testified, and told her to "go away and attend to your own business."

Miss Ralls said her feelings were hurt by Wright's attitude and she started to walk away. She had gone about a quarter of a block, the witness testified, when she was overtaken by Miller, who tlod her that she didn't have to go home alone and asked her to come back. She returned to the filling station, Miss Ralls said, and she, Miller, Lieut. Murrel and the other man whom she did not name, left in Lieut. Murrel's car. The witness said she felt some fear about going with three men she had only met a few hours before.

They let Miller out of the car at a residence and then let the other man out at the Plaza hotel.

It was then she began the story of an attack by Lieut. Murrel.

Miss Ralls declared she drank only two cocktails during the evening. She admitted she gave Lieut. Murrel a card some time during the evening which bore her name and telephone number.

"Isn't it true," Schlesinger asked, "that you cursed Phil Wright at the filling station until all the neighbors around there heard you?"

"I never cursed in my life," Miss Ralls said.

"Isn't it a fact," Murrel's lawyer asked, "that both Wright and Miller tried to take you home from the station and you wouldn't go?"

4 OF TOUHY GANG DENY KIDNAPING OF ST. PAUL BREWER

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Pleas of not guilty were entered today by Roger Touhy of Chicago and three others accused of the $100,000 kidnaping of William Hamm Jr., millionaire St. Paul brewer.

They appeared in federal court before Judge H. M. Joyce. The three besides Touhy are Willie Sharkey, Eddie "Father" McFadden, and August "Gloomy Gus" Schaefer.

They are accused under the Lindbergh law. The trial will start tomorrow or Thursday before Judge Joyce, depending on the availability of the desired court room.

City, county and federal officers, several bearing machine guns and tear gas equipment, surrounded the basement court room in the county jail building where the arraignment was held. That lasted only 15 minutes.

Stewart's attempt to learn on just which charge the government intends to proceed was thwarted when George M. Sullivan, federal district attorney, told the judge he first desired to consult Joseph B. Keenan, first assistant attorney general.

BAKERY DRIVER IS SHOT WHEN HE FIGHTS BANDITS

Three Negro gunmen stepped out of the shadows at State street and Garfield boulevard at 5 o'clock yesterday morning and halted Paul Erickson, 36 years old, a world war veteran, as he alighted from a street car. Instead of obeying their command to raise his hands he rushed at the nearest robber and was shot down.

The trio fled and Erickson staggered to his feet. He dragged himself to the shipping room of the Schulze Baking company, 40 East Garfield boulevard, where he is employed as a salesman-driver, and then collapsed. He was taken to the Englewood hospital by fellow employés. Late yesterday afternoon physicians were trying to remove the bullet, which pierced his abdomen and lodged near his spine, in an effort to save his life.

Defies Gunmen to Save $1.50.

At the hospital the police learned that Erickson defied the gunmen rather than surrender $1.50 which he had in his pockets. His wife, Charlotte Erickson, summoned from their home at 6044 South Fairfield avenue, explained that her husband's salary amounted to $43 a week plus a few dollars commission.

"We have three daughters, Lorraine, 11; June, 9, and Pauline, 5 years old. We had to watch every penny. I wish he'd given the men the money, but I can understand how he felt. He went through the war and he was fearless."

Company to Pay Bills.

E. J. Welsh, salesmanager of the Schulze company, said that Erickson's hospital and doctor bills would be paid by the concern. He said that Erickson was considered one of their best workers and added that the company would make a special effort to see that the bandits were captured. Welsh explained that Erickson, as a union driver, was not allowed to join the group insurance written for other employés of the baking company. He added that Erickson was given a $1,000 insurance policy by his union.

CLAIMS KREISLER KNEW OF GERMAN SABOTAGE IN U. S.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—That Fritz Kreisler, internationally known violinist, associated with German sabotage agents in the United States before America entered the world war and was shown incendiary pencils for blowing up munition plants was brought out in testimony filed today with the United States District court.

The testimony was that of Frederich L. Herrmann, confessed saboteur, who was questioned during a three-day hearing last month by Simon E. Sobeloff, United States district attorney, in connection with the Black Tom and Kingsland munitions blasts in 1916 and 1917, respectively.

Herrmann, who was one of the men connected with Paul G. L. Hilken, paymaster for the German agents, also told how he bought a Mexican passport in Havana for $20 and described the methods he used to become a naturalized citizen of Chile without leaving New York. He also confirmed Hilken's testimony in connection with the German activities in spreading anthrax germs among horses.

DRUG STORE MANAGER ROBBED.

The Town Hall police yesterday were seeking an armed bandit who obtained $250 in a robbery late Monday night of Vernon Osborn, manager of a Walgreen drug store at 3558 North Ashland avenue.

HIT THAT COLD WHERE IT LIVES—in the System!

Don't fool yourself about a cold! It's nothing to be taken lightly nor treated lightly. A cold is an internal infection that will quickly spread within the system unless promptly checked. The wise thing to take for a cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

First of all, it is distinctively a cold remedy and not a "cure-all." Secondly, it is an internal treatment. Thirdly, it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling, and tones and fortifies the entire system. That's the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances. All druggists sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and reject a substitute.

HUNT MISSING STATE WITNESS IN MURDER TRIAL

Prosecution Fears He Is Kidnap Victim.

A search was started yesterday afternoon for a missing state witness in the trial of two gunmen charged with the murder of Policeman William D. Lundy. The witness, John Zagata, a coal wagon driver, failed to appear yesterday in answer to a subpoena and an attachment was issued by Judge Charles P. Molthrop.

The defendants are Joseph Majczek, 24 years old, and Theodore Marcinkiewicz, 26 years old. They are alleged to have shot the policeman to death in the robbery of a delicatessen at 4312 South Ashland avenue on Dec. 9, 1932.

Assistant State's Attorney John Leonard Murphy revealed that Zagata had not appeared in answer to the subpoena, which was served at his home at 4316 South Marshfield avenue Monday night. The prosecutor said that police had visited the home several times yesterday without finding the missing Zagata.

Witness to the Slaying.

Zagata was delivering coal in the delicatessen when the policeman was slain. Policeman Lundy had been visting with the owner, Mrs. Vera Wulash, when the bandits entered. Zagata is said to have identified the two defendants as the slayers. The prosecution voiced fears that the witness might have been kidnaped.

Defense Attorney James M. Burke and George Crane held that the fears of the state were unfounded and said that they had seen Zagata in the courtroom earlier in the hearing.

Day long questioning of veniremen yesterday failed to add to the eight jurors selected in the murder case Monday. Objection to the death penalty caused a number of prospective jurors to be excused by the prosecution.

Five prison sentences yesterday brought to 541 the number of criminals sentenced since the opening of the campaign against crime. Those sentenced are:

BERNARD O'BRIEN, 36 years old, sentenced by Judge Walter J. Steffen to one to 14 years for assault in the attempted robbery of John A. Johnson, 317 Siegel street.

MIKE GERESE, 19 years old, sentenced by Judge Donald S. McKinlar to one year to life for robbing the real estate office of Ald. David Sutton (8th), 8926 Cottage Grove avenue, of $390.

LOUIS URKIN, 26 years old, and JOSEPH PATTERSON, 26 years old, sentenced by Judge Francis B. Allegretti to one to 20 years each for the robbery of George Long, 2839 South Union street.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Ten damaged school buildings further affected by the March 10 earthquake today were ordered torn down by the board of education. That order included two high schools, Polytechnic and Venice. Oliver G. Bowen, structural engineer, reported it will cost $311,000 to rehabilitate the George Washington High school. Reconstruction plans for McKinley Junior High school call for expending $164,000.

REPORT PASSING OF BOGUS MONEY HERE IS TREBLED

Hunt Distributor on the West Side.

The amount of counterfeit money passed to Chicago merchants has more than tripled in the last month. This was revealed yesterday in a statement by Capt. Thomas J. Callaghan of the United States secret service.

Capt. Callaghan said that from 15 to 20 fraudulent $5 notes are turned in each day at the United States courthouse in comparison to an average of five daily a month ago. Most of the counterfeit money has been traced to the vicinity of Roosevelt road and Kedzie avenue, Capt. Callaghan said, and agents are searching the neighborhood for the distributor.

15 Arrested in Chicago.

Federal officials expressed the belief that the money was manufactured in Detroit and brought to Chicago for distribution. Fifteen persons have been arrested for passing counterfeit money in Chicago during the last few months.

"All of them say they got the counterfeit notes in pool rooms around Kedzie avenue and Roosevelt road," Capt. Callaghan said. "The passers pay on an average of $22 for $100 worth of the counterfeit.

Poor Job of Counterfeiting.

"The bills are not a very good job of counterfeiting and the face of the notes is decidedly black in color. Most of the fraudulent money turned in to us during the last month has been in $5 bills, although there are a few $20 and $100 counterfeit bills being passed in the city.

"The bookies and night club owners get most of the larger notes. Artificial light makes it easier for the passer to get rid of them without detection."

SERVICE!

HARD-TO-PLEASE laboratory workers, who can't be fooled about what a gas range or gas heater should be, test every type of gas appliance before it is approved for sale in the stores of The Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company.

If your range, or laundry-drier, or water-heater doesn't work right—even if you bought it at any one of the large number of other places where these are sold—an expert service man from Peoples Gas will tell you what's wrong and if possible correct the fault.

All a part of the service supplied to 796,000 Chicago homes where gas cooks and heats for but a few cents a day.

The DREAD of Winter Ceases when you install Gas Heat

To prove that every home can now afford to heat with gas, we install it at our expense . . . remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

WITH gas heat in your home, you look ahead to pleasant, comfortable winter months. Every hour, day and night, your house is kept at the correct temperature—automatically. You never have to go near the furnace to shovel coal, set dampers, bank the fire. Your fingertip is your fireman when you heat with gas. Just set the thermostat on the wall for the heat you want.

Gas heat ends all the bother and worry of furnace-tending. Such as shaking and hauling ashes, early-morning fire building, anxious waiting for heat to come up, chopping kindling. It's so clean, too. Walls and drapes stay clean much longer. Because you never have to go down to the furnace, basement dirt is not dragged upstairs.

Heating costs are down

Now, every home, even the most modest, can afford to heat with gas. Rates have been reduced to one-half of what they were during the 1930-31 heating season. So why worry along using old-fashioned methods any longer? Install gas heat now.

We want to show you that you can afford to have the luxury of gas heat. To do this we'll take the risk of installing it in your home. Without one cent of cost to you we'll install gas heat in your present furnace or boiler. Then you try it and pay $3.00 a month rental on the equipment in the average home. Use it for a month, two months, a year. If within the year you decide that you don't want gas heat, we'll take it out and replace your former heating equipment in good, workmanlike order.

But, if you decide, as we think you will, to keep gas heat, the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment.

Mail coupon TODAY

Get the full facts on heating your home with gas. Mail the coupon today. The long winter is still ahead. Decide now to enjoy the convenience and luxury of automatic gas heat.

Now in effect NEW LOW COST for Heating Homes with GAS

YOU INVEST NOTHING!

Without ONE CENT of investment by you, we install the most modern burner in your furnace or boiler. If you are satisfied, it stays. If not—and you are the sole judge—out it comes and your former heating system is re-installed—AT OUR EXPENSE. We make this offer because of our confidence in the perfection of gas heat.

BROADCASTERS BARRED FROM PRESS GALLERY

News Writers' Action May Reach Congress.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—An issue which congress itself may be called on to settle was raised between radio broadcasters and daily newspapers today when the standing committee of correspondents of the congressional press galleries rejected applications for admission to the galleries on behalf of three members of the Columbia Broadcasting System's news service.

Samuel W. Bell, chairman of the standing committee, announced that the decision was based on rules of the senate and house galleries of more than twenty years standing, approved by the speaker of the house and the senate rules committee, and restricting admission to representatives of daily newspapers and press associations furnishing a daily telegraphic service.

Apply by Letter.

Henry Adams Bellows, vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, made an application first in a letter to the standing committee. He then filed application for admission of three representatives of Columbia News Service, Inc., a subsidiary of the system, organized recently to collect and distribute daily news events.

Bellows was said to have conceded that the letter of the rules barred radio representatives, but contended they should be amended to permit their entry into the press section.

He asserted the radio news service was "a recognized supplementary means of conveying news to the public."

Telegraphs a Protest.

Protesting admission of the three radio men, E. H. Harris, chairman of the Publishers National Radio committee of the American Newspaper Publishers association, telegraphed the committee:

"The radio under its present control, operating under government license which is issued by a partisan board, is not a free institution. Official recognition of radio broadcasting as a medium of disseminating news would be an official sanction of the censorship of news. If proof of the above statement is necessary we will have our attorney appear before the committee with formal protest."

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Tossed for a Loss

DICK TRACY—First Words

HOLDUP VICTIM TRACES THIEVES; CATCHES THEM

Lincoln, Ill., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Like the Canadian northwest mounted, Thomas Moos got his man. Held up Monday, bound with baling wire, gagged and then threatened with torture because his pockets yielded only $12.85, Moos and his companion, Jack McDermott, who suffered the same treatment, managed to free themselves a short time later. Then Moos started on his Sherlock Holmes career.

He visited the transient hangouts in several central Illinois towns before reaching Mason City, Ill. It was there he pointed out Alfred Rebaldo, 23, of Herman, Pa., and James Howard, 17, of Shawnee, Okla., and told Chief of Police Gus Sievers to arrest them.

They admitted their guilt, returned his $12.85. They are prisoners in the Logan county jail. After binding Moos and his companion in his home they threatened to burn their prisoners' feet and burn down the residence unless additional money was produced.

MOTHER CHARGES 3 CHILDREN SPENT $17,000 ON PARTIES

Mrs. Katherine E. Looney, 5012 Harper avenue, widow of a policeman, charged yesterday before Municipal Judge Erwin J. Hasten that her three children have spent $17,000 on whoopee parties in the last year.

She appeared as a witness against the children, William, 23 years old; Kathern, 19, and Florence, 18, on charges of disorderly conduct. The children, who live with their grandfather at 3641 Archer avenue, appeared at her room Monday evening and beat her after taking her purse, she said.

They were arrested when the family fight moved to the sidewalk outside the house. Arrested with them were Elsie Betke, 5248 Lowe avenue, and Art Lyle, 7254 Yates avenue. Judge Hasten fined the three Looney children and Lyle $200 each. They denied that they had taken the $17,000, which was in a bank account of their grandfather.

FRANCE CROSSES FINGERS; LOTTERY DRAWING HELD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 7.—All France crossed its fingers and prayed for good luck tonight when the big drawing of its first national lottery was held before a throng in the Trocadero hall in Paris. The lottery was set up by the government to raise funds for its badly unbalanced budget. There were prizes ranging from 200 francs to 5,000,000 francs [a franc is worth 6 cents at current rates]. A reader of the Paris edition of THE TRIBUNE, who got a free ticket with his subscription, drew a 100,000 franc prize.

With the names of the winners unannounced—only the numbers were given out—everybody was eyeing his neighbor to learn if he had won the 5,000,000 franc grand prize. A Marseilles paper said the winner is a barber in the little province town of Tarascon, but he has not admitted it yet.

The drawing was an elaborate ceremony with everything possible done to make this suspicious nation believe it was not all decided beforehand. Georges Bonnet, finance minister, refused to buy a ticket for fear he would win something and bring the ire of all the "I-told-you-sos" about his head. Orphans in state institutions drew the numbers which were contained in balls dropped from transparent wire spheres.

PARDON FAMOUS WOMAN SLAYER IN CONNECTICUT

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The freedom of Bessie Wakefield, a celebrated case, had been won today. The board of pardons granted her a full pardon for the slaying of her husband.

Mrs. Wakefield, 44, a central figure in a noted murder case, made her seventeenth appearance before the board yesterday.

The members of the Bessie Wakefield society, headed by Mrs. Ernest Thompson-Seton, Greenwich writer, told the board a home awaited Mrs. Wakefield in Reading, Pa., and pronounced the pardoned woman "a high type of Christian woman."

Mrs. Wakefield was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1914 after women, aroused by the death penalty imposed in her first trial, took her case to a higher court.

Set Date for Yuletide Party at Fortnightly

Young People to Be Guests Christmas Night.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE young people of society, those who are not old enough to be included in the debutante festivities, are marking Christmas night on their engagement pads with a red check, for one of the very nicest of the many holiday parties will be given that night, the Christmas Fortnightly.

The first Fortnightly of the season is to be this Friday night at the Fortnightly club and already the sixty girls and boys who will attend the series this winter are getting their "formals" ready for this important occasion.

This is the fifth season for these fortnightly dances and again Mrs. Nelson Thomasson Jr. heads the committee in charge. Mrs. Edmund J. Doering, Mrs. Walter E. Faithorn, Mrs. John E. Fortune, Mrs. Arthur T. Galt, Mrs. Freeman Hinckley, Mrs. Robert C. Orr, Mrs. Bryan S. Reid, Mrs. F. Stanley Rickcords, Mrs. Allen B. Ripley, Mrs. Clarence T. Seipp and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf are the other mothers on the committee.

Judging by the Christmas parties that already have been planned for those of younger-than-debutante age they are going to have just as busy and gay a holiday season as they always have had. Miss Haire's school, the University School of Girls, is going to have a dance on Thursday, Dec. 21, and Miss Harris' school is reserving Wednesday, Dec. 27, for its annual dance.

The Junior Assembly, to which some of the older boys and girls are invited, is planned for Saturday, Dec. 30. Mrs. John Paul Welling and Mrs. Huntington B. Henry are making arrangements for the Junior Assembly this year.

Century Club Plans for Final Party.

A trick ceiling in tones of rose, yellow, and blue that will look like a million dollars but cost little or nothing is the immediate problem of Ambrose Cramer. Appreciating the generous manner in which Mr. Cramer gives of his time and talent the directors of the Century club have again called upon him to supply the decorations for their farewell flair Friday evening.

Because most of the gayety to center in the Casino, also because the club itself is decorative enough, Mr. Cramer is concentrating his attention on the downstairs ballroom. The walls will be heightened with vertical stripes and the lights will rival the gaudiest effects in the Fair.

Mrs. Walter P. Paepcke made reservations yesterday to entertain eight guests, among them Prince Potenziani and his daughter, Donna Myriam. Joseph T. Ryerson will have a party of the same size and the Graham Aldises will be host and hostess to at least a dozen of their friends. Still others who will be farewell "flairing" Friday night will be the William H. Mitchells, the Warren Wrights, Col. and Mrs. Horatio B. Hackett, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Faurot Jr., the Rush Butlers, the Dudley Cateses, the James B. Forgans, and the Clay Judsons.

Six hundred reservations were the total last night but George Dickson predicts at least 1,100 or 1,200 by Friday morning. Members, Mr. Dickson points out, are privileged to bring one or two guests . . . "just so it isn't a dozen."

The party will begin at 8 o'clock upstairs with a piano "going strong" and a steaming bowl of spicy English punch in the background. At 9 o'clock dinner will be served below. The floor show planned by Niles Trammell, Mrs. Ford R. Carter, Ernest Byfield, and Harold Strotz will start at midnight.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Miss MacDonald! Paging Miss Jeanette MacDonald, please!

Miss MacDonald? A gentleman by the name of M. Maurice Chevalier needs you in his films!

While "The Way to Love" is a pleasing enough little conceit, the absence of his usual leading woman from Chevalier's new film gives it a sort of ham-without-egg-ic aspect. Perhaps, had her rôle permitted pretty Ann Dvorak to smile and sing more than she does, the absence of radiant, tuneful Jeanette would not have been so much felt, but, for very good scenario reasons, poor Ann has a glum and tragic mien well on into the last reel and not until the finale does she burst into song.

Madeleine is a knife thrower's ward. She and her guardian participate in a knife throwing act at carnival shows. She stands still and looks pretty while Pedro hurls glittering blades that outline her figure in the wall behind. He is a ferocious Frenchman, and time after time Madeleine has endeavored to escape him and the life he forces her to lead. . . .

You've guessed it—Francois to the rescue . . . !

Francois is employed by Gaston Bibi, who runs a photograph gallery that serves to disguise other activities—principal one being the ingenious aiding of philandering wives and husbands. The debonair chap is a valued employé but his heart is not in his work. He longs to wear the uniform of a guide and escort tourists about the Paris he knows and loves so well. . . .

Bibi's wife has a niece and she WOULD have Francois as a nephew—but, non, non . . . !

And so on. . . .

The story is rather quaint and springs several gay surprises. There is little if anything in the piece that could be termed risque. The acting is all excellent, though it did seem to me that M. Chevalier was not quite up to his usual form. Certainly he doesn't sing enough to satisfy his admirers ,of whom I am one. Direction was able. The staging is effective and the photography commendable.

See you soon!

Opera Season in English Is Promised City

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Opera in English with an all-Chicago cast is to begin a season on Dec. 3 at the Garrick theater. The announcement comes from a new organization called the Operetta corporation, whose general manager is Charles J. Thannhause. It is an entirely different company from the Chicago Grand Opera company, concerning whose affairs there has been gossip for several weeks, but which has not been ready as yet to make definite announcements as to its season.

"The Bartered Bride" will be the first attraction of the Garrick season. Always presented heretofore in German or Bohemian, it has been translated into English by Libushka Bartusek, at one time ballet mistress of the old Chicago Opera and now employed in a similar capacity by the new group.

Alice Mock, a favored soprano of the Civic Opera company in its last years, will sing the leading rôle. She will be supported by William Miller, Emery Darcy, and Hortense Drummond, all well known Chicago singers who have had operatic experience in America and Europe. Among other members of the company who will appear in later attractions are Lorna Doone Jackson, Florence Tennyson, Charles Sears, Bertram Goltra, and Clifford Bair. Choristers and dancers will likewise be of Chicago.

A weekly change of program is contemplated. It is planned that some of the works to be given will be "Carmen," "The Bohemian Girl," "Babes in Toyland," and several of the Gilbert and Sullivan list, "Ruddigore" among them.

Popular prices, ranging from 50 cents to $1.50, are announced. It is stated that the organization is being backed by a group of substantial business men who are desirous of seeing Chicago talent employed in Chicago entertainment.

Plan Annual Benefit for Emerson House

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. John W. Valentine, Mrs. Louis C. Sudler, and Mrs. Conway H. Olmsted met for luncheon in the Mather Tower club yesterday to devise ways and means to dispose of the tickets for a series of Sunday entertainments that the board of Emerson House is giving as its annual benefit. Announcements of the entertainment are in the mail today. The first performance is to be on Dec. 3 in the Blackstone theater with Glenn Hunter starring in "There's Always Juliet." Emerson house is not endowed or supported by the city so the board has to raise money for its maintenance if it is to keep its doors open this winter.

Racial Groups Crowd Movie Casting Office

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—The MGM casting office has been a busy place for two days. First there were crowds of Chinese seeking employment in the picture version of "The Good Earth." But the Chinese had to jostle their way to the window of Casting Director Ben Piazza through other crowds which consisted of: Indians—some of them from as far away as Santa Domingo, New Mexico—asking work in the Novarro-Lupe Velez film "Laughing Boy"; Mexicans wishing extra wages in "Viva Villa" and Negro men and women for the parts of forest people in "Tarzan and His Mate."

It is only a short time ago that this cosmopolitan casting office sent its last bunch of Eskimo men, women and children back to northern Alaska after "The Eskimo" was completed.

Francis Lucus, 19 years old, an office boy on the MGM lot, gets the part of the young Pancho Villa, which last week was announced as assigned to Noah Beery Jr. No explanation was given for the shelving of young Beery, whose uncle, Wally Beery, plays the mature Villa throughout the film.

If there isn't any change in the last scene of the Villa film, as it now stands in the script, the finish of the picture is likely to strike film fans as stagy and unreal. As it stands, the last scene is supposed to show the dying leader of the Mexican irregulars pierced with bullets lying in a peon's home when an American reporter walks in. "I want to interview you," the reporter says. "Will the name 'Villa' be in big newspaper headlines all over the world if I do?" Villa is supposed to ask [or words to that effect]. "Yes, all right; I'll talk." Whatever the final version of the story of Villa's exploits and death, it will be filmed in a manner okayed by a representative of the Mexican government, which is watching this film story like a hawk.

MGM is using the man-woman and jungle prescription that filmed so well in "Red Dust" for another picture, "Dolly," announced to start shortly, but with no principals yet cast. This time the jungle will be along the African Congo instead of Malaya.

Betty Blythe, once famous as the screen queen of Sheba, is Mary Brian's mother in "The Heir to the Hoorah," featuring George O'Brien, and adapted from the Paul Armstrong stage hit at Fox's.

The name of Janet Gaynor's current starring picture, based on the successful novel "House of Connolly" has been changed by her studio to "Carolina." Besides Janet this story of an impoverished southern family and its beautiful daughter includes: Lionel Barrymore, Henrietta Crosman, Robert Young, Dick Cromwell, Mona Barrie from Australia, and Stepinfetchit, Negro comedian.

Victor Jory is leading a temporary exodus of Fox lot film players to the stage at Pasadena Community playhouse, his troupe including, besides himself, Howard Lally, Suzanne Kaaren, June Vladsek, Wini Shaw, Dixie Frances, Blanca Fischer. Twelve members of the Pasadena police force play in the supporting cast. The play is "The Spider," and it's to run two weeks. Jory used to be a leading man at the Playhouse before he got his film contract.

They say at her studio that "Pert" is Pert Kelton's real first name.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius P. Ordway returned from Europe today on the Bremen.

Sew Your Own Counters Are Well Stocked

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Industrious and ambitious shoppers who "sew their own" have been remembered with a grand new assortment of velvets, satins, and glittering brocades just in time for new dinner and evening creations.

First the slipper satins, sleek shining bolts of supple satin in deep ruby red, almond green, tobacco brown, white and black. The stuff is ribbed but very flatly, and will make some stunning gowns to cling and skin inches away from the silhouette.

Flowered velvets are the newest arrivals to charm you . . . until you have seen inky black velvet sprinkled with tiny roses and green leaves you have missed a shopping thrill and the large patterns are almost as lovely.

Brocaded velvets are equally effective with soft full blown blossoms of the dull velvet contrasted against the filmy thinness of the chiffon. New rose red and apple green brocades are amazingly decorative and easy to wear this year.

The airiest fabrics you can dance in are the new nets, tulles, and chiffons that glisten and glitter with silver and gold threads . . . gauze to be quite literal . . . brown, sapphire blue, black, and white gauze criss-crossed, plaided and checked with gold and silver traceries. Some bright blue gauze is spangled with bright gold circles . . . yards of snowy white crêpe is spaced with lines of silver and the same sort of dull crêpe in black has been crossed with lines of liquid gold.

Fabulously rich fabrics of gold and silver cloth are made to look like heavy corded silk . . . huge black blossoms of black velvet are splashed against shimmering gold thread backgrounds . . . a lovely two toned black and silver can be used on either side.

And, returning to slinky chiffon velvets, you'll find the most gorgeous gray shade of the year, a dark gray that looks exactly like the blue steel sheen of a revolver. Contrast it with deep russet orange and you will own the most spectacular dance dress you ever owned.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Mrs. Roosevelt left for New York tonight to return to the White House tomorrow evening. She will attend the luncheon tomorrow of the Junior league in their club house. She also will be in attendance at the furniture exhibit of articles made in the Val Kill factory in which she is much interested.

This afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt had a number of the ladies of the diplomatic circle at early tea, and just afterward had a large company of invited guests for a later tea.

Mrs Dall, daughter of the President, has returned to the White House and joined her children, who are there for the winter.

Cardinal Mundelein and the Rev. R. C. Maguire arrived today from Chicago and are at the Carlton for a few days.

ONE of the nicest wishes we ever heard a mother make for her son—and, thinking it over, a pretty unselfish one—was the toast proposed at dinner Sunday on the occasion of the lad's twenty-fifth birthday anniversary. [A quarter of a century of progress, he himself called the occasion.]

"Here's to Ben. May he mean as much to another woman in the next twenty-five years as he has meant to me these last twenty-five," said his mother.

* *

AND a little later, after the young man's father had made a gay and brilliant little speech, toasting his son, and the young man had responded so concisely and cleverly that a university president who was among the guests commented, "Doesn't this family ever breed a dumb one?"; after a great gleaming birthday cake had been brought in, after everybody had sung "Happy Birthday to You," and blown out the candles, each with a wish for the birthday boy, this particular guest could think of no better wish than a silent repetition of his mother's toast with the added stipulation that the woman have something of the quality of his mother.

* *

A FEW days ago an elderly, prim looking lady entered the Travel and Transport building at the Fair and asked a guard if he could tell her where there was an exhibit with a lady attendant. He pointed one out to her [Miss Michaels of the Danish exhibit], and the older woman went over to her.

"I am sorry to bother you, but I want to ask about something I didn't want to ask any of the men guards. I don't know whether I should ask you either," she added doubtfully. "After all, you're a stranger."

The young woman assured her it was quite all right and that she would be glad to help her if she could.

"Well," said the perplexed and inquisitive lady, "could you tell me what a diorama is?"

THE University of Chicago Magazine, which is published by the alumni council, celebrates its quarter centennial by a change in format. The new number is larger, and an interesting photograph of President Robert Maynard Hutchins, in academic gown, decorates its handsome henna cover. The other day when the new copies were delivered to a magazine distributing agency the agency manager glanced at the picture on the cover and commented:

"Is that fellow the head of his class?"

WE HAVEN'T investigated matters at all, but a friend writes that a loop store has bought up most of the Irish Free State and Chinese exhibits from A Century of Progress and is trying to get as many other foreign displays for exhibition in the store after the Fair closes as is possible.

Octavio Barrios, consul for Guatemala, is looking around for a site for a permanent display for his country, our informant adds. Dr. Jorge M. Chavarri, recently consul for Peru, is scouting about for just such a place for his country, especially to advertise the Four Centuries exposition which Peru will soon hold at Cuzco, where recent archeological discoveries have brought to light that several other civilizations preceded the Incas. Thus there may be a Pan-American exposition located permanently in Chicago to boost trade between all the Americas.

THIRD AND LAST

By NORVAL RICHARDSON

SYNOPSIS.

Sheila, known as "Bun" O'Reilly, an American, makes a comfortable living abroad by helping fellow countrymen out of difficulties. Fred Crawford, a Paris newspaper man, is her friend and counselor. Bun agrees to help James B. Finlay, an elderly, wealthy American, find his young wife, Helene. He wants no publicity. He had met Helene after the war in Bucharest. He had installed her family, the Bobinaoffs, in a villa on the Riviera at Grasse. Her brother, Ferenz, he had brought to America. No trace can be found of Helene and her parents since the last time she returned to visit them. Bun's suspicions are aroused by Finlay's niece, Mrs. Craymer. A recent newspaper picture showing Helene standing with a tall woman in a group at Biarritz is the only clue Bun has to go on. That same night Finlay is murdered. The money Finlay had given Bun as advance payment is stolen from her apartment. Finlay's son, Robert, arrives from America. He proves to be an impostor. Bun meets the real Robert Finlay in Cannes. She is attracted to him, but believes he's in love with Helene. She continues the quest with him. The tall woman with Helene in the group picture is identified as the Countess Vernadon, who has a villa in Grasse. Bun and Robert call on her at her dreary villa. She denies knowing Helene. As they are leaving they see a woman fall from a window. Back at the hotel Bun sees Mrs. Craymer, who has appeared at the hotel, drop a note to Robert. Next day Mrs. Craymer is found dead. Fred Crawford arrives at Cannes. Bun's maid, Liberté, had been watching Mrs. Craymer's room and is now held by the police.

INSTALLMENT XXXIII.

GLOOMY FOREBODINGS.

Only Bun's quick command prevented Liberté from making a complete display of the famous black and blue marks to the detectives.

"It is a loss of valuable time—your asking us questions," said Liberté. "You know who the criminals are. Why do you not punish them and restore the money to mademoiselle?"

The men exchanged glances. "Then you think we know who these burglars were?" the spokesman said.

"Know! Of course you do! We all do! Has not mademoiselle the proof?" Their glances settled on Bun.

"Has she not shown you all the evidence?" Liberté rushed on. "The two handkerchiefs—the scarf she found at that villa, near Grasse—the note that was thrown from that balcony above us to Monsieur Finlay in the street below! It is all as plain as this mole with the three hairs on my chin. Why do you try to make a mystery when there is none?"

Bun's heart sank. Everything that she had so carefully withheld from her testimony was now thrown into the fire. But her determination was not yet overcome. She smiled steadily through the outburst. She even went on smiling when she saw the two pairs of eyes fastened suspiciously upon her.

"Liberté has the most vivid imagination in existence," she said with forced ease. "She likes nothing better than to create events out of whole cloth. I did not tell you what she has just said because there cannot possibly be any real clew in them."

"It is written all over mademoiselle's face."

"Still, mademoiselle, if you will pardon us—it would be useful to hear them. One can never tell from what source a clew may be found."

Still making light of the incidents, Liberté had blurted out, Bun recounted them in detail, but she saw the two men making notes with the certainty that each word was being recorded and would later be weighed to its full value. She wondered, after the men had gone, what her exact position would be from now on. No mention of detaining her there, at least formally, had been made. There was not even a request that she remain, yet she sensed that this was taken for granted. Her lasting impression was that these men were not taking the affair au fond du cœur. Was this due to the fact that every one implicated—with the exception of Liberté—was foreign? Or had it been intentional on their part to create this impression, thus setting a trap into which she might more easily fall?

"Are they going to keep us here, mademoiselle?" Liberté asked when they were alone.

"I should say indefinitely—after your entirely unnecessary volubility. Why can't you learn to hold your tongue, Lib? You've thrown me from the frying pan into the fire."

"Mademoiselle was already in the fire."

"And what does that cryptic remark mean?"

"Do you think that I have no eyes in my head?"

"I thought you were exceedingly clever until today. Now I know you're amazingly stupid."

"Tiens! Because I know what is behind all this! It is written all over mademoiselle's face."

"What is?"

"Why she wishes to keep back everything and shield this Monsieur Finlay. Women always lie for the men they love. I have done it myself."

Bun tried one of her careless smiles, though she knew it was a fairly sickly one. "Am I showing it so plainly?" Do you think others have noticed it, too?"

"Monsieur Crawford—yes. And it makes him unhappy."

Bun tried to keep the lighter note going. "There's no reason for him to be miserable—at least on that score. I shall tell you, Lib, in the deepest confidence—my condition is hopeless. Mr. Finlay is already in love with another woman."

Liberté smiled. "Has he told mademoiselle that?"

"He didn't have to. I know it."

"I do—about men."

"What can one know until one has been a wife. Mademoiselle has still the great adventure of disillusionment before her."

The words struck home with more force than Bun liked to admit. She left Liberté and went out on the balcony. It was the hour she liked best, that time when the day was finished and all of its drama was concentrated into a few moments of radiant light. The mass of Esterel mountains was vivid against a blazing sky; the sea was afire with color; the intensity of light made every object—houses, trees, sail boats, tents along the beach, chairs, even people—stand out with a clarity that was unreal. A few moments more and they would all vanish in onrushing dusk.

Bun stared at the scene as if to impress it unforgetably upon her mind. In a way, it was like her experience of the last two days—brilliant and intense, but momentary. It was all going to fade suddenly into the shadows of night and be blotted out. Perhaps already it was gone.

While she stood there, resentful that her emotions had caught and held her in a sort of fantastic dream, she saw Robert Finlay come out from the hotel entrance below, stand a moment on the steps, and then wave to a taxi across the road. The next minute he was in the car and was being driven rapidly away.

It may have been her mood or it may have been only a feeling of inescapable fate which the last few days had developed in her, but as she watched the car drive away with him in it, she had an almost definite conviction that she was never going to see him again.

A step on the balcony made Bun start out of her gloomy thoughts: Crawford was beside her. One glance at him told her that he was in the grip of some new excitement.

Crawford's thoughts seemed to shift. "How d'you come off with them?"

Crawford scowled. "You seem to trust her."

"Don't be tiresome, Fred. She's as honest as the day."

"Where's she now?"

Bun nodded towards a door as they went back into the room. Crawford went to it and listened. "I don't want anybody butting in on this. Any chance of his coming here?"

"Not soon. I just saw him drive off in a taxi."

"All the better. They told me downstairs he'd made all the arrangements for Mrs Craymer's body to be sent to Paris. They've had a sort of inquest already."

"What conclusion have they reached?"

"Murder."

Bun shivered and turned away. Again Crawford's thoughts seemed to shift. He sat down and stared at the floor. When he looked up his brow was wrinkled. "Look here, Bun—we were on the brink of getting it all from him today. If he'd gone on—and I believe he was ready to—he'd have explained a lot. Didn't you want to hear it?"

"I don't know what you mean, Fred."

"If I weren't so sure of you, I'd say you were lying. No—you needn't get the wind up. You know you gave him a chance to evade the main issue. It looked as if you wanted him to."

When you drop into your favorite restaurant and ask what kinds of pie are on the menu it's fun to hear the waiter chant, "Apple, berry, cherry, mince, peach, pumpkin, choc'late cream." Yes, sometimes they almost sing it, and if the varieties of pie are plentiful there may even be another verse and a chorus.

And you'll notice that almost inevitably there's apple pie on the menu, for it's one of America's favorites. But while a restaurant can serve apple pie every day of the week, you probably wouldn't venture serving it every night at home. However, apple pies may be made in so many different styles that no one could possibly complain about a slight repetition if different kinds are served during the week.

For instance, to enhance a plain apple pie, place a slice of American cheese on the top of each piece, set under the broiler or in the oven just before serving and leave it just long enough to melt the cheese. It's delicious and lots simpler eating than when a wedge of cold cheese is placed alongside the piece of pie.

SOUR CREAM APPLE PIE.

1 cup chopped apples.
1 cup sugar.
1 beaten egg.
¾ cup sour cream.

Combine the ingredients in the order given and pour into a pastry lined pie tin. Bake in a hot oven [400 degrees F.] about 40 minutes, or until done.

DUTCH APPLE PIE.

¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar.
¼ teaspoon cinnamon.
4 tablespoons butter

Peel and core the apples and cut into eighths. Fill a pastry-lined pie tin and sprinkle over the apples the sugar, salt and spices which have been sifted together. Dot with butter and bake 50 minutes in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.].

APPLE CUSTARD PIE.

4 tablespoons sugar.
1 teaspoon cinnamon
3 eggs, slightly beaten.
2 cups milk.
1-3 cup sugar.
¼ teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon lemon extract.
Pastry for one crust.

Roll the pastry and place in a deep pie tin, building up the rim. Chill. Arrange the apples over the bottom and sprinkle with the 4 tablespoons of sugar and cinnamon. Blend the rest of the ingredients and pour in. Bake in a moderately slow oven [325 degrees F.] until firm.

GRAHAM CRACKER APPLE PIE.

½ cup butter, melted.
¼ cup sugar.
3 cups apple sauce.
¼ teaspoon nutmeg.
¼ teaspoon cinnamon.
2 egg whites.
2 tablespoons sugar.
½ teaspoon vanilla

Roll the graham crackers fine and blend with the butter and ¼ cup sugar. Save out ¾ cup of the mixture and pat the remainder into a pie tin, covering the bottom and sides. Bake in a hot oven [400 degrees F.] about 10 minutes. Fill with the apple sauce and sprinkle with the nutmeg and cinnamon. Bake in a hot oven [380 degrees F.] 10 minutes longer. Spread lightly with the egg whites, which have been beaten stiff and flavored with the vanilla and 2 tablespoons sugar. Sprinkle with ¾ cup of graham cracker crumb mixture and bake in a slow oven [300 degrees F.] for fifteen minutes.

MINUTE MYSTERY

By H. A. RIPLEY

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE DOG AND THE THEFT.

"My God! Some one has strangled him with a piece of twine," excitedly exclaimed Willis Frahm as he and Prof. Fordney stood in the doorway of the large library. He pointed at a beautiful collie lying on its right side against the opposite wall.

The two advanced, Fordney bent down, examined the dog and removed the twine from around its neck, carefully observing the peculiar knot that was on the right side.

"Hasn't been dead long," he remarked. "The body's still warm."

"This will certainly be a shock to Horgan," Frahm, his secretary, exclaimed. "I don't think there's anything in the world he loved as much as that dog."

Horgan, summoned by Frahm from the billiard room, stood over his dog's body, stupefied. He looked at Fordney with stricken eyes.

"Who in God's name could do a thing like this?" he asked feebly.

Fordney, a dog lover, was really aroused. "I don't know yet, but I'll find out. Anything particularly valuable in this room?"

"Yes," Horgan murmured. "In that wall safe behind the picture there. About five thousand in cash and ten thousand in negotiable bonds. But my dog! . . . my dog! Why?"

As he expected, the professor found the safe looted. The three left the room for the conservatory where every one in the house was to be questioned.

They all denied any knowledge of the crime. After explaining that the perpetrator of the double crime must have been well known by the collie, Fordney said, "No use, Frahm, you either strangled the dog or know who did—and the same goes for the theft!"

WHY DID FORDNEY ACCUSE FRAHM OF COMPLICITY IN THE CRIME?

Set Date for Yuletide Party at Fortnightly

Young People to Be Guests Christmas Night.

noon of Miss Letitia Channon and Charles A. Schreiner Jr. all were invited by notes or telephone calls from the bride-to-be or her mother, Mrs. James H. Channon, so simple and informal is the ceremony to be. The Rev. Edward J. Mullaly will read the service at 4:30 o'clock in old St. Mary's church, and Denis F. Kelly, godfather for "Tish" when she was received into the Catholic church several weeks ago, will give her in marriage. The bride's only attendant will be her sister, Mrs. Roy Bard, and Charles Augustus Schreiner will serve as his son's best man.

Ushering will be Mr. Bard, Jerome P. Bowes, Frederick Coleman, and John J. Schreiner, the bridegroom's brother. After the ceremony there will be a reception at Mrs. Channon's residence at 222 East Chestnut street. Mr. Schreiner and his bride will motor east on their wedding trip.

In the next day or two some thirty young women will receive notes from Mrs. John Dern, the president of the Service club, inviting them to become members of this fashionable charity group. Yesterday Mrs. Dern called to tell us of the elections . . . all of whom were members of the cast of the recent Service club revue though not all of the debutantes in the show have been taken into the club . . . and also to tell us that the club is supporting the Red Cross in a very generous manner.

Besides maintaining a table in the Red Cross workroom, the Service club members have volunteered to fill as many subscription books as possible during the next several weeks. Every subscription means a new Red Cross member.

Elliott Donnelley Shoots an Elk.

Elliott Donnelley's ten days' hunting trip in Montana from which he returned yesterday was well worth while for he succeeded in shooting an elk. He didn't attempt to bring it home with him, but the horns are being shipped to him. His brother, Gaylord Donnelley, who went with him, still is in the west, but is expected home later this week, and the elder brother expects that the younger one will have as a memento of the trip a bear skin, perhaps, in addition to an elk head.

Mrs. Harry H. Shearson has returned from a summer in the east and is at the Lake Shore Drive hotel for the winter. She isn't planning to go to Palm Beach at all this winter, which is good news to her friends who have missed her when she was away all winter for the last few years.

Mr. and Mrs. Lansing B. Warner of Hubbard Woods and Bradford L. Tobey of Winnetka have gone to Pinehurst, N. C., to remain until after Thanksgiving.

Frederick H. Rawson has gone to California to join his wife, who has been west for over a month. They are stopping at the Huntington hotel in Pasadena, and they write that they like it so much that they probably will spend the winter there.

Secretary of Junior League Arrives Today

Miss Mary L. Lambert, the field secretary of the Junior league, is arriving from New York this morning to speak to the Evanston Junior league at a luncheon meeting this noon at the Georgian hotel. While here Miss Lambert is to be entertained at the home of Mrs. John Herdic in Winnetka.

Mrs. Alfred Taylor is entertaining at dinner for her this evening and for tomorrow evening Mrs. John Eliot Warner has planned a dinner party for her. On Friday noon she will be the guest of the Evanston Junior league board at the home of Mrs. George Eastman Dryden on Ridge avenue in Evanston.

Announcement is made of the marriage on Saturday, Oct. 7, of Miss Geneva Wheaton Harrison to Arthur Hughes in Bethlehem, Conn. The ceremony took place in the old Congregational church in which the bride's great grandfather, the Rev. Fosdick Harrison, ministered several generations ago. Mrs. Hughes is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Wallace K. Harrison and is a sister of Mrs. Joseph B. Loesch and of Mrs. Arthur Brayton Slade. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes will be at home after Nov. 15 at 410 West 58th street, New York City.

The American Theater society is celebrating Founders' night at the Erlanger theater tonight, so there will be many socialites in the audience. Numerous well known men and women were among the charter members of the American Theater society, formed when the New York Theater Guild and the Dramatic League of Chicago joined forces a year ago.

Give Tea Sunday for Hugo Simons

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Redheffer have issued invitations to a tea next Sunday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock in their apartment at 1430 Lake Shore drive for Dr. and Mrs. Hugo F. Simon. Dr. Simon, who until recently was the German consul general here, now is in the department of political science at Northwestern university.

Miss Gladys Cable will be hostess this afternoon at her home in Hinsdale to the members of the Chicago Wells college club.

The Junior auxiliary of the Evanston branch of the Infant Welfare society has sent out intriguing invitations to a Gay Nineties ball on Thanksgiving eve at the Drake hotel. "Gay elegance and diversion are unavoidable," the invitations promise, and cunning little sketches give one an idea of how to dress. Mrs. John Eliot Warner is chairman of the committee.

Rene Weiller, French consul; Robert Hall McCormick, president of the Alliance Française, and the president of several other French clubs will be the especial guests and will speak at a breakfast to be given by Le Salon Français of the Chicago Woman's club next Monday. Mrs. Harold G. Sperling is president of the salon.

Invitations have been issued for a reception and luncheon the Renaissance is to give the officers of the Art institute and the artists of A Century of Progress at 12:30 on Nov. 14 in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel. Mrs. Herman Gresens as the sculpture chairman of the Renaissance is making the plans for the affair.

Heads Entertainment

Mrs. Harry Fischer is in charge of special features for the "Ballyhoo Ball" to be given on Nov. 18 at an Infant Welfare benefit.

'Ballyhoo Ball' Will Help 800 Needy Babies

Beverly Hills Center Will Be Host at Party.

Giving 800 babies in needy homes a good healthy start in life with the best of medical and nursing care, and cod liver oil for good measure, has been the accomplishment the last year of a group of women who act as sponsors for the Cornell square station of the Infant Welfare society, 61st and Wood streets. The particular task ahead, Mrs. William Fuller Gregson, president of the center, said yesterday, is giving another 800 babies a similar chance.

To raise the funds to keep the babies thriving and the station running at full speed, the sponsoring women, known as the Beverly Hills center of the Infant Welfare, will hold a "Ballyhoo ball" at the Stevens hotel on Nov. 18. A gay party with a floor show and other special entertainment features has been planned. Mrs. Arthur Clarage is chairman of the affair. This ball is an annual frolic to raise funds for the station to supplement those obtained through the thrift shop conducted the year round at 11008 South Michigan avenue by the 60 members of the center.

"Our members take turns working in the center and at the thrift shop," Mrs. Gregson explained. "Two volunteer workers are at the station twice a week when the mothers bring their babies for consultation. We do the clerical work and make layettes, too.

"Last year 800 babies were under the station's care, making a total of 3,835 visits to the station. That was 199 more than the previous year. One nurse made 2,931 visits to the homes, teaching mothers how to care for the baby and to prepare its food. We feel that by raising the money so the doctor and nurses can keep the babies well and by providing cod liver oil to build up each baby's resistence we are giving children in impoverished homes a better chance when they must take their places in the world later on."

Among others aiding in the plans for the ball are Mrs. E. W. Alderson, who has charge of the ticket committee, and Mrs. Harry Fischer, Mrs. Frank Hays and Mrs. William G. Brewster, who have charge of the entertainment.

THE STAGE

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

Bernard Shaw's "Candida," which will be revived by Katharine Cornell next month, is now on view at the Chicago Woman's club theater on East 11th street, where semi-professional productions are frequently staged. It is offered by the Uptown Players, a group that has been active in its neighborhood for seven years and has developed a fair degree of proficiency.

This interpretation of Shaw's most romantic comedy is a laudable piece of little theater work. It contains a satisfactory Morrell [the clergyman], a fairly persuasive Marchbanks [the young poet], and a good looking Candida. The performance rises above the usual level of amateurism in the matter of tempo, and the stage setting is an excellent realization of Shaw's text.

The Uptown Players have rented this theater for the next six weeks and will present a change of bill every Tuesday night during the period.

"Music in the Air," the operetta by Jerome Kern and collaborators which recently ended a year's run in New York, will occupy the Erlanger theater during its Chicago engagement, beginning Nov. 19, immediately after the departure of "Biography." The principal players in the large company will be Reinald Werrenrath, Donald Brian, Walter Slezak, Al Shean, Ann Barrie, Desiree Tabor, Harry Mestayer, Ivoy Scott, Alexis Obolensky, and Dorothy Johnson.

The Punch and Judy theater appears to have a hit on its hands in Alice Gerstenberg's dramatization of "Alice in Wonderland." Although the company was scheduled to disband last week, the demand for tickets has caused a continuance of performances. "Headlines," the variety show recently staged at the Punch and Judy, has apparently been junked, which was the fate it deserved.

The English version of "Yoshe Kalb" which Daniel Frohman is preparing to stage in New York late in December is the work of Fritz Blocki, who made his author's début in Chicago a year ago with "The World Between"—a drama that gave playgoers their first glimpse of Sally Rand. Otis Skinner wants to act the rôle of the old Chasidic rabbi, which was played on the Yiddish stage by Maurice Schwartz, and Sylvia Field, leading woman of many recent Broadway productions, may be chosen as the rabbi's disturbing young wife.

Lanterns Radiate Colorful Light for Quilt Design

Chinese Lanterns.

BY NANCY CABOT.

This unusual quilt pattern is as attractive as any we have unearthed in a long time. Its execution presents a rare opportunity to the quilter who likes to make use of many vivid colors, since the lanterns may be as colorful in fabric as they are in paper.

For a quilt pattern in this design send 5 cents in coin or stamps to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

Mrs. William H. Cary Will Give Lectures Before Garden Club

Through the efforts of Mrs. Lawrence Scudder, Mrs. William H. Cary, a distinguished amateur gardener and the author of a new and delightful book on the art of flower arrangement, is coming from her home in New Canaan, Ct. next week to give the Garden Club of Illinois a course of three lectures in the red lacquer room of the Palmer House. Mrs. Cary's subject will be "Flower Arrangement."

The first talk will be at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and the second and third at 11 and 2 o'clock Tuesday. It is because of the interest aroused by Mrs. Cary when she spoke before the Evanston, Kenilworth, Lake Forest, and Winnetka Garden clubs last June that she has been invited to return to Chicago now. Members of 34 garden clubs have been invited by Mrs. Scudder to bring flower arrangements to the Tuesday afternoon lecture that Mrs. Cary may criticize them.

Mrs. Cary is a former president of the New Canaan Garden club and was the recipient of the Emily Renwick medal from the Garden Club of America.

ENGAGEMENT

Mrs. Peter Lorimer of 979 Spruce street, Winnetka, announces the engagement of her daughter, Ellen, to James A. Sprowl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Sprowl of Lansing, Mich. Miss Lorimer is a graduate of Northwestern university and a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Mr. Sprowl is a graduate of the University of Michigan and is practicing law in Chicago.

Watch Name Translated by Use of Dance

For the first time Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze saw her name translated in rhythm yesterday. She wasn't quite certain of its meaning, but she is convinced "it was very nice."

Miss Elizabeth Pierce did the translation before fifty members of the Woman's Athletic club gathered in the club's blue and gold ballroom. It was one of her dozen dance and gymnastic interpretations illustrative of the instruction she will be giving a class of debutantes and post-debs and another of matrons beginning next Tuesday.

"The dance class is for the debutantes," commented Mrs. Andrew B. McCaughey, the club president, after the recital yesterday. "The matrons need the gymnastics. Nevertheless I wouldn't mind being able to translate a name like Miss Pierce interpreted 'Helen Pelouze.' I saw Mrs. Pelouze just like she is in board meetings."

Last spring the club offered its first dance and gymnastic classes under the direction of Miss Pierce, who has just returned from a summer of study in Jugo-Slavia. The response was so enthusiastic the directors decided to repeat again this season through the direction of a committee composed of Mrs. Walter L. Cragg, Mrs. Raymond P. Ashcraft, and Miss Florence Sargent.

"The most important development in the dance in a long day is the copyright," Miss Pierce pointed out between interpretations. "Now we have come to the place where an artist can protect his or her dance by copyrighting it just as anything else."

With an intricate set of drums Miss Jane Ashcraft accompanied Miss Pierce. She wanted to hide behind a screen, but the unanimous answer of the committee was "No." Miss Ashcraft will also be the accompanist for the classes.

Miss Betty Ashcraft is one of those who will be signed up in the junior group and Mrs. James H. Winston, a member of yesterday's audience, will have several lessons in the senior class before she leaves for her annual vacation in Tucson the beginning of next month.

With the committee members, Mrs. McCaughey and Mrs. Pelouze, Mrs. Winston remained for luncheon yesterday at the club. On Thanksgiving day Mr. and Mrs. Winston will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary.

Flattering Peplums of Jaunty Suit Give Decidedly Youthful Appeal

WOMAN'S AND MISS' SUIT.

This practical and smart little suit should be a great favorite. The peplums will reduce the waist line, and it slips easily under a fur or cloth coat. There's a cunning little sleeveless blouse in plain red woolen, with somber relief in brown in the velvet collar. Material for the suit might be a hairy woolen weave in bright red.

The pattern, No. 3008, comes in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years, and 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure.

Rex and Clara Have Marriage Under Control

BY DORIS BLAKE.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — [Special.]— Rex Bell, who loves to tell what a swell cook his wife, Clara Bow, is, interrupted his luncheon long enough to digress on the subject of Hollywood marriage.

"In Las Vegas not long ago an old man approached me for the price of a cup of coffee. Just at this moment two men jumped out of nowhere and pulled a holdup on me. The old man had nothing to do with it, as later proved. There wasn't a woman within a mile of the scene, so far as I know. Yet when the story broke there was not only a woman included in the story, but a redheaded one at that. Well, Clara was at the ranch, so it could not have been she, so it must be another redheaded girl, according to the story.

"Now, we have an agreement on, Clara and I, that if we get in any situation, as any man or women might innocently be drawn into one, we'll be the first to tell the other, and not let the news be spilt by an outsider. So the gag didn't work, but I've got an awful lot of kidding from Clara about that other redheaded woman. But if she hadn't believed in me no telling what'd have happened!"

Another agreement Rex and Clara have, made before marriage, is that if the time comes when either is dissatisfied with the other, they'll give each other the break of telling it first, and not have the news come from some outside source, so each would know before the public did.

But the life of two professionals has it recognized difficulties. Clara, as Rex says, has been working six weeks steady now, without one hour, day, or evening's relaxation. "She comes home dog tired," Rex reports.

"For the six weeks I've been sitting around, not working at the moment, and it will be just my luck when she's through and wants to go to the ranch to ride and shoot and cook and play I'll be called for a picture."

Aptitude, Not I. Q., Affected by Sex of Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Ever since feminism first reared its head there have been people who have enjoyed posing the question, "Are women men's equal mentally?" and who have loved launching the statement, "What men can do, women can do." The time has not yet come when we can be sure how much of the difference between the abilities of men and women is dependent upon their training through the ages.

Mental differences between the sexes in childhood have always been a matter of discussion and interest to parents. Differences do exist there—this fact has been proved through the observation and study of a number of children. Here are a few conclusions:

Girl babies begin to talk a little earlier than boys. Later they show greater ability in school in those subjects that involve the use of language or vocabulary—that is, in subjects such as grammar and reading and literature.

Boys are more likely to excel in the mathematical realm.

When it comes to reading tastes, it has been found that the scope of boy's reading is broader than that of girls.

Boys have much more general information than girls—and that doesn't mean only in regard to things with a boy or man appeal, but in regard to affairs of the world at large.

Other sorts of differences exist, but these are some outstanding ones. We can't yet be sure how many of them are due to generations of difference in training. Tests have not yet been devised acute enough to discover that. But in the meantime one of the interesting things that the better schools are doing is to give both boys and girls the same opportunities—in shop work and other manual activities and the arts—to develop all their latent abilities.

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Cowgill announce the marriage on Oct. 19 in La Grange of their niece, Margaret Ethel Eisfeller, to Henry Newhouse II.

A LIQUID LAXATIVE BEST FOR CHILDREN

(For three reasons explained below)

Did you know a laxative that works just right for you, can work havoc with a child?

That the laxative habit can be contracted at the age of six?

Parents Aroused At Last!

Doctors urge the use of a liquid laxative for children; preferably one with senna. A liquid laxative can be regulated as to dose. The natural laxative action of senna does not weaken the bowels.

Druggists report increasing sales of liquid laxatives. Mothers are rapidly discovering the advantage of the liquid form. Thousands of cases of ill-health—and half-health—in children are being cleared-up by stopping all use of laxatives of adult strength.

Give Them a Chance!

The preparation most favored for child use is California Syrup of Figs. It is a fruity syrup with the right amount of senna for gentle stimulation of a child's bowels. It gives the right kind of help.

If the bowels aren't moving regularly and thoroughly, don't give any medicine that drains the system dry. Give a liquid senna preparation like California Syrup of Figs. A little every day, and reduce the dose each day. At the end of one week—stop. You'll be surprised how long it will be before the bowels need any further help. It may be months.

Be sure you get the real California Syrup of Figs, with "California" on the label. If you get the right preparation, and use it the right way, you can absolutely end all worry over constant sluggish spells, bilious attacks, constipation.

All druggists keep California Syrup of Figs, ready for use. It is highly recommended for regulating children, and to undo the mischief done by habit-forming laxatives.

Carole Adopts Tres Striking New Hairdress

Combs Locks Straight Back Off of Forehead.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

HOLLYWOOD.— [Special.] — Carole Lombard had just finished designing a new coiffure for her light platinum hair as I happened into her studio dressing room. With her shell ears fully exposed and her fine profile, the coiffe was a great success.

It is simple to copy, too, if your brow will stand hair combed back straight and your ears bear exposure well. Enough hair from each side of the head immediately above the ear tips was wrested to make a fine, flat braid less than an inch wide. These small braids met at the center back of the head, in an inverted half moon shape, the ends disposed of in a three-inch depth of fluffy curls below the braided half moon.

Miss Lombard, prepared for fashion picture-taking, was dressed in a glamorous silver beaded frock with three-quarter length coat of same material. Both dress and coat were on simple tailored lines, a taste Miss Lombard confesses to in evening things as well as daytime ones. However, one dress of what she calls a "dirty" gold color, worn with a floor length evening coat of dull brick red was far from tailored, and a dressy black and white afternoon frock would indicate a deviation from the rule, as any woman in a shopping mood might select.

There's no trouble, apparently, to keep that tall, slight figure of Miss Lombard's in control. Her's is the opposite trouble, exaggerated by anemia, calling for much milk consumption and milk foods.

She has ideas about blondes and make-up, passionate in her distate for the rouge-cheeked blonde and the light powder she so often uses. Darker powder than is usually chosen, but not too dark, no rouge on cheeks, a light touch of blue eye shadow for evening, none for daytime, and lipstick would be her recommendation to blondes. The platinum blond, for contrast, needs a fairly dark powder. Blondes, she thinks, should try to be as inconspicuous as possible in clothes and make-up, their hair offering the brilliance.

Considered one of the best dressed women of the screen, Miss Lombard thinks color-blindness or lack of color sense responsible for much bad dressing; also the clothes consciousness that makes women look "all dressed up." You're not well dressed unless you can forget your clothes, she argues. Evening coats in vagabond cut, she adores, and tailored lines if the material is richly feminine, as velvet, brocade and the like.

"Pick things of a certain shade," she advises the budget clothes shopper," so that accessories go with several outfits. Don't choose a hat, a coat, a dress, shoes, anything, without having in mind what each and every item is to be worn with."

In furnishing a home, which Miss Lombard is doing at the moment, she argues for establishing your own personality instead of the passionate pursuit of an all white modern or provencial period, Colonial, Early American and so on. Her home is being done for her, not for guests! Her bedroom is done in "dirty" pink and plum, with just enough white to strike a balance.

NORTHWESTERN TICKET SALE SETS RECORD

DON'T BE QUICK TO RAP COACH OF NOTRE DAME

Maybe the Players Are to Blame.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

New York, Nov. 7.—As one who has often depicted the football coach as an indolent and generally unimportant fellow who ought to turn square and go to work instead of exploiting the enthusiasm and suffering of the young for his own profit, I do not see how I can consistently join the crusade to get Hunk Anderson's job. Mr. Anderson is the tall, bony unfortunate whose ill luck it was to succeed Rockne's post at Notre Dame.

HUNK ANDERSON.

His football team thus far this season has lost three games, tied one, and won just one. He is personally an honest, sincere man who knows football as well as Rockne ever did but cannot crack jokes or give imitations at banquets.

Distrusts a Glib Tongue.

Some persons having a fine ear for the English language are likely to exaggerate the importance of the double negative and to put a man down for a great ignoramus and his school for a cow college if he chances to remark over some national hookup that he ain't got no reserves nor nothin'. To do this is to imply, however, that a man is educated, and therefore superior, who may be merely well spoken and to forget all about whole classes of glib and charming young no goods whose instincts, being those of the con man, led them unerringly into bonds and finance as soon as they got out of school.

I have known Mr. Anderson and many of the others and if I were asked my choice in the matter I would take Mr. Anderson and give you them.

Blames the Players.

It has always been my contention that the football players and not their coach should receive all credit for games won and that the coach who goes around taking his bows, selling testimonials, authoring fake newspaper pieces and lending his name to phoney all-America rackets looted from the tomb of Caspar Whitney, who invented the all-America, is guilty of a form of larceny. He is peddling off a glory which rightfully belongs to the players themselves and to their school. But inasmuch as I would award the players full credit for all they do, I would also charge them fully with their own failures.

In the case of the present Notre Dame team, I would blame the athletes and not Hunk Anderson. This is assuming that he and his assistant coaches gave them correct lessons in blocking, tackling and all such A, B, C's of football, explained their plays to them and rehearsed them in the things which they are supposed to do. This is not too much to assume.

Maybe Players Are Dumb.

So now, therefore, that the players, as big as they are and as numerous and as carefully instructed, find themselves unable to score any touchdowns, I would put it all up to them, not to the coach. It may be true, for all any one knows to the contrary, that the same players under some other coach would have won the games which they didn't win this season. But it could be just as true that the same coach with players less dumb would have won those football games. The dumb athletic type of young man is a familiar one and it is just possible that Mr. Anderson, whose luck is not the best, happened to get a lot of dumb ones.

Nor should the football players resent too deeply the suggestion that they are dumb unless they are prepared to say also that in a successful season they would equally resent being described as various kinds of flashes, ghosts, tornadoes, and meteors.

If they had had a great season up to now they would be dreaming nice ideas in their spare time of big coaching jobs awaiting them upon their graduation from school.

He's a Likable Fellow.

I find that it is a bad policy to meet the people that I may be called upon to write pieces about, for there is always a danger that I will like them. As to Mr. Anderson, I made this error several years ago when he was traveling with Red Grange's first professional troupe. He is easy liking, the more so, perhaps, because he has played much of his life on a greasy field where his cleats wouldn't hold; he has been thrown for many a loss in heavy going. A year or so ago when he was newly come to Rockne's old job and seemed to be bound for his goal on the loose he came down with no such pleasant little thing as peritonitis alone, but with peritonitis and spinal meningitis.

I take in a lot of territory in my criticism, but I decided some time ago that there were some matters which I just wouldn't have time to attend to. One of them is the hiring and firing of football coaches. I have been leaving that to the colleges themselves for several years. I hope the good fathers out at Notre Dame don't make a mess of this case, but that is a chance they will have to take.

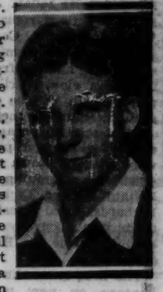
ILLINOIS GAME BRINGS BIGGEST RUSH SINCE '29

Expect 40,000 Crowd Saturday.

The biggest rush for football tickets since 1929 was experienced at Northwestern university yesterday. Lines formed to obtain tickets for the homecoming game with Illinois at Dyche stadium Saturday.



JACK BEYNON.

Max Hayford, ticket manager, announced the sale for the first two days of the week indicates that forty thousand will see the game. This will be the largest crowd to see a Northwestern home game in the last two years. The stadium has a seating capacity of forty-seven thousand.

C. E. Bowen, University of Illinois ticket manager, informed Purple authorities yesterday that only 500 out of the Illini's allotment of 3,000 tickets were available, and that he will probably have to have more before tomorrow.

N. U. Has Edge.

The improved showing of both teams last Saturday is responsible. Illinois fans see a chance to break the four game winning streak of the Wildcats. The last Illini victory over Northwestern was accomplished in 1928, when Illinois won the Big Ten championship. Since that game Northwestern has won four in a row.

Illinois' hopes for a victory rest largely on a small but fast charging line and an excellent forward passing attack led by Quarter Back Jack Beynon, one of the outstanding passers in the Big Ten. Against Army he completed twelve out of seventeen passes and his work against Michigan kept the Wolverines in trouble all afternoon.

Both Illinois and Northwestern seem to disprove the theory that a line must possess great bulk. Their lines are the lightest in the conference. Northwestern's ends, Manske and Jens, rank as one of the best pair of flankmen in the Big Ten. They average 173 pounds. Frink and Schustek, the Illini ends who carried the fight to Petoskey and Ward of Michigan, weigh 178 and 183, respectively.

Back Field Set.

Coach Dick Hanley will probably start the same back field that played a large portion of the Minnesota game. This quartet is composed of Sullivan and Cruice, half backs; Duval, full back, and Olson, quarter back.

Drills on open field blocking and forward pass defense comprised the major portion of Northwestern's practice yesterday. Failure to block effectively on several occasions in the Minnesota game, proved costly for the Wildcats. Coach Hanley also put the backs through a long drill on handling the ball, another fundamental which has been a drawback in the last two games.

Hanley has about given up hope of finding dependable punt handlers. Most of the backs have been given a chance under fire and none have been successful. All the backs including Sullivan, Leeper, Augustson, Maroney and Lind, will continue to work on kicks this week.

ILLINI REST UP.

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Convinced that the Northwestern game will be as close and as hard fought as that with Michigan, Coach Bob Zuppke of Illinois today contented himself with giving the regulars a light workout.

Zuppke feared the Illini might be tired from the Michigan game and is determined to give them every chance to attack the Wildcats with the same fire and dash they exhibited last Saturday.

A cold wind swept across the practice field and the squad first practiced signals under the stadium, but later emerged into the open, where the freshmen impersonated the Wildcats in dummy scrimmages.

The first team lineup was identical with that which started against Michigan, confirming the belief that Zuppke was satisfied with the success of his venture in using three sophomore line men, Antilla, Gryboski, and Galbreath. Dave Cook and John Snoek will continue to alternate at full back, but Cook appeared with the first outfit.

Zuppke spent time with his second string backs, including Crain Portman, whose gain against Michigan during his brief appearance was an important factor in gaining the Illinois touchdown. Portman and Stelp, both ponies, and possibly Craven, will relieve the first backs.

The squad will scrimmage tomorrow and go to Chicago Friday afternoon. It will not practice at Dyche stadium, however.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

FIGHTING ILLINI.

ILLINOIS' Fighting Illini, who came the nearest to defeating the champion Wolverines since Ohio State registered a surprise victory in 1931, earned their name back in 1921. While defeat of Michigan last Saturday would have been the greatest upset of the conference season to date, Illinois registered an even greater one in the final game of the 1921 season. It was scored against Ohio State, 7 to 0, a forward pass to Walquist featuring.

Illinois, in public opinion, was little more than a forlorn hope on that occasion. It had lost in succession to Iowa, 14-2; Wisconsin, 20-0; Michigan, 3-0; Chicago, 14-6. Ohio State, on the contrary, had a clean slate over Minnesota, 27-0; Michigan, 14-0; Chicago, 7-0, and Purdue, 28-0. Were ever comparative scores and dope more favorable to a forecaster?

The Wake, however, happened to attend the Chicago-Illinois game at Champaign the week before and saw the Illini outplay the Maroons in the first half only to yield before Chicago's crushing fall backs in the latter part of the game. On our return we expressed to Frank Smith, then sports editor, whose funeral rites were held in Aurora Monday, our opinion that Illinois had a good outside fighting chance. "Well, if you think so, you better go to Columbus, then, for no one else thinks so," he replied in good natured amusement.

That was not exactly what we wanted, for we had expected to "cover" the Chicago-Wisconsin game, which Chicago afterward won, 3-0, as Wisconsin was unbeaten at the time. But to Columbus we went. THE TRIBUNE was the only Chicago newspaper represented by a staff correspondent.

Our memory is a bit hazy, but we think the Daily Illini, student publication, was trying at the time to fasten "Fighting" Illini as a nickname on Zuppke's pupils. Possibly the phrase was original with us, but we doubt it. Anyway, THE TRIBUNE story from Columbus began, "Fighting Illini beat Ohio State! Fighting Illini beat Ohio State!! Fighting Illini beat Ohio State!!!" Then the score of 7 to 0, etc. That phrase fitted the Illini and the situation. The Daily Illini was kind enough to say afterward that THE TRIBUNE definitely had attached the name to Illinois gridiron warriors for the years to come. And we'll never forget the reception we received in the Illini dressing room after the game as the only Chicago newspaper man who thought the contest worth attending.

Ohio State's defeat gave the conference title to Iowa, which had a record of five straight victories. Ohio State lost only that game. Illinois won only that game.

This contest was not the only one in which Illini marred championship hopes. Minnesota twice was a victim. In 1914 Illinois beat the Gophers, 21-6. Illinois won six straight that year. Minnesota lost only to Illinois. Illinois' victory over the great Minnesota eleven of 1916, however, was a real surprise. The score was 14 to 9. Illinois won 2, lost 2, and tied 1 that season. Minnesota lost only to Illinois, and the title went to Ohio State.

In 1924, however, Minnesota evened up the score by downing Illinois, with Red Grange in the lineup, 20 to 7. It was the only game the Gophers won that year. It was the only game Illinois lost, although tied by Chicago, 21-21. The result gave the title to Chicago, with three won and three tied, as told in yesterday's Wake.

⊷

In this game Grange was injured in an out of bounds play and Illini partisans charged that too many Gophers piled on Red when there was no need to do so in deliberate attempt to impair his effectiveness. Of course, there was Minnesota denial and explanation that because of his elusiveness it was necessary when tackling Grange to tackle so that he would "stay" tackled. We believe the respective athletic departments disavowed charges of the partisan rooters and exchanged amenities. Perhaps it is only coincidence, therefore, that Gophers and Illini have not met on the gridiron since.

In conclusion, let us congratulate the Fighting Illini of 1933 for carrying on the spirit of the Fighting Illini of 1921.

HAWKS LOOK FOR 14,000 TO SEE HOCKEY OPENER

Meet Americans Tomorrow at Stadium.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Sports crowds being looked upon as barometers on the general fluctuation of spending dough, you may be pleased to hear that the advance ticket sale for the opening of the Chicago National Hockey league season here tomorrow night indicates that a gathering twice as large as the one at the opener a year ago will attend.

The opener last year was played at the Coliseum, cradle of professional hockey, in Chicago. The fans proved reticent about spending their money and only 7,000 viewed the opener, which was with the Americans, the same team which will participate in the season opener at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night.

Drew 13,500 at Stadium.

Three games were played at the Coliseum, after which a controversy between the Hawk and Stadium managements was adjusted and the Hawks staged another opener, this one with the present world champions, the New York Rangers. This second "opener" drew the largest crowd of the entire season, 13,500.

With the weather anything short of a blizzard the Hawks expect to play to 14,000 against the Americans, the forecast being based on the usually reliable indicator, the advance sale. Thus, the Hawks expect to beat their last season record the very first night.

If the Hawks beat the Americans, as they did in the local opener last year, the seers say that next Sunday night's crowd at the game with the world champion Rangers will be the largest in three seasons, a capacity crowd being rated as a not exceedingly optimistic outlook.

It's "Surprisingly Excellent."

Last year the box section, other than the season reservations held by the most constant of the fans, frequently was something of a drug on the market. Yesterday, when the boys in the Blackhawk counting room were interrogated about the sale of the highest priced seats their eyes sparkled brightly as they replied that the demand has been "surprisingly excellent."

Manager Bullet Joe Simpson will have his Americans in Chicago tonight, for a good rest in preparation for the 1933-34 inaugural. During the last month the team has been training at Oshawa, Ont., and the squad, which has been cut somewhat from the recent total of 36 players, will be brought direct from the camp.

All three of the members of the Americans' new line have the front name of Lloyd—Lloyd Gross, Jackson, and Klein. All the Lloyds are newcomers from the eastern minors. Among the vets will be Goalie Roy Worters, Normie Himes, and Rabbit McVeigh.

PHILADELPHIA, PITTSBURGH VOTE SUNDAY SPORTS

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Philadelphia and Pittsburgh will be placed on the Sunday baseball schedules of the major leagues next year for the first time as the result of those cities' ratification today of a modification of the blue law of 1794.

Cities and counties throughout the state voted on the question of permitting outdoor Sunday sports between the hours of 2 and 6 p. m. A victory for Sunday sports by a margin of 5 to 1 was indicated by incomplete returns in this city. The Pittsburgh victory likewise was by a comfortable majority.

The issue was kept from the ballot in one county, Huntingdon, where supporters of a closed Sunday obtained a preliminary injunction. Argument on a petition to make the injunction permanent was postponed until after election day.

Jim Thorpe to Help Coach Haskell for Grinnell Game

Lawrence, Kas., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Jim Thorpe, noted Indian athlete, arrived here tonight to assist in preparing the Haskell Indians for their football game with Grinnell college here Saturday, Coach Gus Welch announced today. Between halves of the game Thorpe and John Levi, a Haskell coach, will give an exhibition in kicking.

LEADS IRISH AGAINST PURDUE

Michigan Attack Combines Punt, Power, and Deception

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Michigan's great record of victories has been compiled primarily by stopping the other fellow and winning with one touchdown, a field goal, or whatever points can be scored. Michigan never takes chances on attack when it is ahead. It depends on its defense first of all, but obviously a score of some kind must be made or all games would end in ties.

How, then, does Michigan score?

The punt is a weapon of attack, not defense. Michigan tries to outkick the other fellow. Michigan always plays a defensive back in position to stop long gains by quick kicks. Michigan follows the ball and expects to profit by the other fellows' fumbles. By this general system Michigan expects to get the ball within 30 to 40 yards of the opponents' goal. But from there the ball must go forward to the goal by plunging, running, or passing.

Pass on Any Down.

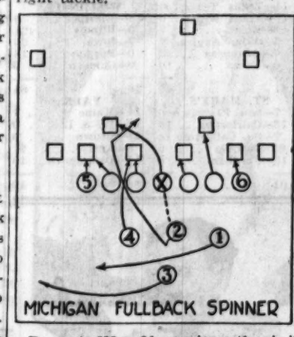
Michigan may pass on any down, frequently the first. You'll generally find that Michigan has a good passer. In Friedman and Newman it had great passers, and Bill Renner, this year, isn't far behind that pair. Its ends are chosen for pass catching ability as well as blocking and tackling.

Michigan's attack may be a surprise move. It is based on better than average performance, but Michigan for four years has had eleven men of better than average ability. This is the reason why other universities can't follow the Michigan system of play. Fundamentally, a coach must have material—Everhardus, Renner, Petoskey, Ward, Bernard, Regeczi, to name a few—or any attack he may devise will be stopped.

The main point in attack is to screen the kind of play as long as possible. A plunge may look like a run, by introduction of a spinner. And the faked spinner may result in a run. The run may develop into a lateral pass, or a forward pass. All of which keeps the defensive players guessing.

Here's How It's Done.

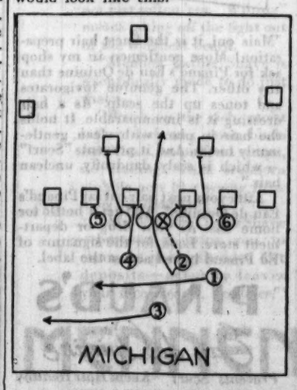
Let's look at a Michigan spinner. It may hit at any spot in the opposing line, between guard and tackle, guard and center and so on. In the following diagram Rebeczi plunges between the opposing right guard and right tackle.



Regeczi [No. 2] receives the ball from center. He fakes the ball to Everhardus [No. 1] and Renner [No. 3] precedes so that the two men are in position for a lateral. The blocking back [No. 4], Fay or Westover, hits the guard. Michigan generally plays for a short gain in that it two-times the opponents at the point of attack.

It Can Be Varied.

If this full back plunge by Regeczi from a half spinner is aimed over the center of a six man defensive line, it would look like this:



Everhardus and Renner [or Heston] have the same assignments. Regeczi hits between the defensive

PURDUE AFRAID OF BIG OUTBREAK BY NOTRE DAME

Fears Irish Are Due to Pile Up Points.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Efforts to develop a defense capable of stopping the Notre Dame attack occupied the attention of the Purdue football squad here this afternoon. After a study of the statistics, which reveal that Notre Dame has gained around 1,200 yards from scrimmage while scoring only two touchdowns, the Boilermakers fear that the law of averages, if nothing else, is bound to bring a flock of points into the Notre Dame column in Saturday's game at South Bend.

Purdue's followers are as convinced of the potential Irish strength as the Boilermaker coaching staff and squad, and the largest migration of students and townspeople to an out-of-town game in history is already assured. More than 6,000 tickets from the Purdue allotment for the game have been disposed of.

Players Limber Up.

Worried over the physical condition of the eleven following the battering it received at the hands of Carnegie Tech, Coach Noble Kizer ordered a lengthy limbering up drill this afternoon in an effort to loosen up the bumps and bruises.

None of the players who worked against Carnegie was called on for actual scrimmage, but the shock troops, who are expected to be needed against Notre Dame, were given a stiff dose of scrimmage on both offense and defense. Working in the shock troops back field was a hard hitting quartet of Jim Peelle, quarter back; George Basker and William Riblet, half backs, and Butch Keegan, full back.

Fred Hecker, regular full back, appeared in uniform, but spent his time trotting up and down the sidelines attempting to loosen up his leg muscles.

IRISH DRIVEN INDOORS.

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—The first heavy snowfall of the season drove the Notre Dame squad indoors today and a blocking drill in the gymnasium supplanted the proposed scrimmage. The rest was welcomed by the players, however, for most of them are nursing bumps and bruises received in the three consecutive defeats.

Tom Gorman, center, is making a rapid recovery from painful injuries received against Navy and there is some hope that he will be able to play against Purdue here Saturday. Ray Brancheau, Dominic Vairo, and Fred Solari, however, are almost definitely out of the game. Brancheau will be replaced at right half back by Johnny (Tex) Young, Houston sophomore, who made 88 yards from scrimmage in 22 trips with the ball last Saturday, in addition to throwing and receiving several passes.

On Saturday the Irish expect their largest home crowd since the Southern California game of 1931, when 53,000 persons paid $5 apiece to witness the end of the long Notre Dame victory streak.

BADGERS WORK ON OFFENSE.

With Kenny Kundert, halfback, definitely out of the game, and Red Peterson and Karl Schuelke, also halfbacks, nursing injuries which may keep them on the bench, Coach Spears tried new material in the backfield, among them Petie Nelson at quarterback, Lyn Jordan and Carl Sanger at the halfback berths, and Harry Pike at fullback. The quartet did better blocking than the Badgers have shown this season.

Spears indicated today the Badgers might forget defense in practice this week, believing Wisconsin may have its chance to regain offensive confidence against the mountaineers.

WILDCAT TRACK SQUAD ELECTS OLSON CAPTAIN

Ollie Olson, Northwestern quarter back, was elected captain of the 1934 track team yesterday it was announced by Coach Frank Hill. Olson is one of the leading high jumpers in the Big Ten. He won second place in this event and placed in the javelin in the outdoor conference meet last spring.

Talking it Over

KING LEVINSKY, like Gaul, is divided into three parts. . . . Pete Reilly holds 25 per cent, Sister Lena has 15, and Harold Steinman 10. . . . No match can be arranged unless two of the three agree. . . . Rena Nelson, woman's champion at Exmoor, is attending the University of Chicago. . . . One of her leading rivals for district honors, June Beebe, is a law student at De Paul. . . . Tom Andrews, now in his 70s, is still promoting fights in Milwaukee. . . .

Barney Ross recently donated $1,500 to a synagogue. . . . Trainers of Equipoise still are busy unwinding him preparatory to a winter of ease on the Whitney breeding farm in Kentucky. . . . It requires about eight weeks to condition a horse for his best racing efforts and nearly as long to taper him off [they call it unwinding] before it is safe to let him do a good job of loafing. . . .

He was too busy to report for football practice, but he will be out next spring. . . . He used to play in high school. . . . Harvey Olson, former center at Purdue, will operate a special train for Boilermakers alumni to Notre Dame game Saturday. . . . Hector Garvey, 260 pound guard who formerly played with the Bears, will join the Brooklyn Dodgers this week. . . . When the officials get around to talking about most valuable players they'll have to give Al Kawal of Northwestern some consideration. . . . He's a great guard. . . .

Warrant for Baer Is Canceled; Speed Fine Paid

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 7.—(AP)—After his manager had paid a $25 fine, a bench warrant issued today by justice of the peace Edward Farrell for the arrest of Max Baer, the pugilist, was canceled. Baer was arrested several weeks ago for driving 60 miles per hour in a 45 mile zone.

Canadian Tracks Show Decrease of $3,557,840

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Betting on racetracks in Canada decreased $3,557,840 in 1933 over last year's figure, a report by the department of agriculture shows. A total of $25,137,538 was wagered this year as against $28,695,438 in 1932. A decline of $173,255 was registered also in gate receipts, the figures being $638,926 for this year and $812,182 for 1932.

KIPKE TEACHES WOLVERINES NEW PLAYS FOR IOWA

And Tells Signal Callers to Use Them.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Coach Harry Kipke gave his Michigan regulars a couple of new plays this afternoon, and after he had finished explaining them and given the team a few opportunities to rehearse them he told the quarter backs to remember that they will be ready for use Saturday. The suggestion seemed to be quite in line, in view of the fact that the Wolverine signal callers did not call more than a half dozen plays against Illinois last week.

The first team also was used on the defense against Iowa's sweeps and its rushes off the tackles. The drill was only a dummy affair. Players taking the part of Joe Laws and Dick Crayne, the Hawkeye ball carriers, received plenty of attention.

IOWA TRIES NEW PLAYS.

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—The University of Iowa football team worked on new plays for use against Michigan Saturday in the midst of snow flurries today. With only three home practices remaining before the Wolverine game, Coach Ossie Solem sent three full teams through a long scrimmage against freshmen. A fourth freshman eleven drilled on Michigan plays which will be tried against the regulars later in the week.

Although the coach continued the quest for a good passer, indications were that the Iowa team will depend chiefly on a running attack Saturday. Dwight Hoover, Dick Crayne, and Joe Richards, tried passing but none of them was accurate enough to cause optimism over the Hawkeye overhead attack.

The first team showed up to an advantage on new power plays built around Crayne and Laws, however. Bill Secl replaced Zud Schammel at right guard on the first team the latter being kept out of practice because of a recurrence of a glandular infection.

BUCKEYES' DRILL SECRET.

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Ohio State's football players held another scrimmage today behind locked doors, with the freshman eleven, it was announced through the university's press agent.

While few changes appeared in the starting varsity lineup, with Heekin, Pincura, Kabealo, and Smith in the backfield, the second string men soon were inserted.

Beltz, who has been suffering from a knee injury serious enough to keep him from starting the Indiana game, received a short workout in the left half back position, while Gillman and Rees, two regular ends, were kept from actual scrimmage.

The team will leave for Philadelphia Thursday night, working out at Pennsylvania's field Friday afternoon. The squad will be quartered at the William Penn hotel. Max Padlow, resigned end, was working in his old position at left end during the afternoon.

GOPHERS IN SHAKEUP.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—There was an air of uncertainty and brewing fireworks when the University of Minnesota football squad reported to Coach Bernie Bierman today after another two day lay off. Bierman was in a hostile mood, and the Gophers were plainly on edge after their disappointing scoreless tie with Northwestern Saturday.

Bierman carried out his threat by supplanting Pug Lund with George Roscoe and Glen Seidel with Babe Levoir when the Gophers went to work on the two week preparation for Michigan. Bierman hinted that other changes were possible.

Bierman is concentrating on the Michigan game. There is no question of that. According to present plans, he will fly down to Michigan to scout the Wolverines personally against Iowa, returning in time to impart his knowledge to the Gophers next Monday.

Bob Tenner and John Ronning, both Gopher ends and casuals, were set to go to work today, although they will work only lightly for a few days. With snow on the grounds, the Gophers divided their time between the cleared area on Northrup field and the field house.

Normal Back Again Little 19 Leading Scorer

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Leslie Murray, State Normal's quarter back, today had regained the lead in the Little Nineteen conference individual scoring race, after being displaced for a week by Bobby Marack, Augustana half back.

Murray, by making two touchdowns and two points after touchdowns against Macomb Teachers, ran his total to 60 points in five conference games. His figures show nine touchdowns and six tries for points.

Marack accounted for Augustana's touchdown against Lake Forest and increased his total to 53. He has scored eight touchdowns and five points after touchdowns for second place.

Harding Climbs to Third.

S. Harding, St. Viator half back, leaped from twelfth place into third position when he scored five touchdowns against Charleston Teachers. The 30 points scored by Harding, plus two touchdowns counted against Elmhurst, gave him a total of 42. St. Viator's conference schedule closed with the Charleston game and Harding will have no chance to better his total.

Tony Kaska, Wesleyan full back, dropped into fourth place with 36 points. Against Bradley, Saturday, he accounted for all the Wesleyan points by crossing the goal line three times.

87 Break Into Scoring.

At the close of the sixth week of play, eighty-seven players from the twenty-one colleges, playing in thirty-eight conference games, have broken into the scoring column. Twenty-seven of these have scored more than six points. The high scorers:

Warning! First Get Permission to Shoot Quail

BY BOB BECKER.

When in doubt, better ask the landowner. This is the slogan which Chicagoland hunters should keep in mind as they make their final preparations for the big hunt Friday, the opening day of the pheasant, rabbit, and quail season. The value of this slogan is found in the fact that the state of Illinois has a stiff regulation to protect landowners against trespassing.

In addition there will be scores of deputies in the field Friday morning, patrolling posted acreage and ready to seize the "shoot and run" class of hunters. Behind this program of keeping hunters from posted land are not only the individual landowners, but farm organizations which, because of depredations inflicted upon members by irresponsible gunners, have decided that they have had all they want from pheasant and rabbit hunters who will not come to the house to ask for shooting privileges.

Du Page county always has been strict with sportsmen who do not ask permission to hunt on the farmer's land. For the last few years the shooters who have the habit of stopping their car anywhere and then hopping over a fence, irrespective of "no hunting signs," have fared badly in Du Page county, due to the fact that many deputy sheriffs have been in the field.

Inasmuch as the minimum fine for trespassing is $15 and the maximum $100, hunting becomes expensive if one is caught roaming around with a gun on posted land. Hunters who do not have written permission to shoot on a piece of land may find it cheaper to keep off that acreage rather than take a chance on getting picked up by a deputy and then facing a justice of the peace.

Hundreds of sportsmen, mindful of the teeth in this no trespass law, have scouted for shooting places in Chicagoland and arranged for hunting privlleges on small farms. Several days ago we drove through the country northwest of Chicago and found quite a few farms which have disposed of hunting rights for a small sum. In one case we found a farm taken by four hunters who had paid the land owner a sum so reasonable in comparison to what many of us spend each season for the sport of hunting that it indicated how the city sportsman can obtain fair shooting in an economical way with both the landowner and the hunter deriving benefit.

KOKEN SWITCHED TO HALF BACK IN CARDINAL LINEUP

Will Replace Hansen as Lillard's Alternate.

Mike Koken, former University of Notre Dame star, will alternate with Joe Lillard at left half back when the Chicago Cardinals meet Cincinnati in a National Professional Football league game at Wrigley field Sunday afternoon. Koken, who has been playing quarter back this season for the Chicago eleven, was named by Coach Paul Schissler to replace Cliff Hansen, who is definitely out for the season because of injuries.

Lillard Still Limps.

Koken may be called upon to play the left half back position throughout the game as Lillard, the only other left half back, still was limping in practice yesterday, having been slightly injured in the Cardinals-Green Bay Packers game last Sunday. However, Coach Schissler said he felt sure Lillard would be in the starting lineup.

Lillard is well remembered by Cincinnati players, for the colored star booted a field goal in the final minutes to give the Cardinals a 3 to 0 victory over the Reds in their first meeting at Cincinnati. Cincinnati, one of the three new members of the league, tied Pittsburgh in its last game.

Ball Carriers Drill.

Among the players on the Cincinnati squad are Burdick, giant tackle, who formerly played with the Chicago Bears; Corzine of Davis-Elkins, a 210 pound full back; Schmidt of California Aggies, an end, and La Fevre, former University of Southern California half back.

Both teams are expected to go through heavy practice sessions this afternoon. Coach Jolley of Cincinnati devoted most of yesterday's drill to the ball carriers and the linesmen were permitted to rest.

Shamrock Eleven Meets St. Louis Gunners Tonight

The Chicago Shamrocks professional football team will meet the St. Louis Gunners in a return game at the 124th field artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, tonight. The Shamrocks lost the first game, 7 to 6, at St. Louis several weeks ago. The game will start at 8:15 o'clock.

Both elevens are composed of former college players. Coach Dan Lamont of the Shamrocks will have Durkin and Weber, former Loyola stars; Furches, Temple, and Brosseau, available for back field work. Gwinn Henry, the Gunners' coach, has named Johnston full back, Frahm right half, Breidenstein left half, and Moses quarter back for his starting back field.

Enright	L. E.	Rogge
Ryan	L. T.	Broadston
Gottschalk	L. G.	McGirk
Waesco	C.	Kawal

TOMMY MILTON SUFFERING FROM OLD RACE INJURY

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Tommy Milton, prominent racing automobile driver, tonight was in a Detroit hospital suffering from the effects of an old race track injury. His condition was described as serious but not critical. Milton's leg was burned by hot oil in a racing accident some time ago, and the wound, physicians said, did not heal properly, leaving blood clots in his system. Milton now is employed by a motor car company.

TWO TIED FOR NATIONAL CUE TOURNEY LEAD

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 7.—(AP)—George Kelly of Philadelphia and Eddie Sauers, Oakland, Cal., went into a tie for first place in the national pocket billiard championship tournament here as a result of victories today as Charles Seaback, Astoria, N. Y., lost his first game and dropped into a second place tie.

Kelly won from Marcel Camp, Detroit, 125 to 68 in ten innings. Sauers defeated Harry Wood, Duluth, Minn., 125 to 112 in 27 innings. Each has won five of six games. Seaback's one defeat and four victories placed him even with William Mosconi, Philadelphia, for the runnerup position.

Mosconi scored his fourth victory in the final game tonight over Arthur Church, New York, 125 to 100, in 20 innings.

STATE NORMAL TITLE CHANCES FACE BIG TEST

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—The second oldest football rivalry in the Little Nineteen conference will be revived here Saturday when Illinois Wesleyan and State Normal engage in the forty-second game of their series. Only the Monmouth-Knox feud antedates the Titan-Normal football relations.

Since 1887, when Normal and Wesleyan first met on the gridiron, Wesleyan has won twenty-three; Normal, eleven, and there have been seven ties. However, the last Normal victory was recorded in 1908. Wesleyan boasts a string of twenty-five straight games without defeat from Normal, although some of these games ended in tie scores.

NAVY SUBS TO PLAY COLUMBIA AND PRINCETON

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 7.—(AP)—With an eye to Philadelphia, where Navy meets Army Nov. 25, Coach Rip Miller of the Navy today announced he plans to let his second and third string men bear the brunt of the Columbia and Princeton games on the next two Saturdays.

"We have had no breathers this year, and I am not going to let Columbia and Princeton beat the Navy down for Army," he said. "We can't afford to. Army is not in a position to be beaten down."

He may use the first varsity group part of the time, he indicated, but will save them every minute possible.

In making the announcement, Miller said he was aware Princeton was among the few unbeaten teams in the east and Columbia might be ranked among the better eastern elevens.

At the same time, he said, Army has had the advantage of occasional breathers, while Navy's schedule has been just one tough game after another.

Despite the plan to use the substitutes as much as possible, Miller said he was not looking for an easy game with Columbia, asserting Navy would "have to put out" to win.

"Mais oui, it is the finest hair preparation! More gentlemen in my shop ask for Pinaud's Eau de Quinine than any other. The genuine invigorates and tones up the scalp. As a hair dressing it is incomparable. It holds the hair in place with clean, gentlemanly lustre. And it prevents "Scurf" — which is scaly, dandruffy, unclean hair."

MAROON-HOOSIER GAME PROMISES DUEL OF PASSES

Neither Team Has Shown Ability on Ground.

Saturday's game at Stagg field between Chicago and Indiana should be a contest of forward passing, punting, and playing for the breaks. The Maroons have yet to score a touchdown in conference play, while the only one made by the Hoosiers resulted from a long run by Fitzhugn Lyons, Negro end, who caught a Minnesota fumble in mid-air and ran off with it.

Pass Sets Record.

Chicago's forwards apparently are inept in the art of opening holes, and Indiana's line is heavy and experienced. The Maroons were fairly successful in checking the running plays of both Michigan and Wisconsin, and the Wolverines had to resort to the air. Passes, the return of punts, and the possibility of an occasional breakaway for a long gallop therefore remain the offensive gestures if a repetition of last Saturday's scoreless games at Stagg field is to be avoided. Both teams have presentable passing games and fast running backs.

Last week's 57-yards-in-air pass from Zimmer to Sahlin, incidentally, is held to be the longest pass ever completed on Stagg field, exceeding by two yards the throw from Purvis to Moss in the Chicago-Purdue game last year.

Maroons Drill in Snow.

VETERANS ARE BENCHED.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Several veteran Indiana linemen who have been disappointing in the last two games were benched today as Coach E. C. Hayes sent reserves through a scrimmage. Several of the second stringers who played well against Ohio continued performing impressively.

Following the offensive drill, in which the erstwhile cripples, Veller, Walker, and Huffman, participated, Coach Hayes outlined a special defense designed to stop Chicago's back field, using Shaughnessy's new shift. The team used it against the freshmen.

Wherein One Mique Malloy Goes Lacrosse

Mr. Mike Malloy, who when he was a baseball scout, discovered Charley Grimm of the Cubs, and who later as a fistic impresario developed champions, went puffing through the loop last night, pushing his way into the jaws of the blizzard with a very serious look on his face.

Mr. Malloy still is slightly overweight and some of his chance acquaintances who watched him stride past Clark and Randolph corner were fearful the road work while such elements prevailed was not just the thing for him, and they came to the conclusion the drudgery of the road-work might have been the cause of the fretful expression in his eyes.

What's the Trouble, Mique?

"And if everything pans out all right there will be plenty of thick steaks for all of us soon," he continued.

"Ah-ha, the new head of the brain trust," remarked Jimmy Murray or Joe Sherman or some of the other skeptics who haunt the territory around Clark and Randolph streets.

"No, sir!" shot back the rotund Malloy. "Just the head of the new Chicago lacrosse team of the new International Lacrosse league and our games for the championship will not only thrill but will keep thousands of birds like you out of the cold before the next blizzard arrives."

Mr. Malloy Holds Out.

Mr. Malloy was trailed to a long distance telephone booth and was heard to invite the owners of teams representing Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Toronto, Buffalo, and Rochester to meet here with the head of the new Chicago lacrosse team on ext Sunday for the purpose of adopting a playing schedule.

"And that'll be all the information you guys around the Clark and Randolph corner will get until you start coming out to see the game," Mr. Malloy remarked as he buttoned up his big gray ulster patterned after the kind the prince of Wales and Clark Gable wear and once more made his way out into the blizzard.

Wolverines' Plays Tricky and Powerful

guards, with two men assigned to each guard and the Michigan tackles going through for the two defensive full backs.

Regeczi [No. 2] takes the ball from center. He passes it to Everhardus [No. 1]. Renner [No. 3] precedes Everhardus and is in position for a lateral. The Michigan linemen play to turn the defensive end out for an off side tackle run, or they check the end and expect to lateral the ball beyond him to Renner for a wide sweep. Both guards pull out, or on occasion the back guard may go through the line if he can reach defensive back more quickly.

All Appear Alike.

The point of the diagram is to show how the plunge, run and lateral all start from the same formation and until the play develops appear the same to the defenders.

Illinois used a six man line last Saturday with two full backs. It played to prevent off tackle plays, passes and laterals. But it was weakest on plunges by Regeczi which caused Michigan to use Regeczi as a ball carrier half the time. Against a seven man defensive line, Michigan would have used more runs and passes until it scored. Once in the lead, kicking and defense is Michigan's primary thought.

This isn't the only formation used by Michigan. The backs may line up in a single wing back formation, or double wing back on occasions when Michigan desires to get four receivers into the open immediately. The man farthest back gets the pass from center. There is less deception, but more power since all players are used in the blocking.

South Side Boys Fight Tonight in C. Y. O. Tourney

The third of four district preliminary bouts in the amateur boxing tournament of the Catholic Youth organization will be held tonight at St. Columbanus gymnasium, 71st street and Calumet avenue. Four hundred are entered in the south side trials. Eliminations will continue tomorrow and conclude on Friday when 16 boxers in class A and as many in class B will qualify and join the 64 already selected, 32 representatives each in the north and Joliet districts.

The west side qualifiers will be determined at Community Recreation center, Nov. 17. Then the 128 qualifiers will meet in the quarter-finals and semi-finals, Nov. 20 to 24, inclusive, after which championships will be decided at the Chicago Stadium Dec. 1.

Outstanding entrants in the south side trials are Packey Rodak, 112 pounds; Bob Crowley, 147; Sammy Guidara, 118; Eddie Messmer, 118; Phil Kenneally, 135; Tom Kenneally, heavyweight; Jackie Sullivan, 112; Sam Scullio, 126; Harold Lanson, 135; William Fitzgerald, 147, and Otto Fischal, 160.

Baxter Calmes, Duncan, Okla., will be outweighed approximately fifteen pounds by Tony Cancela, whom he meets in a ten round bout next Monday night at the Coliseum Annex. Calmes will weigh 175 and Cancela expects to be at 190. In his latest appearance Calmes stopped Jack Van Noy of Los Angeles, Cal., in the seventh round at Cicero Oct. 6. Van Noy, at 204, was 29 pounds heavier than Calmes.

The last time Cancela met a light heavyweight was at Miami, Fla., a year ago when Joe Knight held him to a draw. Tony fought a ten round draw with Buck Everett at Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 16 in his last start. Before that he held Dick Daniels to an eight round draw on the King Levinsky-Jack Sharkey card at White Sox park Sept. 18.

The Harry Dublinsky-Bep Van Klaveren bout scheduled at Pittsburgh, Pa., Friday yesterday was indefinitely postponed. . . . Al Fay and Baxter Calmes will meet at Florence Kas., Nov. 23. . . . MILLIKIN WILL PLAY RIPON ON DECATUR GRID

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Millikin, one of the six undefeated teams in the Little Nineteen conference, will go outside the conference for a game with Ripon college here Saturday. The occasion is the Millikin homecoming.

By comparative scores, Millikin has a slight edge over Ripon. Coach Leo Johnson continues to praise his two freshman ends, Giraldis and Davis, and is well pleased with the showing of his freshman back, Earl Weise of Wyanet.

American Boss Says He Will Win or Resign

New York, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Bullet Joe Simpson, starting his second season as manager of the New York Americans, has declared that if his team doesn't get into the National Hockey league playoffs this year he will quit. Home fans, however, are wondering what players will accomplish this about-face.

Simpson had plenty of players at his call in the training camp at Oshawa, Ont., but outside of a few veterans who haven't succeeded in lifting the team out of the ruck in the past, there didn't seem to be a real star in the lot. The greater part of his big squad was made up of recruits and already some them have been released.

In addition three of the mainstays of last year's team are gone, Vernon Ayres, John Sheppard and Nick Wasnie. The first two were sold to the Maroons and Boston respectively, and Wasnie was recalled by the Canadiens.

Worters Is Star.

The American rear guard, despite the loss of Ayres, again appears good. Little Boy Worters is one of the best of goalies. Red Dutton is rated as a defense star and Bill Brydge and Duke Dutkowski are reliable veterans. Chris Speyer, from the New Haven Eagles, has moved up to take Ayres' place.

Concerning his forwards Simpson said, "We have reserve strength to burn and for the present we are concentrating on that feature of our team."

The roster lists the veterans Normie Himes, Rabbit McVeigh, and George Patterson; Ronnie Martin, who has had one good year, and Red Jackson, the most promising of those who came up late last season, and Lloyd Klein. Heading the list of recruits are Lloyd Gross, star of the Buffalo International league champions last year, and Red Conn, who scored 31 points for the Philadelphia Arrows of the Canadian-American circuit.

Abandon Farm Idea.

Others are Hal Picketts from New Haven; the Calgary amateurs, Fred Hergerts, Dave Schreiner, and Lloyd Jackson, and Little Jackie Keating, Gordon Kuhn, and Ed Convey, all of whom have had previous experience with the Americans. Eddie Burke, who was expected to work as third line pivot, was injured in training and won't be available until after the season starts.

The probable arrangement of forwards to start will be Himes, Gross, and Martin on the first line; Conn, Klein, and Patterson as a speedy heavyweight trio, and a third combination of McVeigh, Red Jackson, and Picketts, who did some flashy work at Oshawa.

Maury Roberts, goal tender for New Haven last year, may be carried along as a spare goalie, since the Americans no longer are operating the Eagles as a farm club, and will have to dispose of their surplus material wherever a minor league club can be found that wants it.

TEN MILE SWIM BEGINS IN 75 FOOT TANK AT LOYOLA

Forty-two Loyola university swimmers yesterday began a ten mile swim marathon in the 75 foot Loyola indoor pool. Jim Dooley took the lead at the end of the first 150 laps. The first swimmer to cover 704 laps will be declared the winner. The swimmers may go as many laps as they wish each day between the hours of 2:30 and 5 o'clock.

The event, arranged by the Loyola intramural board, will end in 18 days. More than 39 laps a day until Nov. 24 must be covered in order to win the race.

Prep Title Race in North Section Still Wide Open

A furious scramble for the north section football championship in the Chicago Public High School league is in prospect Saturday afternoon. Four of the five teams in the division have a chance to gain the title and compete in the semi-final round for the league championship Nov. 18. The only squad which has been eliminated from the race is Roosevelt, which has suffered two defeats and was tied once in its first three league games.

Schurz now leads with two victories and one defeat and has one game to play, meeting Lake View at Logan Square park Saturday afternoon. In the other sectional game Saturday Lane Tech will meet Roosevelt on the same field at 10 a. m.

Senn rests in second place and has played all its games. It won two, lost one and was tied once. Victories by Lake View and Lane Tech will give them a tie for the title with Senn, while a defeat would eliminate Schurz. The standings in the section follow:

Schurz	2	1	Lake View	1	1
*Senn	2	1	*Roosevelt	0	2
*Lane Tech	1	1

*Played tie games.

Two of the four sectional champions have been determined. Morgan Park won the south division title for the second successive year last Saturday, while Lindblom gained the central section crown by defeating Bowen, 12 to 0, as Englewood played a scoreless tie with Hyde Park.

Morgan Park and Lindblom will meet in their semi-final round contest at White City Nov 18. In the other semi-final game the west champion will oppose the north section titleholder, the site to be named next week.

Harrison Tech, 1931 league champion, appears as the certain winner of the west section championship. It is undefeated in league competition, having won three consecutive games, piling up 56 points while its goal was crossed only once. The squad, coached by Bob Dougherty, is being rated as powerful as the eleven which won the league title two years ago. It will seek its fourth triumph and the sectional crown against McKinley, third place squad, at Mills stadium.

Saturday's games will mark the end of sectional competition. Eight games will be played. Lindblom, having clinched the central section championship, will conclude its schedule against Tilden Tech at White City. The Harrison Tech-McKinley game will be part of a double header. Crane and Marshall will meet in the other contest. The first will start at 12:30 o'clock.

MICHIGAN WILL NOT PLAY ROSE BOWL GAME: YOST

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Rumors that Michigan may play in the New Year's game in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Cal., were denied by Director Fielding H. Yost today. Yost pointed to the rejection by the Big Ten faculty representatives of the request that Michigan be allowed to play a year ago, and to the action by the same Big Ten group May 20, when the stand against all post-season contests was reaffirmed.

"I've had several letters from alumni," Yost said, "and have answered them all in the same way. The conference rule says 'no,' and we're members of the conference."

Football Coaches Asked for Views on Football Rule

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Indications that the football rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic association is willing to erase the "dead ball" fumble rule from its code came today when its New England representative, William J. Bingham, Harvard athletic director, sent the following questionnaire to coaches in this section:

"Would you favor a return to the old rule allowing the kicking team to advance a legally recovered kicked ball either behind or beyond the line of scrimmage?

"Would you allow the defensive team to advance a fumble recovered either in the air or after striking the ground?

"Would you allow a recovered lateral pass to be advanced regardless of whether it is recovered in the air or on the ground?"

HORSES PARADE TODAY IN 50TH NEW YORK SHOW

International Military Teams to Compete.

New York, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Recalling the day when the equine blueblood trod the highways, when motor cars and airplanes were novelties, the horse returns to his realm of metropolitan New York tomorrow with the opening of the fiftieth national show in Madison Square Garden.

From every section of the country and as far away as Sweden, 310 horses, representing 158 individual owners, will compete in 110 classes leading to the coveted championship rosettes. The show, running afternoon and night, will close Tuesday, Nov. 14.

The exhibition will feature the army teams from the United States, Canada, Irish Free State, Sweden and Czechoslovakia, as well as the finest hunters in the land, the royal gaited saddle and the hackney harness horses.

American Team Defends Title.

The United States army riders, led by Maj. John Tupper Cole, are favored to retain the team championship, which will be decided on the last night of the show. The army men will start tomorrow night with competition in jumping two abreast. The next evening they will ride three abreast and Friday night their competition calls for four riders in formation. These classes will be decided on a low score basis, the team making the fewest number of faults being declared the winner.

Saturday's international event will be the Bowman challenge cup, open to all nations. On Sunday the Irish team's great jumper, Shannon power, with Capt. Daniel J. Corry in the saddle, will defend the military sweepstakes title he won last year. The officers will compete for the individual military trophy Monday and then come together on the last night for the grand finale, the international team championship.

Mrs. Whitney's Grays Entered.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, owner of a large racing stable, is the favorite to carry off the honors in the hunt classes with her famous grays, Two Leggings, Bon Diable, and Grey Knight.

Mrs. Alma Spreckels Rosekrans of Woodside, Cal., has entered her Chicago champion, Beryline, which will meet such good horses as Mrs. A. C. Thompson's Rollo Reed of Chicago, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim's Firenze Fairfax of New York, and D. Stephen Budd's Sir Gilbert, the 17-year-old Hackney stallion which formerly was used as a plow horse on a Connecticut farm.

The saddle and harness classes will bring out practically all of the country's leading horses with the exception of Seaton Pippin, which has been retired after winning more than 600 blue ribbons.

ILCHESTER WINS AT PIMLICO ON A MUDDY TRACK

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 7.—[Special.]—Displaying a marked partiality to the heavy going, Mrs. Elmer Trueman's good mudder, Ilchester, led practically all the way to win the fourth race, featured attraction at Pimlico today. Ilchester defeated the favorite, the B. B. Stable's Waterway, by three lengths.

Immediately after Ilchester had assumed the lead, the race became a pursuit, with none of the trailers able to make up any ground. The leader increased his half length margin at the halfway mark to two lengths entering the stretch and added another length to his advantage in the run to the wire.

Robby Robertson, in Ilchester's saddle, rated his mount perfectly for the entire mile and seventy yards. He had the 3 year old gelded son of Dunlin and Effort away winging after only a half minute at the post and maintained a smart pace throughout.

On the strength of victories he had scored in his two previous starts Waterway was installed a 12-5 favorite by the mutuel players. He waged a keen battle with Salisbury for the place, which he finally gained by a half length.

Coach Unaware of Ineligible Man on Football Team

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 7. — (AP) —If the University of Mexico played an ineligible man against Louisiana college's football team last Saturday, Allan Converse Jr., former Yale star and now the university's coach, says he knew nothing about it.

The player in question, William Bell, formerly played with a Los Angeles high school team and apparently was not enrolled in the university, Converse said he understood Bell had been a student there since January.

"I was told Bell was in the university and that he had not played before because the other members of the team objected," Converse said. "However, I do not know if this is true."

Bell had opposed the university eleven twice in games this fall as a member of a local club team. Before Saturday's game it was announced he would be one of the officials.

Byrne won the six furlongs of the International speed test, feature event of the United Hunts Racing association's meeting at Belmont Park. J. Simon Healy's Flying Heels was a neck back in second place, leading Mrs. James M. Austin's Good Advice by the same distance.

FARM STRIKERS CUT DOWN MEAT SUPPLY IN CITIES

Low Receipts Cause Rise in Prices.

Farm unrest in the corn belt and the attitude of strike sympathizers in sections of the country where there have been no actual demonstrations have curtailed the movement of practically all classes of meat animals to principal processing points and open markets the last two days.

Aggregate receipts of cattle, hogs, and sheep at 20 of the 65 public stockyards in the country were cut 34 per cent Monday and yesterday. The total at these markets for the two days at 397,000 head, compared with 603,000 a week ago, a drop of 206,000, and representing a decrease of approximately 10,800,000 pounds of beef, 18,000,000 pounds of pork and 4,500,000 pounds of lamb.

Reports from the railroads indicate a lighter movement for today. Most of the decrease in numbers is found in hogs. Upwards to 75 to 90 per cent of the receipts of hogs at some of the markets arrive by trucks.

Pickets Shut Off Supplies.

Pickets along the highways have practically shut off the supply at some points, reducing the aggregate hog receipts 40 per cent in two days. The run at Sioux City yesterday was cut to 600 hogs. Ordinarily this market handles 5,000 to 6,000 on a Tuesday.

Barring a year ago this week, when the presidential election curtailed the movement of receipts for a few days, this week's run is about the smallest on record for the time of year.

Sellers of hogs yesterday took advantage of the light receipts, colder weather and better call for fresh pork, to push prices up 10 to 20 cents. The meager supply cleared quickly at the upturn, with the close at the highest point of the session and the highest in eleven days. Yesterday's practical top at $4.55 showed 15 cents advance over the high mark of Monday, although several short loads were sold at $4.60 late.

Average Is Up 15 Cents.

The general average at $4.35 was 15 cents higher, indicating a rise of 30 cents in two days. Lightweights led the upturn, soaring 25 to 50 cents at some of the outside points where the shortage was more acute than at Chicago, which was least affected by the farm trouble. Members of the trade see in the lightweight activity, the influence of the announcement of the government that $50,000,000 will be spent for pork products, chiefly those processed from the lightest weights and pigs.

Cattle markets displayed the best action in several weeks on yesterday's session, when supplies dropped below expectations. There was a fairly early clearance at strong to 15 cents higher prices, although a few consignments of medium and heavy stock in the pens later did not indicate the full strength.

Beef Supplies Sufficient.

Despite the decrease in supplies of meat animals, packers report a sufficient supply of beef on hand from the recent record slaughtering of prime steers, but a shortage of fresh pork and lamb. Hang rails are burdened with big carcasses of beef that have been slow moving for several weeks.

Fancy yearling steers and heifers, averaging from 700 to 1,064 pounds, topped the market yesterday at $6.00. The majority of steers cashed within a range of $4.75 to $5.75, with common classes down to $3 and odd lots of inferior classes down to $2 and slightly less.

Lamb prices jumped 25 to 40 cents in value yesterday, reaching the highest point since Oct. 11 and equaling the highest since the middle of September. Packers bought several carloads of fed western lambs at $7.75, paying up to $7.85 for prime 93 pound fed stock. Shorn lambs were bought at $6.50.

CHICAGO STOCK TRADING DULL; PRICES WEAKEN

With operations in New York suspended because of the election, trading on the Chicago exchange was extremely dull yesterday. Only 6,000 shares crossed the tape. Prices sold off from a fraction to two points.

Sears Roebuck lost 1¾ points and Quaker Oats declined 2. Slight gains were recorded in some issues, including the Swift packing shares.

Wheat Drops, Then Rallies; Trading Light

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

With leading eastern exchanges closed yesterday, trading in grains came almost to a standstill. Operators, generally, showed little disposition to take a decided stand on either side of the market pending further developments in the general domestic situation.

Persistent scattered selling by small holders of wheat and corn had a depressing effect early, with wheat breaking around one cent, and corn as much as 1¾ cents from Monday's close. Toward the close somewhat better buying developed and all grains rallied.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ cent higher, the latter on December, which finished at 86⅜ to 86¼ cents. May was 88⅝ to 88½ cents. Corn was ¼ to ⅝ cent lower at the last, with December at 45¾ to 45⅞ cents. Oats were ¼ cent lower at 33½ cents for December.

Repeal Vote Helps Rye.

Probable favorable action on prohibition repeal in the day's elections brought in some buying of rye, which gained 1 to 1½ cents, with December quoted at 56⅝ to 56¾ cents at the last. Barley was ½ cent lower to ½ cent higher, December being 46⅞ cents.

With both local and outside interest in the grain markets light, traders spent a large part of the day discussing the general situation. There are so many possibilities in developments at Washington that most operators are loath to express positive opinions on the markets.

In some quarters the belief prevails that if the government corn loan plan of 50 cents a bushel to the farmer goes into effect it will result in a marked reduction in the movement, as current prices for the cash grain at terminals are well below this figure.

As far as the trade can determine, the advance in the price of domestic gold by the RFC, which started Oct. 25, has had practically no effect on commodities.

Gold Buying Without Effect.

When the gold buying started December wheat in Chicago opened at 86 cents. It was only a small fraction above that level at the close yesterday despite the advance of around $1.50 an ounce in gold. The same applies to corn.

There was evidence of government support in the Winnipeg wheat market early yesterday, but it was withdrawn later. That market sagged slightly and closed ¼ to ⅜ cent lower. The Canadian dollar was again quoted around par. Liverpool wheat was under pressure and closed equal to ⅝ to 1⅛ cents lower despite relative strength in sterling.

Reports from Washington the government loan plan might be placed in effect on wheat tended to attract attention to the unusually small arrival of this grain at leading terminal markets. Receipts yesterday were given as only 250,000 bushels, the smallest since the new crop started to move late in June. It was felt if farmers were loaned better than current market prices the arrivals would drop still further.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes today set up a special transportation loan division in his easy money organization in an effort to speed up grants to railroads and through the railroads to heavy industries.

Selection of Frank C. Wright of New York, vice president of the Bangor and Aroostock railroad, to head the new division is merely one of the steps Ickes is taking to get money out to steel mills and other basic industries, it was learned.

In announcing Wright's appointment today, Ickes repeated his invitation to the carriers to apply for easy money loans. Advances will be made, it was indicated, to finance purchases of rolling stock, rails, or other equipment.

Ickes announced that he "wishes to expedite this work so that railroads which are among the country's greatest employers, will be able to finance such purchases, and in this way recall a great number of men to jobs in the fabrication of steel rails and other equipment and to aid the heavy industries in furthering reëmployment in the large centers of unemployment."

OCTOBER SALES OF MONTGOMERY WARD SHOW GAIN

Sales of Montgomery Ward & Co. in October increased sharply over the 1932 volume, the company reported last night. Last month sales totaled $23,016,704, compared with $19,805,497 in the same month a year ago. This was a gain of $3,211,207, or 16.21 per cent.

For the first nine months of the period commencing Feb. 1, 1933, sales totaled $137,056,245, compared with $130,434,484 in the like period of last year. This was a gain of $6,621,761, or 5.08 per cent.

Sales of the company have been increasing notably during recent months due, in part, to higher farm prices.

New York Markets, Banks Closed by City Election

The New York markets and banks, which were closed yesterday as a result of the elections, will resume business this morning. Local exchanges in various cities which were closed for the day will resume activity today. A number of Chicago branches of New York houses took a holiday yesterday as the home offices were closed. The Chicago Board of Trade, stock exchanges and other markets were open yesterday as usual.

La Salle Street Puzzles Over Federal Plans

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Life in La Salle street daily grows more listless. Gone are the roaring markets of other days. The 1929 market crash recedes, only now and again to be referred to in reminiscent fashion. La Salle street is feeling the New Deal with a vengeance.

The oracles of other years are silent. Now everybody watches the Washington news tickers for the latest developments. When they read the reports the traders, who formerly were a cocksure lot, go back to argue over their meaning. These discussions usually end with some participant throwing up his hands and saying: "Oh, what the hell."

Gold Plans Puzzle Them.

"I don't know what all this gold business means" is the remark frequently heard on the floor of the stock exchange and in the pits of the board of trade. Not infrequently it comes from a trader who in days gone by was ready at a moment's notice to interpret the market significance of any event from an earthquake to a declaration of war.

No one has yet detected any slender blades of grass sprouting up through the cracks in the pavement to fulfill the dire prophecy of Mr. Hoover, but such an event wouldn't surprise many of those who are bearish on the administration's recovery policies.

In the grain pits of the Board of Trade the "big shot" traders, to whom tradition ascribes a legendary courage in chance taking, are idle. Windstorms in Kansas and bad weather in the Argentine are matters on which they are willing to act, but when it comes to figuring out what the government is going to do next to help the farmer they give up.

There Are the Questionnaires.

Then there are the questionnaires. Only the big fellows who have been talked of in the newspapers get subpoenas from a senate committee but every broker has to supply data on his customers' operations for a committee which is going to make the world safe for investors.

One should not get the idea, however, that the traders sit around all day moping about the state of the Union. They read the comics, work crossword puzzles and play practical jokes on one another.

On the floor of the stock exchange, which is even quieter than the Board of Trade, the most important question agitating a trader's mind may be the groping for a four letter word meaning almost anything.

Youngsters Seek Other Lines.

Many youngsters who hankered to get into the securities business a few years ago have sought other means of livelihood. Some have quit the brokerage business to take up the family trade again, others have just quit. Bond salesmen have gone into insurance selling in droves.

Meanwhile those traders who have been in the game too long to quit try to figure out ways to scalp 40 cents with which to pay the luncheon check.

Chicago Firm Low Bidder on San Francisco Building

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—The Great Lakes Construction company, Chicago, submitted a low bid to the treasury today for the construction of a federal office building at San Francisco with an offer of $2,647,800. This bid was for a complete five story building with basement and attic. The Great Lakes company also submitted the low bid—$2,566,800—for a building omitting a portion of the fifth story and addition. The second low bidder was Jacobson Bros. company of Chicago at $2,793,000 for the building complete and $2,700,000 with the omitted portion.

DOLLAR SLIPS LOWER DESPITE UNCHANGED U. S. PRICE FOR GOLD

The dollar lost ground again yesterday against the principal foreign gold currencies as well as the British pound and the nongold moneys. Trading in this country centered in Chicago because of the election holiday in New York.

Final quotations reported by Chicago banks gave the franc a value of 6.13 cents as compared with Monday's last price of 6.07. The franc price indicated a gold value for the dollar of 63.91 cents, as compared with 64.54 on Monday.

The dollar weakness persisted despite the failure of the RFC to change its bid price for gold, which stood at $32.84 an ounce. Measured by the gold price the dollar was unchanged at 62.94 cents.

The British pound was quoted here at $4.9113 as compared with Monday's closing price of $4.895 in New York. In the London market, which closed before trading began here, the pound maintained a fairly steady tone, hovering around $4.90.

The Associated Press also reported from Paris that the dollar had shown strength in the trading there. This was ascribed by Paris financial writers to gold purchasers of American banks. The franc opened at 6.067 cents in American funds in the trading there and closed at 6.42 cents.

An advance in the money rate in the Paris market from 1¼ to 2½ per cent was interpreted as a sign of borrowing by American banks for the purchase of gold. It was this borrowing coupled with the unbalanced French budget which was keeping the dollar comparatively steady in the Paris market, brokers said.

WALGREEN SALES LAST MONTH 13.6% OVER LAST YEAR

The Walgreen company last night reported that its October sales were 13.6 per cent ahead of the comparable month of 1932. Last month's volume was $4,159,975, against $3,662,570 a ago. October was the fifth consecutive month showing gains over last year.

October's excess of 1932 was not as large as in September, when volume ran 16.9 per cent above the year ago figures. The October gain, however, virtually wiped out the cumulative deficiency for the 10 months' period. Sales for the 10 months' ended Oct. 31 were $38,251,061, or only $[illegible]56 below the $38,260,017 in the corresponding months of 1932, a loss of only a fraction of 1 per cent. Sales for the 9 months ended Sept. 30 were 1.5 per cent below 1932.

The company was operating 471 stores on Oct. 31, against 469 a year ago. Neither the figures on the number of stores or sales include the units operated within the grounds of A Century of Progress.

J. L. MARKS & CO. BANKRUPT CASE IS POSTPONED

A postponement of the bankruptcy hearing of J. L. Marks & Co., former instalment stock selling house, was granted yesterday by Federal Referee Edmund D. Adcock. The hearing will be resumed at 2 p. m. on Monday, Nov. 20.

The delay was granted because the audit of the company was not available in final form. It was indicated at the hearing that some sort of plan for the assumption of the concern's accounts by another company will be submitted.

U.S., Canadian Dollars Equal After 2 Years

After selling at a discount for more than two years in terms of American money the Canadian dollar has recovered and is again selling on a par with the United States dollar. The "recovery" has been due more to the weakness in United States money than to the strength in Canada's currency.

Yesterday the Canadian dollar was quoted by Chicago banks at 99.87 cents. In New York Monday it was quoted at just $1 and actually sold at a premium of one quarter of a cent in United States funds in Montreal. In other words an American dollar was worth only 99.75 cents in Montreal on Monday, instead of the $1.15 or $1.20 to which American tourists have become accustomed in the last two years. The discount of the Canadian dollar in United States money has amounted to as much as 25 cents since England left the gold standard in September, 1931.

Shows Money Trend.

The rise in the Canadian dollar brings home to the average American what is happening to his money in the world markets more graphically than do the fluctuations of the dollar in terms of the European currencies. To an American unaccustomed to handling foreign moneys the fluctuations of a currency which has the same theoretical value as his own is more comprehensible than the complicated interplay seen daily in the foreign exchange market.

The economic consequences of the Canadian dollar's decline in United States funds will react to the advantage of American exporters. It is likely to stimulate American exports to Canada and cut down on imports from Canada.

Exporter Has Been Hampered.

While the American dollar was selling at a premium in Canadian funds the United States exporter was at a distinct disadvantage. The Canadian buyer paid a premium on United States goods corresponding to the discount of his own money. At the same time the Canadian exporter was able to undersell his United States competitors.

It will also hit the United States tourist business in Canada. The American's dollar will no longer buy $1.15 worth of Canadian liquor, woolens or leather goods and consequently diminishes the incentive to visit Canada.

No Gold Buying in Canada.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 7.—The United States is not buying any gold in Canada, it was authoritatively learned today, and notwithstanding stock market rumors no contracts have been entered into by the American government for future purchases of Canadian gold.

Canada's gold mines this year yielded the nation $85,000,000, most of which goes to the United Kingdom.

DEPOSITORS OF 2 CLOSED BANKS TO GET 10 PCT.

Payments to depositors of two banks closed in June of 1932 were announced yesterday. Frank J. Cimrall, receiver for the Bowmanville National bank, 4806 North Western avenue, said that a dividend of 10 per cent payment is now available for all depositors. It is the first distribution since the bank closed June 20, last year.

State Auditor Barrett announced that a 10 per cent dividend, aggregating $27,000, has been authorized for payment to depositors of the Chatfield Trust and Savings bank. This is the second payment and brings the total distributed since the bank closed June 22 last year to 25 per cent.

RETURN TO GOLD ON 66⅔% BASIS, URGES EXPERT

Kemmerer Points to Fear of Inflation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 7.—Return to the gold standard and prompt stabilization of the dollar at about 66 2-3 cents based on its present gold content is the only safe way to meet the danger of a serious inflation, it was asserted by Edwin Walter Kemmerer, professor of international finance, in an address on "inflation and stabilization" at the student Forum of Princeton university. Prof. Kemmerer has supervised the overhauling of the currency systems of several nations.

E. W. KEMMERER. [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

Normally and strictly speaking, inflation is not a necessary part of the NRA program. In practice, inflation has become interwoven with this program and is part of it in the opinion of a large part of the Public," said Prof. Kemmerer. "As a matter of politics, I doubt very much if the NRA program in its present form can be carried through without a considerable amount of inflation, although I believe that the best elements in that program could be made effective without further inflation."

Says More Money Not Needed.

After pointing out that today's volume of business in this country was approximately 70 per cent of that in 1926 and that the average price level was approximately 75 per cent of that in 1926, Prof. Kemmerer suggested that this would lead to the assumption that we would need slightly more than 50 per cent as much money in circulation now as was in circulation in 1926 to conduct the present volume of business. Actually there is about 16 per cent more money in circulation now than in 1926.

As evidence of the relatively large supply of money and of circulating credit pressing on the market, he cited more than $850,050,000 of reserves carried at present by the country's banks—the largest by far in the country's history.

Dollar Depreciated 33 1-3%.

Discussing the effect of these factors upon prices, Prof. Kemmerer invited attention to the fact that although the value of gold, as expressed in its purchasing power in the free markets of gold standard countries, had remained practically unchanged since last February, the price of gold expressed in terms of the American paper dollar had risen more than 50 per cent since that time.

"Prices in the United States, however, have by no means advanced sufficiently to register this depreciation of 33 1-3 per cent in the dollar's gold value," he asserted. "As always in such cases, price advances occur with varying degrees of lag for different kinds of commodities and services, and it is only after considerable time that the slack is actually taken up."

Sees Confidence Disturbed.

"One of the reasons why this response of prices to the inflationary process has been so slow is the fact that the confidence of the business public has been held down by much extremely radical legislation in Washington, such as greenback, silver and gold debasement provisions of the farm relief act, many of the provisions of the securities act and the bank deposit guarantee provisions of the banking act. With measures of this kind on the statute books and with all sorts of other half-baked radical measures threatening, it is only natural that our business and financial leaders, upon whose initiative we must depend for recovery, are afraid to go ahead."

"In my judgment," he added, "the only safe way to meet this situation and to eliminate the danger of serious inflation is for the government at once to commit itself to an early return to the gold standard. Probably a rate of stabilization equal to about 66 2-3 cents of our present gold dollar would be the wisest policy under the circumstances."

U. S. Ignores Securities Act in Bond Selling

BY HOWARD WOOD.

With the administration at Washington insisting on rigid adherence to the "truth in securities" act on the part of the investment bankers, the latter are wondering why they alone should be subjected to the stringent provisions of this act which, they say, effectively bars new private financing or refinancing.

The new federal securities law appears to be based upon the assumption that the losses sustained by investors have been due to the fact that the corporations that sold bonds and the investment bankers who marketed them weren't forced to tell the whole truth and to stand jointly and severally liable for any losses sustained where the whole truth was not told and subsequently lived up to.

* *

Particularly noticeable is the fact that no attempt has been made to apply the new law to the most important class of securities in the United States—the securities sold by the federal government and its subsidiaries.

Back in 1916, when President Wilson signed the bill creating the federal joint stock land banks, he said:

"I look forward to the benefits of this bill, not with extravagant expectations, but with confident expectations that it will be of very wide-reaching benefit, and incidentally it will be of advantage to the investing community, for I can imagine no more satisfactory and solid investments than this system will afford those who have money to use."

At the direction of the secretary of the treasury the bonds were offered specifically as "instrumentalities of the government of the United States, and as such they and the income derived therefrom shall be exempt from federal, state, municipal, and local taxation."

* *

Several of the banks have since gone into receivership with losses to investors running into the millions. The remaining banks are being liquidated and their bonds are selling at about 50 cents on the dollar.

In March of this year, when the United States went off the gold standard, the federal government had outstanding more than twenty thousand millions of bonds which it had promised to redeem in gold on demand.

Then the holding of gold in excess of $100 per person was made a criminal offense and even though the government was still obligated to pay its bonds in gold a holder could not demand gold without violating the law.

The treasury even went so far as to bring out a big bond issue after that with the promise to redeem in gold still engraved on the face of the bond. A few weeks later congress enacted a law repudiating the "gold clause" in all outstanding bonds and forcing holders to accept paper money.

* *

Investors in government bonds were not unduly perturbed by this repudiation at the time because they viewed it as a matter of public interest to conserve the nation's gold reserves.

Now, however, that the government has embarked upon a deliberate policy of cheapening the paper money that they must accept for their bonds by raising the price of gold, many of these investors are complaining that not only the wording but the intent of the contract is being abrogated.

Another practice common in private bond financing that has been criticized in Washington is the "pegging" of bonds of a new issue to facilitate the marketing of such bonds.

Investment bankers point out that the treasury in forcing the federal reserve banks to buy government bonds is following precisely the same tactics.

* *

The same type of market manipulation which has been objected to in private bond financing is said to be practiced by the treasury in manipulating government offerings. Several months ago, for example, when the treasury thought the interest rate on short term government paper ought to be lower the services of a private New York agency were reported to have been enlisted by the federal authorities to put in bids much higher than those submitted by the banks and other investors also bidding for the issue.

It is an open secret, furthermore, that figures showing the amount of oversubscription to government offerings have been padded to show a greater oversubscription than has actually been the case.

In view of these things together with the manner in which many municipalities have been permitted to lead investors into believing that their bonds were sounder than they actually were the investment banking profession can't understand why what's sauce for the goose shouldn't be sauce for the gander.

RECEIVER ASKED TO UNSCRAMBLE INSULL MERGER

Stockholder Sues Midland United.

Suit to void the merger, several years ago, of a score of independent utility companies into the Midland United company, a major Insull concern, was instituted yesterday in the United States District court. The action seeks a receiver for the Midland company so that the merger may be voided and the formerly independent companies returned to their original status.

The suit was filed in behalf of Henry Van Aalderen of Grand Rapids, Mich., owner of 530 shares of common stock in the American Public Utilities company, now one of the subsidiaries of Midland United. He named 22 corporations and individuals, including the three Insulls, as defendants in his request for an accounting, a receivership for Midland United, and the dissolution of the merger which brought the American company into the Insull group.

Alleges Fraud in Merger.

Van Aalderen alleged that the merger was engineered by fraudulent means by the Insull group in order to reduce competition. He declared that the American company and its subsidiaries, which were scattered through Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio, were doing a flourishing business and that because of a desire for absolute domination in the utility field, Samuel Insull Sr. and the officials of his company, followed "a preconceived plan and through fraud, deceit, and unfair methods" absorbed the American company.

First, Van Aalderen charged, the Insull officials bought all the "floating" supply of the American company's stock from brokers. They obtained more stock at "washout" or fictitious sales, the bill alleged, then "froze out" minority stockholders and eventually obtained control.

Charges Dividends Cut Off.

Once the merger was completed, Van Aalderen charged, no dividends were paid, although, he declared, the company was in a position to pay them. He claimed that he had lost $70 per share. Before the merger Van Aalderen valued his American Public Utilities stock at $35,000, he said. The earnings were concealed, he said, and stockholders were not allowed to see the Midland United's books. He sought an accounting of profits made in the bill.

In addition to the Insulls—Samuel Sr., Samuel Jr., and Martin—the following were named defendants in the suit: The Midland United company, American Public Utilities company, People's Gas, Light and Coke company, Commonwealth Edison company, Public Service company of Northern Illinois, Britton I. Budd, Edward A. Davis, Edward J. Doyle, Edward B. Graham, John H. Gulick, Frank E. Kruesi, B. P. Shearon, William W. Bodine, Philip H. Gadsden, B. E. Sunny, Lewis E. Myers, Edward P. Russell, Fred J. Rutledge, and George Corson Ellis.

2 JOINT STOCK LAND BANKS TO ADJUST BONDS

C. A. Mains, president of the Louisville Joint Stock Land bank, Louisville, Ky., and the Union Joint Stock Land bank, also of Louisville, is notifying bondholders of a bond adjustment plan. He states that the purpose of the plan is to preserve the capital assets and enable the banks to continue their orderly liquidation as "going concerns."

Under the plan the bondholders are invited to tender for sale to the banks at least half of their bonds at a price of 55 and accrued interest to date of sale. Madison & Co., Inc., through its Louisville office, has been authorized to receive tenders of the bonds.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today signed the 99th NRA code, an agreement covering the asphalt shingle and roofing industry.

To Holders of Bonds of

The Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank of Louisville, Ky.

The Union Joint Stock Land Bank of Louisville, Ky.

Inasmuch as the present maximum earning capacity of these Banks is not sufficient to pay interest on the outstanding bonds and current expenses, a Plan has been formulated for the purpose of preserving capital assets and enabling the Banks to continue their orderly liquidation as "going concerns". The Plan, which is submitted in the interests of bondholders, is as follows:

1. All bondholders are invited to tender for sale to the respective Bank one-half of such bonds now held by them, at a price of 55 and accrued interest to date of sale.

2. So long as the Banks are in funds they will purchase such bonds at the price stated above. The Banks reserve the right to reject any and all tenders in whole or in part.

3. The Banks have authorized Madison & Co., Inc., through its branch office at 139 South Fourth Street, Louisville, Ky. (telephone Jackson 7048), to receive tenders of such bonds and furnish forms for tender thereof. Tenders may be submitted by bondholders direct or through any bank or trust company or brokerage house dealing in such securities.

4. Preference in purchase will be given to bonds in the order of their tender.

5. All persons making tenders of bonds will be informed by the respective Bank of the acceptance or rejection of their tenders. Payment for bonds accepted will be made promptly and as directed by the owners, upon receipt of the bonds tendered. Coupon bonds must be accompanied by all unmatured coupons and registered bonds must bear proper endorsements.

6. Bonds should not be presented with tenders nor in advance of notification of acceptance of the tender.

ELECTIONS LACK FORCE TO SWAY MAJOR MARKETS

Voting on Repeal Is Only Important Factor.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 7.—Election results today did not hold for financial markets the significance of the vote last November, which swept President Roosevelt and his new deal into power. There is no great national issue to be decided, no possibility of a complete overturn of the policies directing the fortunes of the nation at Washington.

For its potential influence on the economic life of the nation the most important matter to be decided at the polls today was prohibition repeal, as six more states register their sentiment on that question. The conclusion had been accepted as foregone that today's voting would carry repeal over the top for the necessary thirty-six states to amend the constitution and wipe prohibition off the statute books.

Speculative markets, however, are passing through a period of uncertainty and inactivity much in the manner of their performance last November.

Renewal of Advance Expected.

A year ago Wall street held high hopes that election would dispel the confusion existing then and break the market stalemate. But it was not until after President Roosevelt actually took office and embarked on a recovery program radically different from that of his predecessors that stocks emerged from a prolonged stalemate to engage in a sustained swing upward.

The present phase of inactivity, dating from culmination of the spring and early summer advance and the ensuing correction last July, generally is regarded as another resting spell, preliminary to a resumption of the major uptrend of prices when the time is ripe.

The major enigma, which accounts for much of the current uncertainty, remains the question of monetary policy at Washington, when and where the dollar will be stabilized and how far Washington will travel along the path of inflation.

Election day last year was a turning point in the country's economic destinies. This year it merely gives Wall street opportunity for pause to wonder how far the turn is going toward state control of industry, of the dollar and of prices.

Stocks Progress in Year.

In the year that has elapsed since the last election the stock market has shown substantial recovery, even allowing for the recent setbacks. The scope of the advance has been wider than most persons realize.

To cite the price changes of only a few of the market leaders, American Can has risen 35 points, or more than 65 per cent; Standard Oil of New Jersey 11¾ points, or about 35 per cent; Eastman Kodak 19¾ points, or about 36 per cent; General Motors 14⅝ points, or more than 100 per cent; International Harvester 15⅞ points, or more than 75 per cent; Union Pacific 39¾ points, or almost 60 per cent; National Distillers 70¾ points, or more than 320 per cent; New York Central 9¼ points, or nearly 40 per cent; Bethlehem Steel 10½ points, or nearly 70 per cent; U. S. Industrial Alcohol 38⅞ points, or about 150 per cent; J. I. Case 27 points, or more than 75 per cent, and so on.

DONNE EXPECTS RUSH IN ILLINOIS FOR HOME LOANS

Confers on Plans with HOLC Chiefs.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—W. G. Donne of Chicago, state manager of the Home Owners' Loan corporation in Illinois, conferred with his superiors today on plans to care for the sharp increase of mortgage applications which he said he anticipated within the next few weeks.

"Recently enacted state legislation," he said, "which permits trust estates, building and loan organizations, closed banks, and insurance companies to accept bonds of our corporation will undoubtedly bring a flood of applications into our Chicago and downstate offices. I'm down here for the purpose of finding some plan whereby these can be handled properly and expeditiously."

Under the present setup in Illinois Donne said his organization was able to close only twenty mortgages a day in Chicago and about ten in the downstate area.

"We're receiving about 160 applications a day in Chicago and about 100 from downstate," he continued. "You can see from that how stacked up we're becoming. By the end of this month we hope to be able to close forty in Chicago and twenty downstate each day. We're going forward as rapidly as possible."

BUTTER AND EGG FUTURES RALLY AFTER EARLY DIP

Both markets opened easier with liquidation under way. Eggs started higher, however, when the storage figures proved favorable, with 28,000 cases reported out of three markets. New buyers appeared and shorts began covering. The market closed firm near the day's best prices.

Butter declined to low levels for the year on the December and January deliveries, but heavy buying of fresh butter by the government stimulated activity.

PERMANENCY!

YOU may prove to be the man who eventually will qualify to duplicate the earning power of T. N. L., who came into this business from a machine shop, and whose achievements in the past two years have inspired many other Chicago men to solve their income problems. Mr. L. made in excess of $780.00 in this business, right in this office, in Oct.—last month! He did it by mastering this business, and working at it as faithfully as he formerly worked at the bench. There were 33 other men in this office who kept Mr. L. good company. The 34 of them banqueted at the Edgewater Beach Marine dining room last Wed. night in celebration of their success. Their wives and a few guests were with them. There were 77 at the tables in the choicest section of that famous dining room. There will be more early next month. We have started out to pass our records of our all-time high in October. Not only that, but among the banqueters were a dozen men new in this business. The older successful men train them. Success breeds success. Our business throughout the world is more profitable for men is growing with leaps and bounds.

But remember, in deciding about coming for an interview Wednesday afternoon, we cannot inject success into your blood, and cause you to step right out and beat the world, Mr. L. had to learn. He developed his skill and knowledge of this work. But in doing so he has inspired and helped many others, and put them on the road to greater earnings. From the moment the stock market crashed in late Oct., 1929, this business started to climb. Our new product was just then claiming the attention of the public. Today it has the most marvelous good-will backing imaginable. Our men today make far more than they made in years past. Our product sells for less. Success piles up mountain-high. This is a successful business, because its product is ages ahead of the nearest competitor, and its men are making the most money in the entire specialty field.

Now, which would YOU prefer—to get into a business where you meet only chronic grumblers, stallers and dissemblers, or find a group of men who are on their toes, filled with more voltage than an electric power plant, driving good cars, taking care of their families splendidly and making good, day after day? Do you believe that in a bear market, or would you prefer to have a bull market lift you out of the failure-blues? Even old King Knut, powerful as he was, could not stem the oncoming flow-tide, even though his faithful followers believed he could—and you can't take a haywire job and make it 24 karat gold. But when you put your best in with the rest who are winning, you are going to join the banqueters in your first month in this business

One of the banqueters last Wed. was a man in his 66th year. He had qualified by making over $40.00 in a single day. You will meet many men in this office who are making good in so gencrous a fashion that if the clock and the calendar turned back over four years, and their old places were available at old incomes, they would not step from this work into that!

Wednesday at 2:00 p. m. sharp—NO OTHER TIME—we shall devote enough time to go into the details with you, if you are in earnest, are looking for full-time work, have good references and home connections. You must be in good health. This is not a weakling's job, nor is it for the down-and-outer. It costs you no money—is different from anything in any form, shape or manner. If you are accepted, you will undergo two days of intensive training, and step out into your field, of opportunities that with the right work should lead you along the same profit-trail that T. N. L. has trod so unerringly these past two years. There are no seasons, and no dangers of lay-offs. But if you are not a real worker you need not waste time talking it over. We cannot tolerate racket-hunters, but can place a few sincere men who will exchange real intelligent work for permanent and growing opportunity. Come to room 215 at 104 W. Wilson-av. Wed., Nov. 8, at 2:00 in the afternoon only. Mr. Goble and Mr. Wright will interview you and a few others.

We have a few openings for North Shore suburban residents who are invited to call at the same time.
